PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Fred H. Weber,
...Florist...

Florists' Review,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.25 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received-----	$513.25
Less 30% allowed senders-----	102.60
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.65

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florist's business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,

F. H. Weber

The Market.

Following probably the biggest Memorial day ever experienced in this city, business was somewhat dull, although there was a fair general movement of stock of all kinds. Plants for bedding were in good demand. With receptions, recitals and graduations from now until the end of the month the active store season will close. Withal the season has been a much better one than many expected when the conditions of general business are taken into consideration.

Various Notes.

The Rhode Island Horticultural Society has planned three shows for the remainder of this year and the premium lists were sent out this week. The dates are June 16, September 16 and 17 and November 11 and 12. All three exhibitions will be held in the ballroom of the Narragansett hotel. The exhibition committee includes three florists and two laymen, the former being Eugene A. Appleton, chairman, Joshua Vose and Cornelius Hartstra.

Fred Crombie, of Norwalk, Conn., succeeds Claude Hoyt as manager of the Franklin nurseries and greenhouses, Franklin.

Louis J. Reuter, of Westerly, was a business visitor in New York last week. Nathan Fishelson and his son, Max, of N. Fishelson & Son, Boston, were here last week as guests of relatives.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The market reports an unusually brisk Memorial day trade, so much so that it was almost like a little Easter. There was an abundance of most kinds of flowers and all brought fair prices. The beautiful weather during the last week has had a beneficial effect. Business is pretty good, with a large number of weddings on hand. Graduations and commencement exercises have begun and there will naturally be plenty of business for some time. Counter trade is not quite up to the standard and the May reports are considerably below those of the previous year. This is the case with about all the florists.

Of cut flowers there is a large supply, but so far no particular glut has been noticed. Probably peonies are the most plentiful and they are bringing from $2 to $3 per hundred. Carnations are holding out well and are much lower in price. The supply of roses is large and the quality of most varieties is good. The chief demand is for Hadley, Ophelia, Stanley, Ward and Sunburst. Excellent Beauties have been noticed and the demand is good. Sweet peas are numerous and are disposed of at low prices. Orchids are elegant, but do not move fast. Long-stemmed gladioli sell well. Baby gladioli are fine. Daisies are plentiful. Bachelor's buttons, calendulas and pansies sell readily. Valley, which has hung considerably of late, is moving faster now. Smilax is coming into the market, but in small quantities.

Various Notes.

Schuyler Arnold spent the week end at Auburn, N. Y.

George Cramer has just returned from a fishing trip at Conesus, N. Y., after catching over 200 pounds of pike!

A serious accident recently happened to William Hooper, head gardener for Mrs. Warham Whitney. It appears that he was standing at the top of a stepladder, reaching for some baskets, when he lost his balance and fell to the floor, hitting the flower bench and badly tearing his head. He was unconscious for a long time. Surgical aid was obtained and the cut was sewed up with eleven stitches. His tongue also was cut and his teeth were badly smashed. He is gaining nicely, however, and is able to get outdoors.

Chas. W. Curtis reports business as exceptionally good. He says his bedding stock has met with a much larger demand than in previous years and is nearly cleaned up. He is cutting some fine pink and lavender sweet peas.

J. B. Keller Sons report a highly satisfactory business. They have a number of good-sized weddings on hand.

Sunday, June 6, was rhododendron day at Highland park and thousands of people visited the immense groves of flowering shrubs. John Dunbar says there are over 250 species, most of which are in blossom.

The Market.

The weather for June has so far proved abnormally cool and dry. The low temperature has prevented any excessive output of roses and carnations, such as is usually seen at this season, but the demand has not been at all brisk and prices are not satisfactory. Business during the first half of June usually is not equal to the last half, when weddings, graduations, college commencements and other festivities create a stronger demand. Roses are moving much more sluggishly and clean up with difficulty. Whites only are in excellent demand. Reds sell more slowly than pinks. Yellows are coming of a poor color. Some nice summer roses, such as Kaiserin, Carnot and Taft, are arriving. Carnations continue of good quality for June, but $3 per hundred is now top price on select flowers. Sweet peas are in overwhelming supply and are harder to move than at any time this season. The quality is first-class.

There are abundant supplies of yellow marguerites, gladioli, lilies and cornflowers. Many of the last named now come from outdoors. No local peonies except forms of officinalis are yet available, but singles and some doubles will appear this week. Lily of the valley moves better, owing to numerous weddings. There are still good supplies of Cattleya Mossiae and gigas, with no strong demand.

Bedding plant trade, in spite of cold, dry weather, has been remarkably good.

Dinner to Thomas F. Galvin.

Thomas F. Galvin was given a complimentary dinner by a number of his many friends at the Copley Plaza hotel, June 2. The State suite was used for the occasion and over 100 gentlemen were present, including state and city officials, in addition to those connected with the florists' business. The occasion was to mark the fiftieth anniversary of Mr. Galvin's entrance into the trade. The tables were decorated with roses and asparagus. Patrick Welch, president of the S. A. F., had charge of the postprandial exercises and introduced Judge C. W. Hoitt, of Nashua, N. H., as toastmaster. The judge in this capacity is inimitable and his many witty sallies caused roars of merriment.

District Attorney J. C. Pelletier in a graceful and eloquent speech presented Mr. Galvin with a beautiful 2½-carat diamond ring on behalf of those present. The guest of the evening replied briefly but feelingly and was enthusiastically applauded. There were addresses during the evening by J. K. M. L. Farquhar on behalf of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society; J. H. Dillon, of the Boston Park Commission; Henry Penn, who spoke in behalf of the retailers; F. R. Pierson, Jackson Dawson, Joseph A. Conroy, W. W. Castle, W. J. Stewart, Joseph H. O'Neil, Wm. E. Doyle, and others.

Songs were furnished by Jackson Dawson, J. M. Galvin and T. H. Ratican. H. R. Comley, J. J. Cassidy and other retailers were present. Of the growers, Thomas Roland, Alex. Montgomery, John McFarland, James Wheeler, S. J. Goddard, W. H. Elliott, William Sim, M. A. Patten, A. Leuthy, Robert Cameron, H. H. Bartsch, J. T. Butterworth, N. F. Comley, Fred Esty and others were noted. Others connected with horticulture were: James

Various Notes.

The Budlong Rose Co. is strong on the J. L. Mock rose, which has done splendidly at Auburn. Richmond, Kilarney Queen, Russell, Irish Fireflame, and probably Hadley, will be discarded this season, but the new Francis Scott Key will be planted heavily.

J. T. Butterworth, of South Framingham, has a splendid lot of Miltoia vexillaria. In cattleyas he has some splendid C. Mossiae Reineckiana. Of the beautiful form, Mrs. Butterworth, he has several fine plants. The largest carries twenty-six flowers.

While the attendance from here at the S. A. F. convention will be small, several are already making plans to attend. T. J. Grey and wife hope to make the trip; so does Mrs. J. W. Rogers, the Summer street florist, and there are others.

The Fruit Hill Greenhouses, of Providence, R. I., are sending in large numbers of German iris. These are not good shippers and sell poorly here this season. They are good for local trade, but the flowers are ruined by being closely packed and banged about by expressmen.

J. R. Shields, of Woburn, and H. F. Calder, of Norwood, are large shippers of fine Spencer sweet peas.

F. J. Dolansky, of Lynn, has just received a large importation of hybrid cattleyas, brasso-cattleyas, etc., from England; also, 500 fine established phalaenopsis. He is still cutting Cattleya Mossiae in quantity, but C. gigas is nearly over. A house of C. Gaskelliana is just coming in.

tree, have a fine crop of carnations and roses. Of the latter, Killarney and White Killarney are the leaders.

F. J. Bornay, of Wellesley, is one of the newest carnation specialists whose flowers are handled at the Boston Co-operative Market.

June 5 the market was helped by carnation days at South Boston, Brockton and elsewhere. In South Boston 25,000 flowers were sold and almost as many in Brockton.

Penn gave the Florists' Telegraph Delivery system a good boost this week. One large window was arranged with railroad tracks with telegraph wires overhead, Boston and San Francisco being the two ends. The train, which was ever on the move, made several stops en route. This feature drew large crowds of spectators.

R. E. Wadsworth & Co., of Northboro, are cutting a splendid crop of Spencer peas. They still have good mignonette and a large carnation crop. A swollen ankle prevented W. R. Nicholson from attending the Galvin banquet June 2. The ankle is now convalescing nicely.

J. S. Philbrick, of Woburn, is cutting large quantities of bachelor's buttons and Kaiserin roses. He still picks pansies in quantity.

Owing to the continued cold weather it has been deemed advisable to postpone the meeting in Boston of the American Peony Society until June 19 and 20. There will be the regular peony exhibition June 12 and 13, however. If the weather continues cool June 19 and 20 will be good dates, but nothing is more uncertain than the weather.

E. J. Ahearn, of Wellesley, is a heavy shipper of yellow marguerites and ivy leaves. He always has splendid success with marguerites.

The committee in charge of the entertainment for the ladies' night of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club June 15 has a fine program arranged and the usual large attendance is assured.

Harry Brinkgreve, for some years with H. Waldecker, of Braintree, was stricken with blindness about two years ago. He has spent all his money in efforts to recover his sight, without avail, but is not discouraged. With the aid of friends he has secured funds to build a greenhouse, now nearly completed, and will plant it with chrysanthemums, to be followed by tomatoes.
Mr. Brinkgreve, now located at Hyde Park, feels confident that, with a little aid from a sighted person, he can earn sufficient to prevent his being a burden on anyone. At the last meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, of which he is a member, several members offered rooted cuttings of chrysanthemums and it was voted to help so deserving a member in every possible way.

Patrick Welch continues to do a fine business and he anticipates a good summer's trade at sea and mountain resorts, which are going to have a banner season in New England.

It is rare that we get frosts so destructive as in late May and early June this year. Not only are many early vegetables killed, but young growths on both deciduous trees and coniferous evergreens have been badly scorched.
At the Blue Hill Nurseries Mr. Heurlin says he lost all the young growths on many evergreens. W. N. C.

outdoor flowers, such as phloxes, coreopsis, condidum lilies, peonies, daisies and cornflowers, are sold, causing a glut in greenhouse-grown stock.

Roses are abundant and of good quality, especially the Killarneys, Milady, Hadley, Ward and Richmond. Beauties also are fine. The prices of any of these are low in all grades. The daily receipts of carnations have also been heavy and the best grades of these hardly bring more than 2 cents. All of the Enchantress varieties are of extra fine quality. The supply of sweet peas is much in excess of the demand. Easter lilies are fine and plentiful.

The retailers expect a lot of business for school closings, weddings and society functions until June 15, after which the summer dullness will set in.

Various Notes.

Henry J. Weber, founder of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., died at his home in Nursery, Mo., June 3. A brief sketch of his career will be found in this week's obituary column.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association held its monthly meeting June 2. This was the first meeting held in the afternoon. It took place at the home of Hugo Gross, in Kirkwood, and was largely attended. J. F. Ammann, with his committee from the Florists' Club, was present and addressed the growers, asking their cooperation in entertaining the American Carnation Society when it meets here in January. In response the members promised to do all in their power. After the meeting, refreshments were served. Mrs. Gross made a most hospitable hostess and the afternoon was spent in a most pleasant manner. The next meeting will be held July 7.

Joseph Gumz, bookkeeper for the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. for the last two years, has resigned his position and will leave, June 15, for Juneau, Alaska, where his uncle has a gold mine. Mr. Gumz has promised several of his friends in the trade to send them a gold nugget about Christmas time.

M. Schilz, representing the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, made his first visit to the trade here last week. The young man made his first call at The Review's local headquarters, where he was properly routed and sent on his way rejoicing.

Smith Wholesale Floral Co., says that the demand for their white wood easels has been large; 5,000 have been disposed of in the last few months. Chicago was included in their last shipment. "Billy" Vogel, head of this department, is working overtime.

Luther Armstrong, the oldest florist in Kirkwood, is supplying this market with a big cut of fine daisies. He was the first secretary of the Florists' Club, twenty-nine years ago, and will grace the twenty-ninth anniversary meeting this week with his presence.

Dr. A. S. Halstead, formerly prominent in florists' circles in Belleville, is now head of a big brass foundry in that city and has turned over his interest in the St. Clair Floral Co. to his son, Kester, who says their spring plant business was large this year.

The work of building and rebuilding greenhouses will soon begin in St. Louis county. Judging from reports, about 100,000 square feet of glass will be used this summer in Kirkwood, Clayton, Olivette and Crescent, Mo. This fact indicates that our growers experienced a profitable season.

A wind and rain storm, with considerable hail, on Friday night, June 4, caused a great deal of damage to trees, shrubbery and flower beds in the south end of the city. Little or no damage was done to the many greenhouses in that neighborhood.

Horace Lloyd, head of the Shackelford Nursery Co., says they will this week commence cutting heavily on candidum lilies and their new white phlox. The latter was in big demand last summer.

Alexander Siegel is making preparations for his annual summer fishing trip among the northern lakes and will leave in the last part of this month.
He says the two months' vacation always puts new life into him.

The Bourdet Floral Co. reports a busy plant season, with bedding stock nearly sold out. Mr. Bourdet, who is president of the St. Louis Florists' Club, says that now, when the busy

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., June 22 to 24, 1915.

THE meeting of the Iowa Seed Dealers' Association, usually held in June, has been postponed until autumn, the exact date not having been set. Henry Field, of Shenandoah, is president.

OLIVER S. WILSON, formerly with the L. L. Olds Seed Co., Madison, Wis., now is located at 3333 Grand avenue, south, Minneapolis, and expects to reëngage in the seed business in the near future.

It is reported that Zwann & DeWiljes, of Schmeeda, are this season making the first attempt in Holland to grow cucumbers for seed on a large scale. They are making the trial on nineteen acres.

IN sending a neatly printed card, bearing the California poppy in colors, inviting the trade to call, the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co. incloses a handsome pamphlet of local scenes, published by the Gilroy Chamber of Commerce.

CALIFORNIA experienced a wave of warm weather last week, which has forced sweet peas rapidly into bloom. After the heavy and unusual rains of May, sweet peas had taken on an unusual growth and the officials of the American Sweet Pea Society were forced to change the date of the San Francisco show again, from June 23 and 24 to June 11. President Lester L. Morse makes the announcement.

IN sending out his annual pansy list, Henry Mette, of Quedlinburg, says: "To prevent letters destined for me being destroyed on their sea voyage by the English navy during the time of the war, even if forwarded by steamers of neutral countries, I have sent you this letter through my Dutch agent, P. A. H. Mathiji, at Steenberg in Holland, and should be much obliged if you would send me your letters through this gentleman, using two envelopes, writing on the outer one the address of my agent and on the inner one my address."

It now seems assured that the Pacific Mail will discontinue operating its steamers to the Orient July 31, because of the LaFollette law that will require that seventy-five per cent of the crew of every ship flying the flag of the United States shall be able to understand an order given in English. This will give a practical monopoly to the three Japanese lines running to ports on the Pacific coast of the United States. These lines already had raised freight rates twenty-five and ten per cent since the European war began and can do as they please once the Pacific Mail boats are replaced

1915 IS EXPOSITION AND CONVENTION YEAR IN CALIFORNIA

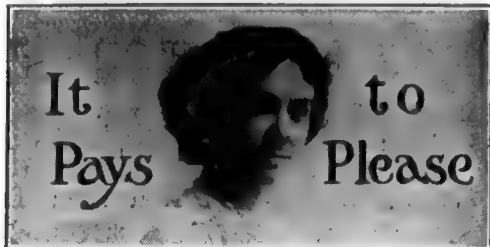

WE urge that you plan to visit California this season. Seedsmen who are interested in beans will find the seed bean farms at Carpinteria and Lompoc, where we produce large quantities of seed beans for seedsmen who are particular about quality, especially interesting during the summer season. We shall be glad to have you call on us at Carpinteria, the place where many of the leading varieties of Lima Beans were originated, several of them on our seed farms. We make a study of growing seed beans.

BURNETT BROS.
SEEDS :: BULBS :: PLANTS
98 Chambers St., NEW YORK CITY

ONE REASON

If there is one reason why we continue to flourish, it is to be found in the quality of Horseshoe Brand lily bulbs rather than in the amount of work we do. The large volume of lily business handled by us is important only in the respect that it implies a great confidence in our ability to supply bulbs that will afford a profit to the growers greater than other bulbs will produce. No fortuitous chain of circumstances ever could have given so much business into our control unless the quality of Horseshoe Brand bulbs was established beyond question.

Every florist either buys lilies or grows them—and he knows when they are good. Get Horseshoe Brand if you want the best bulbs—none better anywhere.

by Japanese. It will make the arrival of this season's lily bulb crop more uncertain than ever.

LOMPOC, Cal., has been dropped from the itinerary of the A. S. T. A. special train which leaves Chicago June 12.

THE Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, reports the greatest demand in several years for sweet corn for replanting purposes.

THE seed crops in the northern part of the southern peninsula of Michigan are greatly in need of rain. The radish seed crop in this section is not so badly damaged by frost as at first reported.

A SEVERE storm May 25, during which an inch of rain fell and the wind reached a velocity of forty-seven miles an hour, brought a loss of $600 to the Gurney Seed & Nursery Co., at Yankton, S. D. The roof of the new warehouse was torn off.

THE increased demand for cane and millet seed and for seed corn is thought by J. G. Peppard, of the J. G. Peppard Seed Co., Kansas City, Mo., to confirm the reports of serious damage to crops in bottom lands, particularly in Missouri. The call for 90-day seed corn is so urgent that the price may go over $2 if the demand continues.

LAWRENCE S. PAYN, representing Simon Louis Freres & Co., Bruyeres-le-Chatel, France, will take advantage of the Frisco special to the June convention of the American Seed Trade Association, where he will study the American conditions. Mrs. Payn has many friends in this country who will be delighted with the opportunity of meeting him again.

THE Bermuda onion crop of La Fourche parish, in Louisiana, this year is estimated by the truck crop specialist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture to be about 2,000 acres; this is the second most important onion section of the south. The Census Bureau reported 2,500 acres in 1909; thus the acreage this year is about twenty per cent less than in the census year.

plication in Fulton Superior court, April 23, through their attorneys, E. M. and G. F. Mitchell, for two charters of incorporation, one corporation to be known as the Hastings Seed Co., handling the retail end of the business, with an initial capital stock of $1,000 and the privilege of increasing to $500,000, and the other corporation to be known as the H. G. Hastings Co., handling the wholesale end of the business, with a capital stock of $250,000 and the privilege of increasing to $500,000.

It was stated in the application that the large growth of the business has made a partnership awkward to handle, whereas two corporations chartered as above will facilitate the business and enable the concern to serve the public to much better advantage.

ALL ABOARD FOR FRISCO!

It is believed by S. F. Leonard, chairman of the transportation committee for the approaching convention of the American Seed Trade Association, that many who have not yet been able to see their way clear to attending the convention will suffer a change of heart at the last moment and make a rush for the Frisco special, which leaves Chicago June 12 at 8:05 p. m., via the Santa Fe. SEEDSMAN WINS IRON CROSS.

Thinking that the many friends of John DeWit, who for years visited the grass seed trade in this country in the interests of Ernst & Von Spreckelsen, of Hamburg, Germany, would be interested in the good fortune of this well liked seedsman in his country's service, F. W. Barteldes, of the Barteldes Seed Co., Lawrence, Kan., forwarded to The Review a copy of his latest letter. It reads as follows:

"Dear Mr. Barteldes:

"I trust you have received the various letters that I wrote you from the front, although I never received any

DOWN TO BUSINESS

The last big rush day is over, and we should get busy with the next important matter. Snapdragon was King at Memorial to the grower who had the right one—who had our genuine Silver Pink SEEDLINGS. Armfuls of blooms was his reward, and he still has them coming for his heavy June trade. Nothing in sight to touch it. Note the following letters from the same parties:

Mr. G. S. Ramsburg.

Dear Sir:—Your Silver Pink Snapdragon Seedlings are wonderful! Magnificent!! Words are not sufficient to describe the 100x24-foot house we now have in bloom.

THE LACY CO.

Fruitvale, Cal., April 20, 1915.

Inclosed please find check for $10.00 (ten dollars), for which send us twelve trade pkts. of your Silver Pink Snap Seed and two pkts. of your best yellow. The silver Pink CAN'T BE BEAT; never saw anything like it. When the crop is off we will let you know how many spikes we have cut.

THE LACY CO.

If you want summer blooms buy plants. If for fall and winter sow seed at once.

Price of plants: Silver Pink Seedlings.....$1.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000
White Seedlings.....$4.00 per 100
Nelrose and Yellow (limited quantity) 5.00 per 100

Seed of our original Silver Pink, at $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Free cultural directions. All orders cash.

Remember, we grow snapdragons, and you can depend upon what we offer. Unless you get SEEDLING plants of my Silver Pink you will be disappointed.

For safety, order direct.

answers. I hope you and all your family are well.

"At present I am home in Hamburg on a two weeks' furlough. I am home for the first time since August 4, when I went to the front. In the battle of Tannenberg I was awarded the Iron Cross and since that time I have been promoted to lieutenant. I have successfully endured all hardships and sufferings.

"You certainly have heard of our glorious victories and you may be sure it will continue in this way even if new enemies should come in.

"With best wishes to yourself, your dear family, and all my friends in Lawrence, St. Joseph, Atchison, Kansas City and other places in the United States, I am,

CONTRACT BY CORRESPONDENCE.

In a lawsuit involving a contract to sell a quantity of seed potatoes, the Texas Court of Civil Appeals recently decided that when a series of letters passing between two persons shows a final agreement upon the terms of a sale, an ineffectual attempt afterwards to reduce the contract to a formal agreement will not affect the binding character of the transaction; the correspondence will be treated as the contract. And the court holds that, in such a case, the buyer's act in insisting on execution of a formal contract at variance with the terms of the agreement as expressed in the correspondence constitutes a breach of that agreement, entitling the seller to terminate the contract. (T. C. Bottom Produce Co. vs. Olsen, 175 Southwestern Reporter 126.)

BEET SEED CAN COME.

Great Britain has announced its willingness to permit exportation of sugar beet seed from Germany to the United States under certain conditions. The following was issued June 2 at the State Department, Washington:

"The British foreign office has announced that the British government would consider each case of the exportation of beet seed from Germany to the United States upon its merits and would be willing to give assurances of non-interference with particular shipments: (a) If it is shown that the seeds cannot be secured except in Germany; (b) if there is no question of exchange of commodities with Germany involved, and (c) if the seeds are shipped from a neutral port, as Rotterdam."

American beet sugar interests some time ago arranged for the shipment of enough seed for the American crop through Rotterdam.

CANNERS GO TO LOUISVILLE.

President George N. Numsen, of the National Canners' Association, has made formal announcement, as forecast in this column three weeks ago, that Louisville has been chosen for the next annual convention of the National Canners' Association and Allied Industries, the selection being on account of its central location, ample hotel facilities, and ability to provide a building large enough to accommodate the machinery and supplies show. Hotel headquarters will be at the Seelbach. The convention will, as usual, be held the second week in February.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Oakland, Cal.—H. Hayashi & Co. have obtained a permit for the erection of two greenhouses, at Krause street and Seventy-third avenue, at a cost of $250 each.

Colma, Cal.—Mrs. A. Schmidt was injured May 22 when she was driving into San Francisco with a load of flowers. An automobile hit the wagon and Mrs. Schmidt was knocked over the dashboard. Her horse ran away. Mrs. Schmidt was taken to the emergency hospital.

Santa Monica, Cal.—Albert V. Amet's new carnation, Amalya Schoene, is said to be the nearest to a blue variety yet produced. It is, however, more nearly purple in color. It is the result of a cross between a red variety and an unknown purple type. Its fragrance is said to be strong.

Sumner, Wash.—The Sumner Floral Co. is engaged in an attempt to restrain the county from shutting off its water supply. Formerly the company received its supply from the county poor farm under an agreement with the authorities. Now the county maintains that the poor farm needs the entire supply available, and the Sumner Floral Co. is threatened with drought.

SWEET PEA SHOW ADVANCED.

Three weeks ago it was announced that the long wet spell in California had necessitated the postponement of the American Sweet Pea Society's show from June 4 to June 23 and 24. Now Assistant Secretary Frank G. Cuthbertson is sending out notices stating that the unexpected warm weather has made it necessary to change the date of the show to June 11. On that date the exhibition will be held in the Palace of Horticulture, with all prizes and entries as originally planned.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

The heaviest and best part of the Memorial day business was done here on the Saturday previous to the day. People evidently thought there was a duty to the living as well as to the dead, and, after paying due respect to those gone before, they proceeded to enjoy the holiday by auto rides or the many other means of locomotion in this beautiful neighborhood. Unquestionably the business for Memorial day is increasing in this city, and while probably not one-half as much interest is taken as in cities farther east, yet the addition to trade is quite noticeable. As usual, an enormous lot of cheap stock was handled by street fakery and others around the cemetery gates, and a great deal more was sold this season by our oriental friends in their little shacks by the roadsides bordering the carnation fields. Altogether, the quantity of stock turned over was enormous.

Various Notes.

Geo. A. Young has purchased the interest of his partner, F. W. Nelson, in the Washington Flower Shop and will in future carry on the business himself, not in the present store, but on the opposite side of the street, at 515 West Washington. The business has been greatly improved since the partnership existed and all wish Mr. Young every success in the future.

Morris Goldenson always catches a lot of good funeral work for Memorial day and this year was no exception; the trade kept the staff busy until late in the day.

Immense quantities of gladioli and carnations were moved by Murata & Co., as well as a matter of 200 dozen busy all day. Large crowds visited the Montebello nursery, by invitation of Fred's Sunday ads, and the place is looking its best.

J. W. Wolters reports fine business for the holiday. The windows here are unusually attractive now with yellow callas.

The business of the Freeman-Lewis Co. was not influenced much by Memorial day, but trade has been good right along.

I tried to get into the store of the Los Angeles Floral Co. a little after midday, but business was evidently all over for the big day. Next day Fred Sperry said they sold out in fine shape early in the day, enabling him and his staff to take a little recreation and other things.

Wright's Flower Shop always does big business and this year practically all of it was done on Saturday and early on Sunday. Tom Wright is enthusiastic about his new ranch out Bakersfield way.

O. C. Saakes gets a lot of work for the Maccabees and did fine business for Memorial day.

Frank Lichtenberg has put on a fine new delivery car and already finds it a great help in his increasing business. Mrs. Lichtenberg, I was glad to hear, was much improved in health.

L. D. Waller, manager of the L. D. Waller Seed Co., sweet pea specialists of Guadalupe, was a visitor this week.

The H. N. Gage Co. disposed of most of its stock to the Broadway Florist. L. M. Morris, who was with the former company for many years, has also joined the staff of D. Stathatos. Mr. Gage is giving his entire attention to the nursery end of the business.

The monthly meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society, held June 2 in Kruckeberg's hall, was one of the best attended and most interesting in the history of the society. The speaker of the evening was Theodore Payne and he spoke on his favorite subject, "California Wild Flowers." Mrs. Miller, of La Crescenta, brought a large collection of flowers to illustrate Mr. Payne's remarks, and, with the flowers in front of him and handed around to his audience, Mr. Payne was at his best. He knows these native flowers thoroughly, knows where and when to find them, knows their peculiarities of growth and flowering and is accurate and well informed on their nomenclature. A most hearty vote of thanks was given him at the Easter lilies. A splendid showing of outdoor flowers was also made; the beautiful Iris Kämpferi was especially striking.

H. Reeve Darling took enough time off from admiring his first-born to come to the store and do an excellent holiday trade. The class of business done here was of a higher quality than usual at this time; in fact, some of the cheaper trade was turned down. Mr. Darling says that the business for the last four months has been the best they have ever had in the same season.

close of his lecture. Eight new members were elected and the business matters were attended to early, but it was late, nevertheless, when adjournment was called for. Frank Lewin, the well known rosarian of Hawthorne, will be the speaker at the July meeting and his subject will be "Roses." H. R. Richards.

Tony Tassano, manager for Tassano Bros., is a most affable gentleman, and especially so at this time, for he says business has been uncommonly good in all lines. Plumosus seed sold excellently; gladioli now are an important factor in the cut flower supply and asters are expected soon.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The last week was a good one in practically all branches of the trade. The Memorial day season closed considerably ahead of last year, and since then the graduation ceremonies at schools in San Francisco and vicinity have given rise to a large amount of business, which has been well distributed. Moreover, there have been some notably large decorations for exposition festivities, and a few important weddings and funerals, making this one of the best weeks of the season. It is predicted that the next two months will be quiet, as the shipping season for distant points is all over and summer is normally a poor season locally. Nevertheless, the exposition and the great number of meetings and conventions should do much to offset the normal vacation dullness.

A hot, dry north wind in the last twenty-four hours is damaging outdoor stock, to what extent is not yet known. Flowers of many seasonable varieties are plentiful, but fancy stock still brings satisfactory prices. Summer weather has brought in a flood of sweet peas, of the best quality yet seen. Carnations also are plentiful again. Small white Bride gladioli are offered much more freely and a few fine Blushing Bride are appearing, while the large pink America are not yet plentiful and few King have been seen. The late peony crop has not yet appeared and present offerings are scant and poor. A little of the first cutting of dahlias is coming in, but the quality is not attractive. Stocks, marguerites, etc., are more plentiful than ever and cornflowers are coming in freely. There is plenty of valley, nothing extra in quality. Roses are plentiful and fine, but the wind is hurting the outdoor varieties. There has been an extra demand for long Beauties. Russell and Hadley are both moving well, and a good cut of Ophelia is coming in. Mrs. Sawyer also finds ready sale. Sunburst is more plentiful. Orchids and gardenias are plentiful and the latter are exceptionally fine; the call for both shows little variation.

Various Notes.

Julius Eppstein, of the Art Floral Co., announces that he is making great preparations in connection with the visit of eastern florists here for the convention of the S. A. F., of which he is a member. He has secured an extra automobile, in which he hopes to take numerous parties of the visitors for rides around the city, and he is sending out invitations to the visitors to make their headquarters and receive their mail at his store. Mr. Eppstein reports an extremely busy week with the school graduations and special work, which kept the force busy far into the night on several occasions. This house is getting in some Peruvian lilies, striking long-stemmed yellow flowers.

The J. B. Boland shop had a large number of elaborate pieces for the Haller funeral last week.

A. O. Stein used an exceptionally large number of fine long-stemmed Beauty roses at one of his exposition decorations last week.

Podesta & Baldocchi are displaying some striking Japanese irises.

Mr. Picetti, managing Charles Navlet's branch nursery store at the Emporium, says they are cleaning up the last of the field-grown roses, and in another week will be selling only potted roses. An effort has been made to keep some of the field stock as late as possible, to meet a large demand. The demand has been especially strong, he says, for Aaron Ward and Lyon, and the crop, which was largely increased this season, will be still larger next year. He says Thursday of last week, when the hot norther kept everybody at the ice cream stands, was the first dull day in a long time.

The Lacy sisters, at 3141 Fifty-fifth avenue, Oakland, are making a specialty of snapdragons under glass and are sending in some pretty pink stock, which finds fair sale at a number of shops around town. This is said to be about the only snapdragon worth mentioning that is grown in this vicinity.

The E. W. McLellan Co. now has a good and rapidly increasing cut of Ophelia roses. As this variety has become exceedingly popular and the supply so far has been below general market requirements, a good business is expected.

Valmeni & Lavazollo, Haight street florists, have been succeeded by Picetti & Lavazollo.

J. A. Wood, of Woodland, Cal., who has been combining a flower shop and grain-buying business, has moved into new quarters.

A letter has been received by the sister of M. Dechoquet, formerly landscape gardener on the Antoine Borel estate, near San Mateo, Cal., stating that he is recovering from a wound in a Paris hospital and has been promoted to the rank of corporal in the French army.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee reports a highly satisfactory shipping season closing with Memorial day, having shipped considerable quantities of all seasonable stock to distant points. The carnation shipments gave especially satisfactory results, as the flowers were above the average and a number of the buyers have expressed themselves as well pleased. Mrs. Darbee finds retail business good at present, and says the presence of many eastern people in the city seems to give new life to the trade.

S. H. G.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.—Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

outdoor-grown stock. Wholesale orders from out of town were unusually large. Local retail business which could be definitely traced to Memorial day is considered to have been less than that of last year by perhaps ten per cent. This decrease is due to the unusually large number of varieties of house-grown flowers in bloom. The month of May is generally conceded to have been more satisfactory to florists than any month since the business depression began.

The variety of greenhouse blooms offered remains about the same as last week, with the addition of gladioli, and some varieties of campanulas have been added to the list of outside-grown stock. Retail prices on carnations and roses have not been reduced. Many visitors will stay until after the rose festival next week, and their presence stimulates the florists' business. Some large decorations and a good demand for funeral work have kept the surplus flowers well cleaned up.

Various Notes.

The June meeting of the Portland Floral Society will be held Tuesday evening, June 15, at Masonic Temple. The annual election of officers will be held.

Martin Winch, who has a range of glass near Gresham, has been adjudged insane and a guardian has been appointed. His greenhouses are operated by Theo. Weddell under lease, and it is not likely that any change will be necessary.

Niklas & Son are showing some pretty candytuft in a variety of colors. It was grown at Clackamas.

Clarke Bros. have had a large basket of gladioli in their window display.

The Swiss Floral Co., of which J. G. Bacher and Chas. Welty are managers, has a good-sized establishment at East Seventh and Hassalo streets. They have a range of glass, and buildings to house their equipment for landscape work. They are quite successful in the propagation of new varieties, especially of petunias. They have a new variety of salvia, which they hope will prove popular. Among unusual plants seen there are pink poinsettias, stanhopea orchids, Gloire de Chatelaine begonias and the red form, Helvetia, and night-blooming cereus in full bud. The plant is located in a thickly populated district, and the company finds ready sale for all the stock it can produce.

J. J. Shieur, of Butlerville, will build a greenhouse for winter cucumbers.

Andrew Walden plans to build an addition, 22x70, to the range he recently bought from J. Gould.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, H. B. Chase, Chase, Ala.; Vice-president, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Fortieth annual meeting, Detroit, Mich., June 23 to 25, 1915.

THIS week's obituary column contains a report of the death of Henry J. Weber, founder of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., of Nursery and St. Louis, Mo.

THE report of the petition in bankruptcy of Thomas Cash, of San Diego, Cal., will be found in this week's issue of The Review under the head of Business Embarrassments.

O. A. MILLER, formerly at Calgary, Alberta, has moved to Bismarck, N. D., to look after the interests of the Northwest Nursery Co., of Valley City, N. D., in that section of the state.

DESPITE the precautionary measures taken, the stock at the nurseries of the Storrs & Harrison Co., at Painesville, O., was badly hit by the frost of May 27. Strawberry plants and perennials were chiefly affected.

THE German army did not penetrate far enough into France to affect the fruit tree seedling business in the Ussy and Angers districts, but the entrance of Italy into the general conflict may hinder the gathering of the cherry, plum and pear seeds that the French nurserymen obtain from the mountains of that country.

THE nursery business started by William Hulscher, on Front street, Scotch Plains, N. J., near Plainfield, a year ago was organized early this spring as the Plainfield Nursery Co. Mr. Hulscher's partner is William DeBree, of East Rutherford, N. J., who was formerly with Bobbink & Atkins, of Rutherford. A large quantity of nursery stock of all kinds was started early in the spring and is now in fine condition. The location of the new nursery is convenient to a number of good-sized cities and only about twenty miles from New York. The land lies well, and the proprietors look for a big business as soon as their new stock has had opportunity to develop properly.

A. A. N. PROGRAM.

Besides making the program of the Detroit convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, June 23 to 25, entertaining and instructive, the entertainment committee has arranged it well. The distinctively pleasure features are distributed so that one occurs on the afternoon of each day, providing relaxation after the morning's serious consideration of the problems of the trade and preparing thus for equally earnest deliberation the next forenoon. The first morning is given over to officers' addresses and committee reports; the other two mornings are filled by addresses on a number of timely matters. The parks of Detroit, the Ford Motor Co. works and a steamboat ride on the Detroit river and Lake St. Clair are planned for the three afternoons in the order named. The American Nurserymen's Protective Association and the American Retail Nurserymen's Protective Association will meet on the evenings of June 23 and 24 respectively.

In addition to the program, the many points of interest about Detroit should

SPRING PLANTS

FIGUS UTILIS

A species that came to us through the Botanical Gardens at Washington, D. C., which promises to be a valuable addition as a decorative house plant. The leaves are thick and leathery and are from 18 inches to 24 inches long, one-half as wide, of a rich, holly-green color, with midrib and veins of an ivory white, which stand out prominently. 6- inch pots, 24 inches tall.....$2 each

BROKEN BARK ON MAPLE TREES.

I am sending you a leaf from my maple tree and should like to have you tell me what is wrong with it. The bark has broken open on the tree, and the water runs out. The bark seems to be quite soft. Nearly all of the leaves are spotted like the one enclosed. Is there a remedy for this?

J. R.—Ohio.

The trouble with the leaves is nothing to worry about. It is a species of leaf-gall not at all uncommon. Maples frequently bleed in winter and early spring from cuts, bruises or cracks. Perhaps your trees may need an iron bolt to hold the limbs together. They sometimes crack at the crotch, and when this occurs they not only bleed, but water gets in and this starts decay in the stem. Such cracks should be well coated with coal tar to keep the water out. Also, dress any cuts or bruises with the same material. Do not worry about the slight leaf affection.

J. D. THOMPSON CARNATION CO., JOLIET, ILL.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Rain every day for the last two weeks compelled the florists of this vicinity to get their outside work done between showers. There was much inconvenience and disappointment to customers who were anxious to get their vases, flower boxes and beds planted before Memorial day, which was made impossible by the weather conditions. A good business, both in cut flowers and bedding plants, is reported by all our local florists, practically all the bedding plants being sold out. Peonies came in well for Memorial day, and were in the greatest demand. Carnations were next in popularity and, for the time of year, were in good shape as to size and color, the weather conditions being favorable. The writer has lived in Dayton for the last twelve years and has visited the cemeteries every Memorial day; this year the flowers seemed more beautiful than ever before, extending as far as the eye could reach, with the rich, dark green grass for a background. It was a sight seldom seen and never to be forgotten.

Various Notes.

Mrs. B. Haschke, of the College Park Greenhouses, has a new Pierce-Arrow delivery car.

The Miami Floral Co. reports having secured the contract for all flowers and bouquets being used in the high schools this month for commencement exercises. Competitive bids were made for this contract. Red carnations and smilax are used. The cost is about $400.

The Heiss Co. has the contract for the parks and public grounds this year.

Charles Rhoads, Brookville, O., reports that he intends to build a new greenhouse, 25x100, to be devoted to pot plants and vegetables.

D. Rusconi and his son, of Cincinnati, visited the trade last week.

"Easter Greeting" Specialist

GARRETTSVILLE, OHIO

THE WONDERFUL PELARGONIUM "EASTER GREETING"

THIS PLANT was in a 2 $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch pot last June, shifted into 4-inch, and into 5-inch in November. We are now offering 75 "Easter Greeting" and 25 Lucy Becker, the pink sport, fine 2 $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch, ready for shift, for \$10.00. Besides furnishing some nice cuttings that will more than pay original cost, they will make most desirable and valuable plants for shifting into 5's and 6's for 1916 sales, that should bring \$1.00 to \$1.50 in any market.

This is certainly your opportunity. "Easter Greeting" has won first place as a pot plant. It has made good, and will for you. Please consider this offer as an investment compared to any other plant today. Our guarantee is ironclad—no risk.

Fine 3-inch, $12.00 per 100

We still have a complete line of Soft Wooded Plants and offer Ageratum, Alyssum, Achyranthus, Centaureas, Celosias, Cleome, Coleus, Marguerites, Fuchsias, German Ivy, Lantanas, Lobelias, Periwinkles, Pyrethrum, Verbenas, Snapdragons, Smilax, at $2.00 per hundred.

Geraniums, 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch, \$2.50; 3-inch, \$5.00; 4-inch, \$8.00; red, white, pink and salmon.

Variegated and Green Vincas, 2-inch, at $2.50; 3-inch, $6.00; 4-inch, at $8.00, $10.00 to $12.50; 5-inch, $20.00.

15,000 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch Mums, White, Yellow and Pink, at \$2.50 to \$3.50 per hundred.

10,000 rooted cuttings of Mums at $1.50 to $2.50.

5000 Asters, out of pots, at $2.50 per hundred; out of flats, $1.50 per 100.

500 4-inch Ricinus, at $6.00 per hundred.

Splendid Moonvines, 3 and 4-inch, at 8c and 10c. Ferns, Boston, Whitman, Amerpohlii, Scottii, Roosevelt, Plumosus, Sprengerii.

Stock Poinsettias, in 2 $\frac{1}{2}$, 3, 4 and 5-inch. Special prices on all above on large lots.

For the Store Man. We have all kinds of Ferns, Boston, Whitman, Scottii, Amerpohlii, Plumosus, Sprengerii, Sprengerii Baskets, Fancy Leaved Caladiums, Gloxinias, Tuberous Begonias and other varieties of blooming Begonias, etc. Write us your wants.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The Market.

Memorial day business was up to standard. Although the holiday was of three days' duration, Saturday proved to be the one big day. Everyone cleaned up fairly well, and white carnations were short of the demand. Iris and other outside flowers were plentiful and relieved matters somewhat. Roses and sweet peas found a ready market, but, as usual, carnations had the first call.

On account of the inclement weather, the outside work was put off until the last moment, and consequently Monday morning found several florists at the cemeteries finishing up in a hurry. The usual heavy demand was made on the local wholesale plant market for geraniums and by Memorial day it was impossible to get any stock in bloom.

There is now plenty of stock on the market, and it is moving fairly well. Carnations are exceptionally good for this time of the year. Outdoor lilies and plenty of local peonies have made their appearance.

Various Notes.

Eli Cross is still rushed with outside work. He is preparing to occupy his new store, in the City Bank building, about June 15.

Henry Smith reports a nice clean-up on his stock of shipping geraniums. Miss Robinson, of Henry Smith's force, cannot talk above a whisper because of a bad cold.

Alfred Hannah had a pretty display in his window last week in honor of the visiting Elks.

Eli Cross featured a large picture of all the local Elks in his window, and it drew a steady crowd during the convention.

Several out-of-town florists attended the big state Elks' convention. Among the number were J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago; L. Wasserman, of Muskegon; D. Vincent and Harvey Kidder, of Ionia; Stephen Green, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, and Mr. Anderson, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago.

Arthur F. Crabb has ordered a large refrigerator of the McCray Refrigerator Co. for his new store. A. F. C.

NEW NEPHROLEPIS FERN—JOHN WANAMAKER

We will introduce the above new fern on August 1st, 1915. In presenting this fern to the trade, we feel confident that it will make a place for itself.

The John Wanamaker fern is a wonderful advance over all plain or wavy frond varieties. The side pinnae of the fronds are very fully undulated, giving the plants a very wavy appearance. It will make as many fronds as Teddy, Jr., plants in 4-inch pots having over sixty fronds. It is a beautifully formed plant, full and compact.

Orders will be filled strictly in rotation.

The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

THE COAL MARKET.

A leading coal journal clearly summarizes the news of the market in this one sentence: "The east is helped by export business, but the west awaits industrial revival." The same authority more fully explains the situation thus: "It is true beyond a peradventure that export business has helped the eastern coal trade, for there is an improved foreign demand and vessels also are more plentiful. But in the west, trade is even below normal for this time of year. If smokeless coal is off the market, meaning that there is no free coal, the market is strong. The minute any free coal strikes Chicago the market is soft. A few contracts are being closed, but not many, and such as are, are going on the contract price of $1.25 for the summer and $1.40 for the winter months on mine-run. The lump and egg situation is somewhat stronger, largely due to the fact that the operators are producing no fine coal for coke ovens and consequently are not making the prepared sizes. Retailers have been buying really more than the operators are producing and thus that market is strong at the June circular."

PIPE AND OTHER MATERIALS.

I am contemplating the construction of a greenhouse and should like to know which is considered the better kind of pipe, cast-iron or wrought-iron, especially with reference to the circulation. Or, why not use spiral, galvanized, flanged pipe, as it would radiate heat much more quickly? I wish to know, also, whether it would be practical to run the return pipe just below the seed bed, insulating it in farm drain tile, say ten or twelve inches below the surface. The winter temperature here seldom drops lower than 10 degrees above zero. How would you estimate the needed capacity of a boiler in this climate, for a house of about 7,500 square feet of glass? Should the base of the side walls be of concrete or of regular wood siding, with an insulating material between? I expect to grow winter vegetables.

J. C. W.—Ark.

Under most conditions wrought-iron pipe will be found most satisfactory for heating greenhouses. The flanged, spiral, galvanized pipe is less durable than either wrought or cast-iron pipe and requires more care in installing it; be-

Your No. 13 Boiler is carrying 25,000 sq. ft. of glass, and I can keep it at 60° in the coldest weather without any trouble. I have three cast iron boilers also, heating a range of 25,000 sq. ft. of glass, but the No. 13 Kroeschell Boiler only takes half the coal and half the work to get the same results.

Kroeschell Boiler Better Than Tubular Boilers or Cast Iron Boilers

Washington Court House, Ohio. Have used upright boiler, tubular boiler and cast iron boiler. The Kroeschell Boiler heats up better and easier than any other boiler we have ever had anything to do with. If we ever buy another, it will certainly be a Kroeschell.

Very truly yours,
POOLE & PURLLANT.Cast Iron Cannot Be Compared with Kroeschell

We bought a No. 2 Boiler in 1904. It takes care of 5000 sq. ft. of glass, and we could add 2000 more. We are very well satisfied. We used a cast iron boiler before we had yours. It cannot be compared with the Kroeschell boiler. Your boiler has certainly a great capacity for heating water.

HALL & ROBINSON,
Montreal, Canada.Cast Iron Boilers Break Down

Have fired greenhouse boilers since 1885, both steam and hot water. Yours suits me the best. I have two of your boilers. At one time I had two cast iron boilers working together, and during a blizzard the rear section of one boiler gave out and the front section of the other sprung a crack a couple of months later. No more cast iron boilers for me. I came very close to freezing out in both instances.

G. M. THOST, De Soto, Mo.

Cast Iron Boiler Cracked in Two Years

We have a No. 4 Kroeschell Boiler. It takes care of 7000 sq. ft. of glass; it would take care of twice that amount.

I first had a new cast iron boiler which lasted two years, when it cracked to pieces. The second was a second-hand boiler.

I consider your boiler the best paying investment I ever made.

You can refer anyone to us.
MARYSVILLE FLORAL CO.,
Marysville, Ohio.Cast Iron Boilers Cause Freeze-out—Kroeschell Boilers No Worry

I bought a No. 2 boiler in 1902. Takes care of 7000 sq. ft. of glass—would take care of 2000 more. I have had a cast iron boiler, but it broke down twice in four years, always in the coldest weather. It broke down Dec. 29, 1904, and I lost all my stock in consequence. I have now two No. 2 and one No. 6 Kroeschell boilers and do not worry about their breaking down.

GRANT NEWPORT,
Cedar Rapids, Ia.Kroeschell Versus Cast Iron

The No. 7 Boiler I bought from you is heating 14,000 sq. ft. of glass; I think it can take care of 16,000 ft. I do not have any trouble to keep up temperature of 50° in the coldest weather. I fire only once after 12 o'clock midnight. The boiler has given perfect satisfaction. I have four cast iron boilers—like the Kroeschell best of all. If anyone wishes to inquire about your boiler, let them write me, for I think your boilers are good ones.

CHARLES SCHULTZ,
Menominee, Mich.The Kroeschell Does Our Work Easier Than Cast Iron Boilers and Saves 20 to 25% Fuel

The No. 4 boiler is heating 10,000 sq. ft. of glass—it would take care of 18,000 sq. ft. easy. Have no trouble to keep temperatures of 50 and 60 degrees in coldest weather. The boiler has given perfect satisfaction. We had two cast iron boilers, one rated for 1200 ft. of pipe and one rated for 1500 ft. These boilers never did the work at their best and when the greenhouses were new. According to our experience with yours, we will save 20 to 25 per cent of fuel.

This is the unusual service the Morehead System is performing every day for Mr. Geo. A. Kuhl, an up-to-date florist of Pekin, Ill. Here's his letter—read it:

"Gentlemen: I can testify to the fact that we think your trap a wonderful good thing, because it kept all pipes in our twenty-three greenhouses clear, and good, healthy steam in them at all times, where the original pump heretofore had not done anything like it. We will be glad, at any time, to give you more information in regard to the same."

of the service satisfaction which is being realized by users of the "Morehead" System everywhere. Not only will the "Morehead" System keep your steam lines absolutely clear of accumulated condensation, but it will save a large per cent of your fuel.

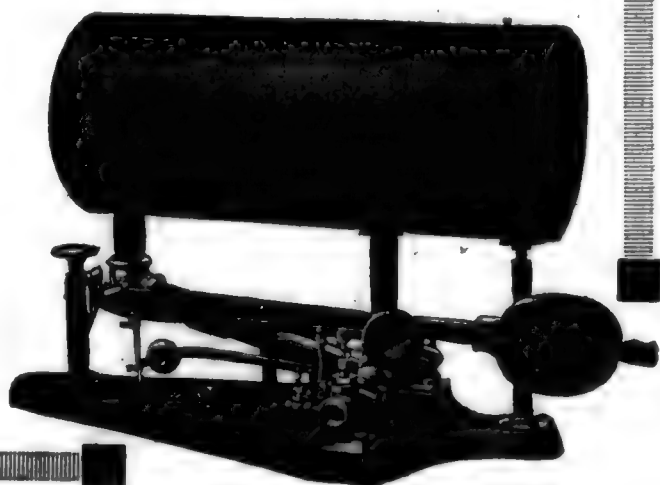

This is accomplished by delivering the condensation directly back to the boiler HOT.

The details of this economy measure will be interesting to you, as a matter of course.

sides, it will radiate heat but little if any better.

The dimensions of the proposed houses are not given, but, unless they are to be more than 250 feet in length, 2½-inch pipe is desirable for the flows and 2-inch for the returns. side temperature is 10 degrees above zero, a heater rated for 1,750 square feet of radiation should be used, and under the conditions mentioned I would use one square foot of radiation for four square feet of glass.

Concrete blocks containing air spaces answer well for the walls, especially if the upper portion is to be of glass. Otherwise I would use iron posts, with double boarding and a double layer of building paper. Especially in the southern states, I would not use any other insulation, since the walls will decay much more quickly if there is a dead air space.

REBUILDING AND REPIPING.

I have some old greenhouses, covering a space 48x60 and running east and west. I intend to pull these down and erect two houses on the same ground. I wish to add about thirty feet to the west end and it will be necessary, therefore, to move the boiler shed thirty feet back. If the houses at present are not heated in the best way, perhaps I ought to change the system of piping, as I shall have to get more pipe and might as well make any desirable alterations.

The pipes now in use are 4-inch soil pipes, for hot water. There are six benches, with one 4-inch flow and one 4-inch return under each bench. The lean-to at the south side is piped with one 2-inch flow on the wall and one 2-inch return; these, also, are soil pipes. There is no wall between the old houses; neither will there be any separation between the two new houses. I grow carnations, vegetables and bedding plants. L. L. F.—Ill.

If the present system of piping is in good condition and gives satisfactory results, I would not advise changing it, since, if any change is made along the lines I would suggest, it would require throwing out most of the present system and junking it.

If the two proposed houses are to be repiped, I would run three 2½-inch flow pipes to the farther end of each of the houses and connect them with eight 2-inch returns. Place one flow on each side wall and the other flow two or three feet below the ridge. Arrange to carry three of the returns on the outer wall of each house and distribute three under the benches. The other two returns should be placed on the inner wall of each house.

The Market.

The present season's business has well exceeded that of previous years. Memorial day orders came in heavily. Cemetery planting trade was particularly good.

Various Notes.

Wedding work has kept the force at the Carl Hagenberger Co. on the jump, according to J. A. Paquette. Cemetery work for Memorial day surpassed all previous years.

A large cemetery contract for Cleveland patrons, in addition to many local orders for similar work, kept E. Helie exceedingly busy. Cut flower trade is good, too.

Wilson's Flower Shop has had good business in both cut flowers and potted plants. Telephone orders form a large part of this concern's trade.

Werner Bros. had their hands full with Memorial day orders.

LANCASTER, PA.

The event of last week was the peony show at the store of B. F. Barr & Co. The store was crowded throughout the show, and judging by the interest shown by the public in jotting down the names of varieties, the sale of roots next fall will be larger than ever. Certainly, P. festiva maxima is the most wonderful white. M. Jules Elie, silvery pink, is a gem. Baron Rothschild, Duchesse de Nemours, Alexander Dumas and Mme. Calot all were shown in fine form. Many other varieties were shown. Rodney M. Eshleman was in charge of the exhibition. At the Barr nurseries, more than 20,000 peonies are in bloom, making one of the most important collections in Pennsylvania.

The peony plantings at Long park are attracting many visitors, and it is not unusual to see many automobiles stopping to inspect the varieties. The cool, damp weather of the last few weeks has been most favorable for the development of the blooms.

Splendid outdoor sweet peas are being cut by the many growers who sow seeds in the fall.

The Rosery showed some excellent marguerites, blue cornflowers, calendulas and sweet peas last week.

George Goldbach has had a remarkable showing of Spanish iris.

H. D. Rohrer has been cutting large quantities of good America gladioli.

The Market.

Stock of nearly every description was scarce on this market Saturday, June 5, but June 7 the supply was heavier than the demand. This was especially noticeable in Beauties, medium-priced roses, sweet peas, particularly white; carnations, lilies and peonies.

Various Notes.

E. A. Fetters is going ahead with his new store on Woodward avenue and hopes to have it ready for occupancy this fall.

It was rumored June 3 that John Dinser had died suddenly, but although Mr. Dinser was quite ill June 2, he was about town Thursday and feels as spry as ever. Mr. Dinser had a good season and is going in heavily for bulbs and azaleas again next year.

G. H. Taepke, who has been sick all winter, is still confined to his bed. He has been suffering with an attack of pneumonia for several weeks and today was reported quite low.

Albert J. Stahelin, who was confined to his bed for nearly three weeks, is again able to be out, but only for short periods at a time. He completed the planting of his house of roses June 5. In all, the house contains 18,000 plants, including such varieties as Ophelia, Aaron Ward, Cecile Brunner, Richmond and Bon Silene.

Albert Pochelon was out in the country June 6 with his family, looking over their summer cottage. As soon as school closes, Mr. Pochelon will move into his summer place, where he will make his home until fall. He is a great lover of the outdoors and his place is situated in a pretty spot surrounded by hills and forests, about ten miles from the city.

B. Schroeter has his outdoor planting nearly finished. This is no small task, as he does considerable of this work about town and in the cemeteries.

The Market.

The fact that Memorial day was celebrated on two days this year greatly helped the florists. Business was exceedingly good. Bouquets sold well. Peonies were just starting to bloom, and were in fine condition. Artificial wreaths were in the usual demand, and two of the local florists sold out completely. Lilacs were still in bloom, although not plentiful. There were some fine roses on the market.

Various Notes.

H. F. A. Lange sold his entire stock Memorial day. His artificial wreaths were gone before Sunday noon. His greenhouses looked pretty bare after the holiday. He has planted his summer rose houses with Mock, Taft, My Maryland and Double White Killarney. Mr. Lange has had several large weddings, and reports more in sight.

Harry Randall's business for Memorial day was large. He sold all of his wreaths, and cleaned up his supply of flowers in good shape.

H. F. Littlefield did a good business, and cleaned up fairly well. Mr. Littlefield did not open a branch store as he did at Easter.

The four or five little shops that opened up just for the holiday business seemed to do a fair trade. They made up for the loss they suffered at Easter.

The Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, had a fine crop of roses for Memorial day, and Mr. Montgomery said that it was one of the best Memorial days he has had. At this range there are 300,000 feet of glass devoted to roses.

"A SOFT ANSWER."

There is nothing to be gained by allowing yourself to become aroused by anything that a man with a kick may write you. There are a thousand things which might have put him in a bad humor, all of which you know nothing at all about.

It is a good plan in adjusting any kind of complaint, if it is impossible to give a man an immediate answer, to write him that his complaint is being investigated and he will then understand that the matter has not been neglected.

Possibly the best way to get the right attitude in answering a customer's complaint, or his attitude towards an unpaid account, is to consider how you would handle this customer if he came into your office. Certainly you would not pick a quarrel with him, you would not let yourself be other than courteous and polite throughout his call; you would take him all through the house if necessary just to demonstrate how desirous the firm was to give him a square deal.

It must be borne in mind, also, that a great many merchants, especially those who are doing a small business, do not as a rule have the proper knowledge or acquaintance with business customs and are therefore likely to say and do things that you as experienced business men would not countenance in your own establishment. To bear this in mind will frequently help in adjusting the customer's complaint with the greatest degree of satisfaction to all concerned.—Credit Men's Bulletin.

IN UNION THERE IS STRENGTH.

[Extracts from the paper of Prof. A. C. Beal, of Ithaca, N. Y., on "State Organization," read before the Texas State Florists' Association.]

It may be asked, why have a state organization? What can a state organization do? In the first place, a state organization of florists should cooperate with all movements for horticultural progress, with all movements for civic progress in the line of park development, school gardening, the improvement of school and private grounds, etc. It should promote the passage of all laws favorable to the above ends and beneficial to the business. It should prevent the passage of any law injurious to the business, whether directly or indirectly harmful to it. That an organization representing all the florists can be more effective tive than scattered individuals, does not require any argument.

The Illinois State Florists' Association was instrumental in securing a splendid equipment for the state agricultural college for teaching and experimental work in floriculture. The New York florists have been working along the same lines. The Illinois organization revolutionized the floral exhibits at the state fair. To begin with, they secured an increase of premiums from $1,000 to $2,500, and the appointment of a practical florist as superintendent. The New York florists have been equally successful, and are cooperating with fruit and vegetable growers in securing a larger and better horticultural building. The holding of exhibits at the state fairs is a means of educating the public which cannot be reached by the city flower shows.

Meetings.

The New York florists follow the custom of semiannual gatherings, at the state fair in September and during farmers' week at the state agricultural college. The Illinois Association, as better suited to its plan of organization, holds annual meetings and flower shows in the larger cities of the state. The local clubs finance the shows by the sale of space to the trade exhibitors of florists' supplies and for signs, etc. These shows, being primarily for the education of the public and the stimulation of trade, are free to visitors. In fact, everything is done by the local florists to get the people out. I should strongly advise this feature in connection with state florists' meetings, which, of course, should be held at a favorable time, when florists can attend and when the maximum advertising results can be had.

The greatest reason for state organization is the social one. The meeting of brother florists in the exhibition hall and around the banquet table promotes mutual good fellowship.

In conclusion, I would say that a state organization can be a powerful factor in stimulating the ornamentation of public and private grounds, in educating the public in the use of flowers by holding exhibitions, in promoting good fellowship among florists generally, in elevating the dignity of the business through association with one another, and above all by bringing home to every member the present magnitude of the business and its possibilities for the future, which will be an inspiration for better floriculture.

SIMPLE SIMON'S SELLING SENSE

Selling things that don't come back to people who do; that is the Art of true Salesmanship. "Art is long and time is fleeting," but, unlike other Arts, Salesmanship can be reduced almost to a Science. How? Figure it out for yourself. Some of the ways are suggested in this article.

YOU salesmen, did you ever figure out the way your customers come back at you when you start to feel them out? No! Better agitate your thinker now and then; there'll be money in it for the boss and, sooner or later, money for you. Also, if you're your own boss it won't hurt to give your selling methods the "once over" every now and then.

Suppose today ten customers come into the store, or phone. Each wants to order a funeral spray. You say: "Yes, ma'am; we make nice ones, $2 and up." What will the answer be? Seven, perhaps eight, out of the ten come back with "The two-dollar one is all right, is it?" You say, "Oh, yes, we sell hundreds of 'em," and the deed is done.

Try Another Way.

But suppose your feeler is "We make a fine spray at $5; smaller ones at three-fifty, or even as low as two." What happens? Seven out of ten will rise to your fly with "The three-fifty spray is good, is it?" And you've got nearly twice as good a sale with the same amount of talking. Try it and see.

Test it out on your carnations. You have three grades. Instead of saying, "Yes, ma'am; we have them for 35 cents a dozen up," and selling the 35-centers, try "We have fine carnations at 50 cents, the best at seventy-five; others at thirty-five." If you tab your sales you'll find a sure percentage of results either way you lead them.

Getting Better Sales.

Then there's bride's bouquets; most fairly good stores make them at $5 and up. The clerks get in the habit of stating it that way and, as a result, most of the sales are at the cheapest price. Try a different method: "We make a fine bouquet with a shower for $10, a larger one for fifteen, smaller ones for seven-fifty and five." Note how scarcely ever will a customer choose the cheapest.

Of Course Not.

And then there's the negative sort of salesman—the one who, having taken the order for the five-dollar bouquet for the bride, gets off this bright saying: "I s'pose you won't need anything for the bridesmaid?" Of course not. You wouldn't, yourself, if it was put to you that way.

Note how it works when you go out to lunch: You have eaten a pretty good meal when the waiter politely hands you the menu with, "Will you order your dessert now, sir?" Really, you hadn't intended taking any sweet, but you do, though you surely wouldn't if the waiter had come at you with "You don't want any pastry, do you?" You wouldn't have ordered if he had asked just "Any pastry?" with an inflection saying as plainly as anything, "I only ask because it's the custom."

The negative person is not a salesman—merely an order-taker—and the trouble is the order never is as large as it would be with the right suggestion. Try it out. The next time a customer leaves an order for a dozen Beauties to go to a hospital, forget your, "There won't be anything else, will there?" Instead try, "If you would like a touch of color on your table, we have a special sale of roses at 50 cents today."

No Training Given.

Selling flowers too often is like a wrestling match, catch as catch can, with the customer. Only the clerk has a big advantage in that the customer surely wants something but doesn't know just what. The big concern that has a large force of salesmen usually puts them through a course of training before it lets them tackle the trade—teaches them the things not to say at the same time it drills into them the right method, the merits of the goods and the house system. The florist seldom has time for that; he hires a salesperson on the strength of where the salesperson has worked before, puts him out on the floor, and advances or fires according to results. It's a crude method.

The Seller Who Thinks.

Women who really think about their work make efficient flower store clerks. Some salesmen are so anxious to sell they make customers suspect it is dangerous to buy. [The salesman who is indifferent will not be interested in this article and does not interest us; he won't stay long on any job.] They stick to a customer so tenaciously they make people afraid to enter the store. It really is the fault of the boss; he should note how things are going and warn his clerks; but the boss is a busy man and the soon-to-be head clerk is the one who can think things out for himself; who notes a result and can figure out how it was obtained or why he did not get the result that was wanted—who can reason from effect to cause and from cause to effect.

Tabasco on Your Thinker.

There are schools of salesmanship, but all a school of any kind ever did for anybody was to make him THINK for himself, lending perhaps a little assistance in the way of making the thoughts of others accessible. The school of experience, where we all attend every day, is the finest school of salesmanship, for, to the one who sells with his head as well as his hands, it gives innumerable opportunities to try out the thought suggested by the preceding sale—to put theory into immediate practice.

Remember, when you see a man or woman developing new methods of successful salesmanship, that "always the strongest coyote makes the new trail—the pack is content to follow in the old."

A SALE.

"What constitutes a sale?" It was asked of me the other day.

"Service and merchandise," was my answer, as they go together, sort of fifty-fifty.

But with the florist it is service, art and merchandise that constitute his sales.

Samuel Seligman.

OKLAHOMA RETAIL STORE.

The accompanying illustration gives a view of the retail store of Furrow & Co., at Oklahoma City, Okla., of which Lon Foster is manager. The display room is sixty feet deep. It is finished in white and trimmed in green. The card desk and customers' telephone are on the east side of the store in front of the icebox. The office is located over the display window.

Immediately behind the icebox is a department twenty-five feet deep fitted up complete for packing loose flowers for delivery. At arm's length there are boxes of all sizes made up, and twine, ribbon and other necessities needed for packing loose flowers. Just behind the box department is the design and make-up room, which is forty feet deep. It has a cement floor and drainage connecting with the sewers. Along the east side of this room is a counter three feet wide covered with sheet-iron, draining to one corner, which is also connected with the sewer. This counter is also used for unpacking flowers and plants. Underneath the counter are vases, pots and soil. Running crosswise of the room and butting against the west wall are five design tables, 4x7 feet. At the west end of each table is a cabinet, where all the accessories that go to make up a design are kept. Overhead hang all kinds and sizes of baskets for basket work. The shipping office is located between the design and flower packing room, on the east side of the store. There are two telephones for the shipping office, one for the business office and one for the display room.

FATHERS' DAY WON'T DOWN.

In spite of all the fun that's poked at it, Fathers' day won't down; and, curiously enough, it's the mothers who insist that father must be honored. The following is from that well known women's journal, the Delineator:

"June is the month not only of roses and weddings, but it is the month that celebrates a far less frequently sung fete. Fathers' day comes this month on June 22. The rose, any kind or color, is the emblem of Fathers' day, and all who wear one on June 22 will be known to be paying tribute to father, living or dead. Father himself was not the inventor of this celebration. It was a woman who devotedly admired her father and her husband who made the suggestion. Happy and admiring daughters and wives all over the country have taken it up. There is a slow but sure gathering feeling among women that in spite of the heavy artillery used against men in the fight for suffrage, after all, father is a pretty fine old father, and that we will tell him so once a year, no matter how we ignore and maltreat him the remaining 364 days."

SUMMER LILIES.

Really choice flowers are not over-plentiful through the summer months. Cattleyas are at their lowest ebb, valley is of doubtful quality, gardenias are uncertain and costly, but lilies are always procurable with a minimum of care, and no florist who has greenhouses and design work to do should be without them. Longiflorum from cold storage bulbs now come in useful. These come along quite fast and it is not wise to start too many at a time. They do well in a warm, moist house once fairly started. Speciosum album and Melpomene, especially the first named, are grand for summer use. Where a good batch was potted last December the first flowers will soon be open and, by keeping some plants cool, a succession can be had until the end of September. This also reminds us that July is a good time to pot some of those useful Japanese lilies to flower from Thanksgiving to Christmas. Cold storage bulbs are, of course, necessary.

L. auratum potted in December is just starting to bloom and will give flowers for two or three months, by retarding a portion. The flowers are large and heavily scented, and therefore less desirable for funeral work than other sorts, but plants in flower will sell for standing on piazzas or any other position not too confined. L. candidum flowers naturally outdoors before long. Meantime, late batches in pots keep up the supply. This is the purest and most beautiful white lily we have, good alike for forcing and outdoor culture. In a few years the beautiful and majestic L. regale, or myriophyllum, will be a prime florists' favorite also.

NUMBER OF BLOOMS PER BULB.

What is the average number of blooms per bulb of Lilium magnificum, size 10x11 inches or larger, when forced for Christmas? I intend to pot the bulbs about July 15.

B. S.—Pa.

I have not been able to average more than eight to ten flowers on such bulbs as you mention. Some bulbs will produce more; a good many will produce less. Usually some will not flower at all, on account of too hard freezing. The experiences of others using cold storage magnificum would be interesting. Of course cold storage lilies of any kind will not produce any such number of flowers as those not so treated.

PEONY BUDS BLASTING.

My peonies are showing a great many blasted buds. If the question is of sufficient general importance, I should be glad to know through The Review what are considered to be the causes of this trouble. My plants are 12 years old. They are on good ground, well drained and cultivated. I have not fertilized for three years, except to drop all of the leaves and stalks between the rows. I discontinued cultivating with the plow, because the soil was thrown against the plants and I feared the crowns would be covered too deeply. M. C. A. F.—Ind.

The most probable cause is lack of plant food to support the plants properly and develop the flowers. If you have not given them any fertilizer for three years, there can be no wonder that many buds fail to open. Peonies are gross feeders. If you cannot give them a dressing of well decayed manure each fall, preferably cow manure, you should give the ground a dressing of well balanced commercial fertilizer in spring and work it into the soil. As the plants advance and buds appear, the flowers are greatly improved if you can furnish some liquid manure. If that cannot be done, a light dressing of nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia when the plants are eight to ten inches high will be of great benefit. You will never grow peonies satisfactorily without feeding them. C. W.

PEONIES NEED REPLANTING.

We have a field of peonies, consisting of three or four old varieties, that were planted about fifteen years ago. We have cultivated them carefully each year and fertilized them, but for the last two seasons we have been compelled to syringe them heavily to get them in flower for Memorial day. They are greatly diminished in size this year. The season was exceedingly dry up to a week before Memorial day. About April 1 we gave an application of pulverized sheep manure, hoeing it into the soil carefully. There was not enough moisture after that was applied to change the soluble condition of the manure. Would these plants be benefited by transplanting? Could the transplanting be done immediately? If we transplant them, would you advise using the same field. J. W. R.—Ohio.

If it is fifteen years since your peonies were planted, there is little wonder that they are steadily deteriorating. The present, however, is not a suitable time to transplant them. Wait until the first week in September before doing this. Manure the land liberally and plow deeply. As the clumps must be, in many cases, of large size, it would be better to divide them with a sharp spade before replanting. When planting, cover the eyes to a depth of three or four inches. There is no reason why the same field, if well enriched, should not grow first-class peonies. Fall is vastly superior to spring as a planting time for peonies. C. W.

RHODODENDRON IN THIN SOIL.

Two feet of soil is usually considered the minimum for rhododendrons outdoors, and three feet is thought desirable by most growers of this shrub. Yet in the accompanying illustration will be seen one which has thrived for fourteen years in a spot where, says William F. Ekas, there is only about eight inches of soil and underneath it rotted rock. The shrub shown herewith is on the Harry Ekas place, on Frederick road, Baltimore, Md. It is about seven feet high and about the same in diameter. There are other rhododendrons flourishing in the same place, and Mr. Ekas reports that they seem to do better than those planted where there is a greater depth of soil. The particular shrub that appears in the illustration on this page attracts especial admiration because it stands alone and is unusually well covered with blooms.

BASKET MEN AFTER WILLOW.

Because the European supply of willow rods has been largely cut off, several American manufacturers of willow baskets have asked the Department of Agriculture for the addresses of persons in this country who have taken up willow growing. For some years the department has distributed willow cuttings of imported varieties with a view to developing the production of high-grade willow rods in the United States. The usual imports of willows come chiefly from England, Belgium, Holland, France and Germany, but these sources have been practically closed for several months.

One manufacturer reports that Japanese osiers are taking the market formerly supplied by Germany, at a slightly higher price. Finished willow baskets from Japan have come in, although split bamboo was the only Japanese basketware on sale before the war. As a consequence of the shortage of imported osiers, it is said, the price of American willows has increased, and growers here are meeting with a heavy demand for their product.

Hardy Garden

HARDY PERENNIALS IN JUNE.

Money-Makers for Florists.

The hardy herbaceous borders have a freshness, luxuriance, variety and brilliancy in mid-June surpassing all other seasons. The heat waves we get in July and August have not yet affected the plants and almost every morning some new, interesting and attractive subject can be found in flower.

The June perennials are, or should be, of special value to the commercial growers, as during this month large numbers can be sold for weddings, class graduations and other functions. Not only is there a sale for cut flowers, but, flowering, as so many do, at a time when bedding plants are selling, there is a big and increasing field for the sale of these most charming of hardy flowering plants. The florist who has not yet taken up the culture of hardy perennials is much behind the times, and there is no better time than the present to start seeds of many varieties and get a good stock for next spring's sales. Reference follows to a few of the more useful and important of June-flowering perennials, all of which are serviceable either for cutting or border effects.

Aquilegias, or Columbines.

Aquilegias, or columbines, are probably the most graceful and beautiful of June perennials. Not only are their spurred flowers charming, but their foliage, being beautifully divided, is in itself attractive. Good varieties of the long-spurred section are: Chrysantha, bright yellow, and cœrulea, the Rocky Mountain columbine, blue and white; or, if a variety of colors is desired, and, by the way, the columbines have no bad colors, the best plan is to secure seed of mixed hybrids. Not only will the long-spurred aquilegias bloom in June, but flowers will be produced to some extent all summer. For naturalizing or rock garden effects A. Canadensis, the native red and yellow variety, and vulgaris, the common European form, violet blue in color, are excellent.

To keep up a good stock of aquilegias it is necessary to raise seedlings each year, as some of the long-spurred varieties lack the vigor of the varieties Canadensis and vulgaris and die out after two or three years. They come so easily from seed, however, that it is easy to keep up a stock.

Lupinus, or Lupine.

For stately effect in the herbaceous borders none of the early June perennials can equal the lupines. There are three principal forms of L. polyphyllus, producing pure white, clear blue and bright pink spikes of flower. The last shade is the most recent in introduction. There are a number of intermediate shades also offered. In rich soil lupines carry magnificent spikes, which are equally good for cutting or for stunning effects in the garden. It is usually assumed that lupines are attacked by no insects. This is not correct. If they become dry at the root they sometimes become smothered with aphids and a soap spray is necessary to clear them. Seed sown now will produce strong flowering plants for next season.

Campanulas, or Bellflowers.

The most showy and useful campanula now blooming is C. Medium, better known as Canterbury bell. This is not a perennial, however, but a biennial, and seed should be sown not later than this month in order to have strong flowering plants for another season. The singles are the best for pot culture or bedding, as the flowers are lighter and stand up much better than those of the calycanthema, or hose in hose, and double forms.

Apart from C. Medium, there are some good perennial bellflowers now in bloom. Of these C. rotundifolia, the Scotch bluebell, growing a foot high, with clear blue flowers, is now effective in clumps in the border or rock garden. The Carpathian bell, or C. Carpatica, is just opening. It makes a beautiful border plant, and, with its white form, makes one of the finest of rock plants, blooming the entire summer. C. latifolia macrantha, growing three feet in height, is an effective border variety with dark blue flowers. C. Trachelium is another form with dark purple flowers, also growing a yard in height. C. persicifolia, the peach-leaved bellflower, will be open in a day or two. Of this grand perennial there are some beautiful varieties. In addition to alba and cœrulea, the single forms, there are Hamosa, semi-double blue, and Moerheimi, double white, both of which are superb border plants. Still another fine campanula now open is C. grandis, the great bellflower, with large, saucer-like violet-blue flowers.

All the campanulas can be raised from seed, with the exception of the double forms of persicifolia, which can be increased by division of the root.

Pyrethrums.

The single and double forms of Pyrethrum roseum are invaluable for cutting. They commence to bloom in May, but persist through June. For Memorial day they are useful, as the stems are long and stiff. If the old flower stems are cut back at the end of June, a nice late summer crop is usually produced. Only a small percentage of doubles can be had from seed, but, once obtained, these are readily increased from divisions. The best time for dividing double pyrethrums is either right after flowering or early in August, selecting moist weather for the work.

Pyrethrum seed germinates easily and good blooming plants can be had for next spring sales by sowing between now and the middle of July.

FIELD CULTURE OF CARNATIONS.

[A paper read by Ira H. Landis, of Paradise, Pa., before the Lancaster County Florists' Club, June 17, 1915.]

As soon as the soil can be got into shape early in April, we like to commence planting in the field. Assuming that the soil has been well manured and properly prepared, with three men and a few boys, the planting proceeds nicely. We always use two lines and draw a rake along each row to make the soil mellow and planting easy.

Where a great many thousands are grown, I believe it advisable to plant in beds of about five rows each, fifteen inches apart, and ten inches between the plants, and cultivate by hand. We plant in rows thirty inches apart and ten inches in the row, and cultivate with a horse. This method of cultivating I prefer to the hand cultivator where the space is not limited, as the deep cultivation helps the soil retain moisture for a greater period. Care must be taken not to cultivate so close to the plants as to injure the roots. Cultivate about every two weeks and as soon as possible after a rain, with a fine-toothed harrow, in order to leave the soil nice and mellow.

As soon as the plants have become thoroughly established and their flowering shoots begin to push up, the pinching back or topping must be attended to and the stock gone over about every two weeks. About August 1 this topping must be discontinued if you want early blooms, and if you have good, healthy stock to start with in the spring, the greater part of it should be ready to plant in the houses early in August.

A MICHIGAN CARNATION HOUSE.

The accompanying illustration gives a view of the interior of one of the carnation houses of William Murdoch, at Port Huron, Mich. In regard to the carnations, Mr. Murdoch writes:

"May 9 was cut every available flower from this house, and the photograph was taken May 18, giving eight days to develop this crop. The blooms average from three to three and one-half inches in diameter, with a few 4-inch flowers. The stems are from thirty-six to thirty-nine inches long, and almost as tough as willows. The only fertilizer used was a top-dressing of night soil before planting. In the center is Alma Ward. On the right is Mrs. Ward. In the distance on the right is Alma Ward again."

Mr. Murdoch adds: "The lady in the picture is Miss Mary A. J. Fraser, a popular young lady of our staff."

GARDENIAS FOR WINTER BLOOM.

Will you please tell me how to treat gardenias through the summer so that they will flower well in the winter? I had plenty of flowers during September, October and November, but after that the buds had a yellowish tinge and dropped off. I also noticed some brown spots on some of the leaves. They are planted in a bench and get normal treatment. I raised some and potted them, but got no better results. Should they be shaded through the summer, and would it be all right to put them outside; that is, the ones in pots? The temperature fell to 60 degrees on two or three nights through the winter. Should they get plenty of water now? J. M.—N. Y.

Gardenias are most successfully grown in raised benches, in four to four and one-half inches of soil. They need perfect drainage and the soil should be somewhat rough, so that the water will pass through it readily. Fibrous loam, cow manure and some coarse sand make a good medium. Some Scotch soot may also be added with advantage. Some growers use partly decayed leaves with their soil, but I do not consider these of any benefit. It is a fact that one or two successful commercial growers use solid beds only and get a fine crop through the dead of winter.

Pot plants will be all right outside from June 10 to September 10 with you. For benched plants a temperature as low as 60 degrees will do no harm if other conditions are right. The principal causes of failure in gardenia culture are: Improper soil, which holds water too long and becomes sour, not allowing the benches to dry out sufficiently between waterings; keeping the atmosphere too hot and stuffy, and erratic or careless ventilation. Gardenias like a warm and fairly moist atmosphere, but do not want coddling. There are few days in the year when they need be without ventilation. They enjoy having their roots warm; if you have any hot water pipes below the benches, all the better. A winter minimum of 65 degrees, except on severe nights, is suitable. Allow it to drop 5 degrees on zero nights. Anything approaching soggy at the roots late in summer or early in the fall will cause the leaves to turn yellow and buds to drop. Maintain a nice, buoyant atmosphere and water with great care and moderation and your plants should flower well through midwinter. If your soil is heavy, I would add some partly rotted leaves, broken charcoal and a fair amount of coarse sand to it. C. W.

Duluth, Minn.—The hail storm of June 5 did damage of about $500 at the greenhouses of J. J. Le Borious, at Woodland, breaking much glass and destroying many plants. None of the loss is covered by insurance. The range of William Jaap, in Lakeside, suffered slight damage.

VIOLETS FOR COLD FRAMES.

Can you state what varieties of single and double violets will do best in coldframes for cut blooms?

G. P. K. & S.—Mo.

The most satisfactory varieties for you to grow are Princess of Wales, single, and Lady Hume Campbell, double. C. W.

HARDY RUSSIAN VIOLETS.

What are the violets that are commercially known as hardy Russian violets? Are they double or single?

M. F. C.—Va.

These are double, dark blue, and have a heavy perfume. They do not bloom through the winter, as do such varieties as Lady Hume Campbell, Marie Louise, etc., but give a heavy spring crop. They are much the hardiest of the double violets. C. W.

FRAME CULTURE OF VIOLETS.

Please give me some information as to growing violets in frames. When should they be set and when will they bloom?

H. H. G.—Ohio.

Both double and single violets can be grown in coldframes successfully if the frames are well protected around the sides and if mats and match-board shutters are used above them in severe weather. Ventilation should be given on every favorable occasion. Dry leaves can be spread over the plants after the winter sets in and left there until early spring. This assists in excluding frost, and plants thus covered come through finely if the leaves can be kept dry.

Lady Hume Campbell is the most reliable double for frames. I prefer to plant and grow these in the frames through the summer, rather than grow them in the field and lift them. They have less vigor than singles, are much more susceptible to disease and do not sell so well in the markets, but they flower profusely and later in the season than any other double varieties. Like all violets, they like a rich soil, containing a good proportion of well rotted manure; cow manure is the best. Doubles commence to flower about October 1, and in frames will naturally produce but little in the coldest weather, but will give an immense spring crop, which will continue until early May.

Among single violets, Princess of Wales has no superior. The plants succeed best if grown in the field and removed to the frames early in October. It is best to subject them to a few degrees of frost before lifting them, to check leaf growth and increase flower production. These commence to bloom about September 20 and persist until the beginning of April. If shaded they can be kept a fortnight later; in fact, I have seen good singles in one or two years as late as April 20 in frames, but this is exceptional. The plants want plenty of good soil below them and, as the spring advances, need a copious water supply. The singles give an immense crop in early spring. They are much hardier than the doubles and should be left exposed as late as safety will permit in the fall. C. W.

Big Rapids, Mich.—Donnor & Foster have succeeded C. M. Buskirk and Grace Buskirk as the proprietors of the Star Greenhouse.

Park Ridge, Ill.—William Pasvogel has purchased the greenhouses and dwelling recently occupied by Benjamin Gruppe, at West Elm street and the C. & N. W. tracks.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

LILIES IN THE SOUTH.

In growing cold storage Lilium giganteum in the south, the important point is to keep them clear of aphids. Let this pest get just a slight foothold, and in a few days the crop of buds is ruined. The damage is done just at the time or just before the buds emerge from the crown of leaves. Spray with nicotine extract and be particular that the crown of each plant gets saturated.

L.

PALMS IN THE SOUTH.

Areca Lutescens.

The kentia of late years seems to have crowded most of the palm family to the wall. There are two other species, however, which make remarkably quick growth in the south and can be profitably grown by anyone who will make a specialty of them. These are Areca lutescens and Latania Borbonica. Both are easily raised from seed.

When the arecas are well established in their first pots they do best if planted outside. In the moist southern sections they can be put out in the full sun, when they will require a great deal of water to prevent their getting too yellow. They will look a little yellow even under the best treatment, but will make a rapid, heavy growth, and two weeks in a shaded house after they are potted will restore their natural color. A plant set out in May from a 2½-inch pot will make a strong 5-inch specimen by September, and one from a 4-inch pot will nicely fill a 7-inch pot in the same time if planted in rich ground. The ground will require a little weeding at the start, but the plants soon spread and choke the weeds out.

In the drier northern sections of the south, the plants do better if planted out in a lath house, getting identical treatment otherwise.

Old specimens that have had rough handling in winter decorations can be shaken out, divided, trimmed at the roots a little and repotted in a suitable size of pots. A lath house is the place for them then. It is really astonishing how big plants of this palm can be divided and still go on flourishing without the least check.

Latania Borbonica.

Latania Borbonica requires a little different treatment from Areca lutescens. While it will do well planted out in the open, it is more difficult to handle properly in the fall, on account of its strong root action. It does best if grown wholly in pots or planted out on a table in a lath house.

This palm requires plenty of room to make a nice specimen, such as the best trade requires. A 6-inch specimen ought to be short and squatty, with a good spread, and should still retain its seed leaves in good shape. If overcrowded, the plants get entirely too leggy, lose their seed leaves and are altogether undesirable. The trouble with most growers of this palm is that they try to grow 1,000 plants where there is only room for 300 or 400.

On lifting either the arecas or latanias, they should be placed in a well shaded house and kept rather close, with a moist atmosphere, until they establish themselves. Once established, they are not hard to suit. A night temperature anywhere from 55 to 65 degrees will carry them through the winter in good shape. At the lower temperature they will need considerably less water. They are less liable to attacks from mealy bugs and scale if kept growing briskly and properly syringed.

BACKWARD BEDDING PLANTS.

I have planted two large carpet beds, using 2,800 plants, also two letter beds 5x30 feet. The cold season and so much rain have retarded the plants and caused the foliage to drop from the alternantheras. I wish to force the plants a little by the use of nitrate of soda. Will about two tablespoonfuls to a bucket of water be too strong to use about twice a week until the plants start growing freely? What quantity can I use with safety and not burn the foliage, and can the same amount be used on plants such as coleus? I would also like to use soda on a privet hedge which was frozen to the ground. Would this be advisable?

W. H.—Pa.

The cool season is responsible in a large measure for the backward and starved appearance of your plants. I would most certainly not advise the use of nitrate of soda, as it would, at this stage, only aggravate the trouble. This is a powerful nitrogenous food for forcing well established plants, but would be harmful if applied now. Keep the soil stirred, water when necessary and let the warm weather, which must soon come, do the rest.

A little well rotted manure will be much better for the privet hedge than the nitrate of soda. Cut it back hard and it will make a stronger growth then. If you are growing the tender and unreliable California privet, plan to replace it with the Japanese privet, Ligustrum Ibota, which will never die back in your latitude.

MILLERS ON MUMS.

Will you kindly tell us how to get rid of small millers, which are getting rather numerous in our greenhouses? We have heard that they are harmful to chrysanthemums. What damage do they do, if any? We have noticed small striped worms on some chrysanthemum plants. What can we do to clear these out?

S. B.

The small millers are bad pests on mums in some sections. It is not so much the millers that do the damage as the striped worms that you speak of as being on the plants. These worms, like all other caterpillars, are voracious eaters and do considerable harm to the foliage. The best remedy for all caterpillars, where they are so numerous as to become a pest, is to spray the foliage with a light solution of Paris green; then when the caterpillar eats the leaf it eats enough of the poison to end its career.

C. H. Totty.

UNUSUALLY TALL CUTTINGS.

A few days ago we ordered several hundred chrysanthemum cuttings. When these were received, about one-half of them were about eighteen inches high. We intended to grow them to two buds. Would this be possible? Please tell us how to handle them.

M. & M.—Ohio.

The tall plants, if they are soft and in good condition, will come along. The only trouble is, that if they are tall varieties and have grown to a height of eighteen inches by June 1, they will be exceptionally tall before the flowers develop. I would suggest that these plants be pinched back as far as possible without getting into the hard wood. Then, when they begin growing again, two or three shoots can be taken off from each plant, giving a chance to get two shoots per plant, as desired. Where the plants have been growing too long and have become extremely hard, as is sometimes the case, it would be better to cut the plants back hard and await the suckers which invariably come up from the base of the plants, but if there is head room, it will be better to take two or more shoots after pinching back.

Chas. H. Totty.

NOT FIRST-CLASS POT PLANTS.

Will you kindly let me know whether Smith's Advance chrysanthemums could be used for potting up? I grew these plants in the field last year and they proved a great success, being in full bloom after the asters were done. Each plant bore from fifty to seventy-five blooms. The plants have been stored in a coldframe and are now in good condition.

T. K. D.—N. J.

Smith's Advance could be used as a pot plant, though it is not so well adapted to this purpose as some other varieties, since it is inclined to be leggy. A better type to grow as pot plants would be the Caprice mums, or early-flowering varieties, which remain quite dwarf. Among the varieties of these which could be successfully grown as pot plants are White Caprice, La Cygne and Cranford White, three excellent white varieties, which would do splendidly. Chas. H. Totty.

MUMS FOR GENERAL TRADE.

I have nearly 1,000 square feet of ground space in a house that I should like to use for growing chrysanthemums, as the space is idle all summer up to the holidays and I must heat the house in the fall on account of a few stock plants for bedding stock. I have had little experience with chrysanthemums, but I grew some fine ones last season. I should like to know whether I still have time to get rooted cuttings and grow them? What are the best six varieties for ordinary sales? I have had Major Bonnaffon and Pacific Supreme. How many blooms should be grown to a plant? How close should the plants be in the bed? Are they best in pots or solid beds? I am sending the leaves of some chrysanthemums. They appear rusty and I find small green lice on the under side. What shall I do to prevent this?

E. B.—Pa.

Half a dozen good varieties of chrysanthemums for you to grow are: Polly Rose and Ivory, white; Golden Glow and Bonnaffon, yellow; Pacific Supreme and Chieftain, pink. If you buy rooted cuttings at once, or, better still, plants from small pots, you can still have nice blooms next fall. When they are planted at this moderately late date I would run only one bloom per plant. Put the Ivory 6x6 inches apart, the others 6x8. While you can produce just as fine blooms on pot plants and have them better finished than in solid beds, the latter method of culture entails far less labor and gives general satisfaction.

The foliage of some varieties is attacked by rust more than others. Keep the foliage dry at night; this tends to prevent its spread. Discard badly attacked stock. Green aphid can be controlled by spraying with nicotine, soap and other extracts. Fumigation also keeps it in control. Other pests, such as thrips, can be kept in check by syringing if you use a spray nozzle and carefully direct the pressure below the leaves, not merely damping their upper surfaces. C. W.

LORD & BURNHAM IN CANADA.

About two years ago the Lord & Burnham Co., of New York, decided to open an office in Canada. There were several reasons for this: Canada was expanding rapidly in all directions, and as a natural result of her prosperity, as in the United States, the demand for greenhouses increased. The Lord & Burnham Co. believes that better and quicker service can be given by the establishment of a number of sales offices, situated at convenient points. Following out this policy, an office was opened in Toronto. The success attending the opening of this office led the company to organize under the laws of Canada, and they immediately began to look for a site for a factory.

The company desired to manufacture in Canada for the following reasons: First, because they could sell their goods at a lower price; second, they could give quicker and better service by so doing; and, third, they wanted to be identified with Canada and be a Canadian company as far as possible.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

O. R. ECKHART.

FOR quite a number of years O. R. Eckhart has been a prominent figure in the trade at the Twin Cities. He was a member of the old Kusik-Eckhart Co., of Minneapolis, which was dissolved in 1910, at which time Mr. Eckhart removed to St. Paul and established a wholesale house dealing in cut flowers and florists' supplies under the name of the O. R. Eckhart Co. While giving close attention to his business and building up good connections, both locally and through the contiguous territory, he has found time for active participation in all the coöperative activities of the craft—clubs, shows, etc. Mr. Eckhart is one of those who believe most strongly in the value of exhibitions as a means of educating the public to use more flowers.

To this end they put their Canadian business in the hands of a Canadian, David Warwick, who was born and brought up in Toronto. Mr. Warwick has had over fifteen years' experience in greenhouse business, and most of that time has been connected with the Lord & Burnham companies of New York and Illinois. When the company erected a factory near Chicago, Mr. Warwick was put in charge, and has seen the business grow so that the factory had to be doubled in size.

After over twenty cities and towns were visited and investigated, St. Catharines was finally selected as the place to build a factory. St. Catharines offered better facilities as to sewers, water power, homes for workmen, railroad facilities, etc., than many other places. It also had the advantage of being in the Buffalo freight zone, an important economical consideration. Then, too, the various other manufacturing concerns already located there gave the city a strong recommendation.

After the site of some sixteen acres was purchased, steps were immediately taken to start work on a factory. About one year ago building operations were commenced, and today the machines are turning out the material for over fifteen greenhouses already contracted for.

The factory is strictly fireproof, all on one level and one story high. The framework of the building is steel, with brick walls. The buildings are what is known as saw-tooth style. The north slopes are of all glass, which makes every foot of floor space equally well lighted.

A branch of the Grand Trunk railway enters the property. Two tracks are laid, one on the north side for incoming freight, and one on the south side for outgoing shipments. The Welland canal almost touches one end of the property.

The sales department is under the management of a Scotchman, C. C. McDermott, who has had his schooling with the Lord & Burnham Co. in the United States.

FIRES

Albany, N. Y.—Fire destroyed the greenhouse of John Schaefer, at 45 West street, shortly after midnight, June 7. The greenhouse caught from an adjoining frame barn. The loss amounted to several hundred dollars and was only partly covered by insurance.

Brookville, Pa.—Fire destroyed the Y. M. C. A. building June 3, and C. W. Esby & Son, who occupied a store in the structure, lost almost everything in the place. Although most of the contents were moved out after the fire started, the total loss of the Y. M. C. A., C. W. Esby & Son and the Glenn meat market, the other occupant, is probably in the neighborhood of $15,000.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Business was good last week, with commencements, weddings and general trade. We have had all kinds of weather, warm, cold and moderate, with heavy showers, which added variety. There have been no large weddings or funerals the last fortnight.

Peonies are plentiful, but the demand for them is light. The quality of the blooms this year is inferior, and some varieties seem blighted in the bud. Roses are a drug on the market. Russell, Shawyer, Hadley and Key are coming in well for the summer crop. Ward, Taft and Milady are holding up well. Because of the continued cool weather, carnations are fine in quality for so late in the season. Even at cheap prices, they seem to be the favorite with flower buyers at present. Irises are coming into the market in small quantities, and are only fair in quality. It is too early for the delicately colored Spanish irises. Gladioli, both the baby and giant varieties, are again with us. America is good and sells well. Pyrethrums, cornflowers, marguerites, Sander daisies and cut pansies are plentiful. There are a few good hydrangeas, ramblers, spiræas and gloxinias to be had in the plant line.

Various Notes.

Mr. Miller, of the firm of Miller & Stroh, Alden, N. Y., was a visitor last week. His firm is growing some good carnations and sweet peas. Next year they intend growing the orchid type of sweet pea, since the common type is not much in demand now.

Kramer, the Florist, of Washington, D. C., was here last week, attending the convention of the Veiled Prophets of the Enchanted Realm, held in this city June 7 to 9.

H. M. Petrie, of Stroh's Quality Shop, will leave soon to spend the summer in the Adirondacks.

Joseph Sangster is showing some excellent Gladiolus America, which make a good window display. He is having a top built for a new delivery truck, which will soon be put into operation. Business, he reports, is good.

J. Benson Stafford is displaying as a special feature a model bride's bouquet during June. Artistic Japanese flower holders, Italian vases and jardinières are also displayed. A window box about five inches wide, made of wire screen, trimmed with green moss and filled with soil, in which are planted vinca vines and blue ageratum, is most effective as a blue, green and white edging around the store window.

Stroh's Quality Shop is offering excellent carnations, which are grown at the greenhouses in Attica. Benora, Enchantress Supreme and White Wonder are some of the excellent keepers. Ed Stroh will soon leave for Attica, where he will take up the greenhouse work.

W. J. Palmer & Son are growing fine America gladioli. They have also fancy grasses, which are grown under glass. They are used in bunch and corsage work and add a dainty touch to basket effects or centerpieces.

S. A. Anderson's attraction last week was a Japanese garden window display. Various sizes, shapes and specimens of Japanese gardens, staged with Japanese baskets, bowls and novelties made vivid with blue and white Japanese crepe of a pine tree pattern, were quite attractive. Masses of blue hydrangeas formed the background, and tall vases of yellow snapdragons and low bowls filled with yellow marguerites brought out beautiful contrasts of color.

Wm. A. Adams and Al Vick were busy men last week entertaining out-of-town visitors to the Veiled Prophets' convention. E. C. A.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh had a few warm days last week and everything came into bloom at once. There were such quantities of flowers that every person on the street seemed to be carrying an arm load of peonies, irises or other outdoor flowers. The wholesale houses were loaded. Everything you can think of was plentiful and trade dropped out of sight. It seemed impossible to move all the stock at any price; it was the worst glut in a year. The retail stores looked beautiful, as the great quantities of cheap stock enabled them to make great shows. Many of the retailers report business excellent, weddings being numerous.

Various Notes.

The A. W. Smith Co. grows great quantities of outdoor flowers at its Canfield, O., place and made elaborate displays of these last week.

Randolph & McClements still are busy with planting as well as the ordinary run of store work.

G. P. Weaklen & Co. seem well satisfied with business, notwithstanding they are out where everyone has flowers in his own garden.

William Turner's store business has grown until he is satisfied he can do better by leasing his greenhouses and giving his whole time to the store.

Harry Hamm, who has been confined to his home for six weeks with scarlet fever, was able to get out last week and found that in his absence his shop had been redecorated inside and out and everything done to give him a pleasant surprise on his return to business.

Karl Koenig, who has been the principal bulb grower of this section for years, is seriously ill with pneumonia.

Ray T. Page, auditor of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., has been seriously ill for several weeks and still is confined to his home.

The south side florists last week were in evidence at the firemen's convention, which met in Carrick. In the automobile parade J. J. Fuchs was awarded second prize and F. J. Riegelmeier also had an artistic car. Clarke.

Mainly About People

Yalaha, Fla.—Trusten P. Drake, proprietor of the Drake Point Greenhouses, has left for New Rochelle, N. Y., where he will stay with Dr. B. F. Drake, of 75 Main street.

Berlin, Ont.—Norman M. Critchison, formerly at Walkerton, Ont., has moved here to take the position of manager of the Berlin Floral Co., succeeding J. S. Orlowski.

New Orleans, La.—Harry Papworth, president of the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., has asked permission of the police jury of Jefferson parish to make certain improvements on parish property between the Seventeenth street canal and the company's nursery. The plans include the planting of trees, shrubbery, etc.

York, Pa.—A bill in equity has been filed in the County court by John E. White against Abdiel Neller, in which the former asserts that Mr. Neller and he were partners in the greenhouse business at West York, and that Mr. Neller excluded him from its management and refuses to account for the profits. The defendant is given thirty days in which to make answer.

Bellefonte, Ill.—If the city, upon the petition of the West Side Improvement Association, will set aside the necessary ground at West End square, Henry Emunds will set out plants and flowers on it, as an aid to the organization in its work of beautifying that part of the city.

Cleveland, O.—In the garden columns of the Plain-Dealer for May 27 appeared an interview and a portrait of Frank A. Filler, head florist at Gordon park. Before entering the employ of the park department, Mr. Filler had a long experience as a commercial florist. He served his apprenticeship with E. L. Koethen, at Zanesville, his native town, and was for nine years with J. E. Bonsall, at Salem.

Streator, Ill.—Fred Palmer, fireman at the greenhouses of George Whitcomb, was found dead in the boiler room on the evening of May 25 by the proprietor. When the body was found, the hands were grasping an electric light socket and cord, and it is not known whether death was due to heart failure entirely, or partly to electric shock. He had had occasional fits of illness while on duty. He was 57.

TEXAS FLORISTS, ATTENTION!

A few of the headliners for the second annual convention of the Texas State Florists' Association, at Fort Worth, July 6 and 7:

Special rate of one and one-third fare.

Questions that are of direct interest to you will be discussed.

A live program, instructive and interesting.

Florists coming from Illinois, Missouri, Mississippi, Colorado, Louisiana, Alabama, Oklahoma and Tennessee. Also, seventy-five per cent of the florists of Texas will be in attendance.

A nice line of exhibits on display.

Fort Worth Florists' Club's program of entertainment will assure you a good time.

If you were in attendance at our convention last year, at Waco, you know the value of these conventions, and, of course, will be with us; if not, don't miss the opportunity of meeting the florists of Texas and the south, for they will be there. Remember, too, we will have some of the big men with us from Chicago, Colorado, Missouri, Oklahoma and other sections. Time is short—so make your arrangements to attend the convention. We will look for you.

R. C. Kerr, Pres.

ROTARY FLORISTS AT FRISCO.

When the International Association of Rotary Clubs meets at San Francisco, July 19 to 23, there will be a meeting of the florists' section, when matters of interest to florists in carrying on their work in connection with the club will be discussed. The Rotary Clubs are composed of one person from each line of business in each city throughout the country, and there is, therefore, expected to be a representative gathering of the trade at this section meeting. Robert C. Kerr, of Houston, is busy on the program for the florists' section meeting. The tentative program begins with a luncheon at the St. Francis hotel at 1 o'clock, Monday, July 19, to get members acquainted. This will be followed by the section meeting, at which such topics as the following will be discussed:

"How to Put Our Business on the Highest Plane, and Carry Out the Principles of Rotary."

"Rotary Florists' Cooperation in Exchange of Business."

"The Florists' Page in the Rotarian."

"How Rotary Florists Should Serve Their Local Rotary Clubs."

"How to Create Interest in the Convention Florists' Sectional Meetings."

Reports of the Houston meeting.

NEWARK, N. J.The Market.

The cold, cloudy, variable weather has given way to bright, sunny days, and this has had considerable effect on the growth of plants and flowers. Prices of nearly all kinds of cut flowers are considerably lower than they have been. Carnations, which a few weeks ago were selling for from $4 to $5 per hundred, can now be bought as low as $2. They are of good quality. There has been a great influx of peonies during the last week, both the white and the red being of good size and excellent quality. They retailed at about $1 per dozen, which was less than the wholesale price a short time ago. There are a few fine California poppies in the market. Valley keeps of good quality, and a considerable quantity is sold. Sweet peas continue in popularity. They are cheaper than they have been. But little lilac is seen in the market. The supply of gladioli is increasing and the quality is fine. There is a good supply of iris of the different colors. Every florist has a few ragged sailors. Stocks and snapdragons are common, and are in considerable demand. Daisies are plentiful. There is still a little demand for geraniums and other bedding plants. Hanging baskets are being called for, and several florists have made up beautiful porch baskets for their trade. June weddings are numerous, and many florists have frequent calls for flowers for these events. There has been a large amount of funeral work.

Various Notes.

W. L. Jones, of 168 Passaic avenue, Nutley, is completing a new residence near his present residence and greenhouses. Next year he plans to remodel his office building and add another greenhouse. He has planted a large number of asters and 6,000 chrysanthemum plants for autumn.

Albert Nirk, of Nutley, is planning to grow a whole house of chrysanthemums and will have two houses of ferns. He has set out a large number of asters and gladioli.

Joseph F. McDonough, 376 Belleville avenue, is busy with funeral work at present, and has a large trade in flowers for other purposes. He has a fine lot of attractive porch baskets for sale.

George Penek's branch store, at 142 Belleville avenue, is doing well. A new sign, extending the whole width of the building, has just been put up. Considerable funeral work is reported and transient trade is fair.

John Crossley, 39 Belleville avenue, has been busy with funeral work ever since Easter. Business is generally reported as good.

J. H. Harvey, 453 Broad street, reports that he is busy with funeral work, and has a number of large weddings to provide flowers for—during the month of June. He reports that hospital trade is constantly increasing. He is sending five times as many bouquets to hospital patients as he sent a few years ago. This increase he attributes to the fact that people have come to lose their dread of hospitals, and now often go to the hospital for complaints that are not serious, because of the fact that so much better care can be given there than in the home.

Charles Witheridge, 532 Broad street, reports that while business is a little quiet with him now, he has been quite busy with bedding plants. R. B. M.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.National Flower Show.

The national flower show committee met June 10 in regular session in the Philadelphia Florists' Club rooms, in Horticultural hall, with Chairman Farenwald presiding. John Young, of New York, was present. Practical details for the conduct of the national flower show, to be held in Philadelphia March 25 to April 2, 1916, were more or less definitely worked out.

At a meeting with the same committeemen, Frederick Newbold, of the New York Horticultural Society, who did so much toward making a success of the New York show, was present, and explained in detail the plans and methods pursued by that organization in connection with the New York show.

George Asmus, of Chicago, is expected in Philadelphia next week, when there will be another meeting of the committee.

W. F. Therkildson, Chairman Press and Publicity Committee.

Bexley, O.—Frank Capuano is starting a greenhouse and nursery business.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

With a week of exceptionally warm weather, the bottom seemed to drop out of the market. There was a large supply of fairly good stock, but there was practically no demand. Part of the accumulations of the week were sold to the street fakers by the wholesale stores, but even these buyers would take only small quantities of stock. The death of a prominent local architect created a little extra demand for funeral work among the larger stores.

Roses and carnations show the effect of the warm weather, both in size and color. Some storage peonies are being offered, but are not selling rapidly, even at low figures. The retailers had their innings this week, being able to secure the pick of the available stock at almost their own prices.

The pot plant season is rapidly drawing to an end and nearly all growers handling this line report a satisfactory season.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the club was held June 14. President Hamilton occupied the chair. The extremely warm evening no doubt kept many members away. Richard Vincent, Jr., recently elected president of the American Dahlia Society, spoke of this organization and gave an outline of the work the society plans to do in the near future. He requested the support of the local club. F. C. Bauer gave an impromptu talk on fertilizers and spoke especially of his experiences in using bone meal. Secretary Flitton also made some remarks on the value of different kinds of fertilizers and humus. The entertainment committee was instructed to look into the matter of securing a suitable place to hold the annual outing of the club and will report at the next meeting.

Various Notes.

Joseph Weiner has opened a retail store under the Rochambeau apartment house, Charles street, near Franklin.

Charles Siegwart has a fine lot of Cattleya Mossiae, many of them showing from fifteen to eighteen buds and blooms to the plant. This is the first year Mr. Siegwart has had this variety.

Evans & Le Brun have formed a co-partnership and have taken over the store and business formerly conducted by Gus Lawson, Jr., at 3419 Eastern avenue.

C. E. Akehurst & Sons last week shipped over 15,000 blooms of their new carnation, Mrs. C. E. Akehurst, to the Pennock-Meehan Co. A fine lot of plants of this variety has been grown for fall sales.

Halliday Bros. sent in last week about four dozen blooms of Chrysolora chrysanthemum from their greenhouses at Monkton. The flowers averaged about four inches in diameter.

The rose range of Stevenson Bros. is looking fine and was in full crop last week, their Killarney Brilliant being worthy of special mention.

J. L. Willheim's horse, standing at Charles and Hamilton streets June 12, took fright at a passing car and ran away six squares before he was caught. On his journey he collided with an auto, which he damaged somewhat, but no one was injured.

Edward Kress is removing all his greenhouses at his North avenue store and will erect dwellings in their stead, with a display and palm house in the rear and attached to his present store front.

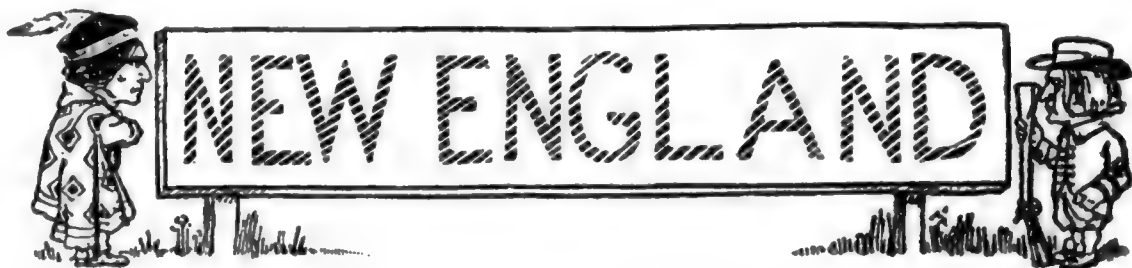

F. J. Michell, Jr., and L. J. Seiger, of Philadelphia, were callers last week.
W. F. E.

Charles E. Smith & Co. have leased the building at 207 North Liberty street and will remove to it from 121 North Liberty street.

MAMARONECK, N. Y.

An interesting feature of the monthly meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was the grand display on the exhibition tables, for which the exhibitors deserve great credit.

The judges made the following awards: Dehn & Bertolf, honorable mention for display of flowering shrubs and perennials; James Stuart, cultural certificate for specimen plant of Calceolaria Stewartii; Thomas Ryan, vote of thanks for vase of assorted Spencer sweet peas; Robert Grunnert, for collection of Spencer sweet peas, twelve vases, twelve varieties, very highly commended; Calceolaria Bailorii, from P. W. Popp, cultural certificate; vase of White Killarney from William Whit-Worcester, Mass.—William N. Estabrook will add another greenhouse, 28x150 feet, which he will heat by hot water.

Ware, Mass.—Chas. H. Walker has erected a greenhouse, and is doing business under the name of the Elm Greenhouse.

Palmer, Mass.—James P. Smith, formerly with A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., has joined the greenhouse staff of L. A. & C. A. Royce.

Brattleboro, Vt.—Alexander L. W. Haeseler, for two years manager at Carl S. Hopkins' greenhouses, has entered the employ of Carroll Bond.

East Bridgewater, Mass.—The dahlia season is over, so far as the sale of roots is concerned. J. K. Alexander says it has been a quite good year after all. He has planted all his stock and has about thirty-five acres with not a thing on them but dahlias. About September there will be one of the most gorgeous shows of color to be found anywhere in America.

Holliston, Mass.—James Lockhart, for the last fourteen years in the employ of J. E. Long, died June 3 at the Union Avenue hospital, in Framingham, where he was taken three weeks ago suffering from an attack of grippe. He was 81 years old, a native of Scotland, and had been in this country since he was 20 years old. He had no known relatives in this country, and had been cared for by his employer while he was in poor health the last year.

tier, cultural certificate. James Linane was highly commended for a specimen gloxinia. James Foster received honorable mention for a vase of peonies. Joseph Tieman received votes of thanks for peonies and a display of spinach.

Joseph Manda, of South Orange, N. J., and Mr. Watkins, of Burnett Bros., New York, each addressed the meeting and complimented the society on the fine showing made by the members.

The summer show committee reported everything in readiness for the exhibition, to be held in the town hall, Greenwich, Conn., June 18 and 19. Fifty-five classes are provided for and a fine exhibition of seasonable flowers, fruits and vegetables is expected. The fall show committee also reported progress and has ready for distribution copies of the preliminary schedule, providing for 111 classes. Handsome prizes of cash, silver cups, medals, cut glass and useful silverware articles will be offered.

The outing committee reported the date of the annual outing and games of the society to be August 11, and the place will be Edwards' Rye Beach Inn, Rye Beach, N. Y. The popularity of these outings in the past assures a big crowd this year.

The next meeting will be held July 9.
P. W. Popp, Cor. Sec'y.

Haverhill, Mass.—M. F. Perkins has opened a greenhouse business in the rear of his residence, at 48 Haverhill street, with a line of vegetable and bedding plants.

New Castle, N. H.—William Lefebvre, of the recently dissolved partnership of Schilder & Lefebvre, Swarthmore, Pa., has leased the greenhouses of C. W. Eaton. Mr. Lefebvre took charge of the property June 1.

Adams, Mass.—A. J. Boothman had a narrow escape June 7, when the Boston & Albany passenger train smashed the right forward wheel and crushed the radiator of his truck, which he had stopped in the nick of time only a foot from the train. Giving attention to a trolley car, he was unaware of the approach of the train until close to it. The step of one of the railway cars did the damage to the automobile. The force of the blow was not enough to tip the car over. Mr. Boothman escaped uninjured.

Ansonia, Conn.—Thomas J. Mooney, proprietor of the Ansonia Floral Co., with stores here and in Derby, and of greenhouses near Seymour, was seriously injured in a jitney collision on the New Haven road recently. The jitney in which Mr. Mooney was riding was running at a high rate of speed and was unable to make the turn to avoid a jitney coming from the opposite direction. Mr. Mooney and another passenger were thrown out. Mr. Mooney was so seriously injured that he was taken to St. Raphael's hospital, New Haven.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Summer is here at last, and all the evidences of its arrival are especially noted in the demoralization of the cut flower market. The shipments of peonies seem, if possible, greater than ever before at this date, and some of the stock arriving has never been excelled in quality. The sacrifice of values on Saturday was phenomenal. Flowers well worth $1 per dozen in other years were selling as low as $2 and $3 per hundred. The June weddings are about exhausted. School commencements will soon be over. No steamships are sailing for Europe. One prominent wholesaler says that because of this last his total sales for May decreased $3,500 as compared with 1914.

Special Beauties have been selling at $10 per hundred and under. This fact tells the entire story of roses of all kinds. Rose buyers who purchase in thousand and ten thousand lots have the wholesale market at their mercy. On Saturday the street men were out in force, and the peddlers loaded their carts with carnations at 25 cents per hundred. The best carnations did not sell above $1 per hundred, flowers of the same splendid quality that were selling at $4 and $5 a few weeks ago.

Lilies could hardly be moved at $2 per hundred. There are large accumulations. Valley has fallen to half the quotations of a week ago. Fine stock sold on Saturday under $10 per thousand. Gardenias are about over. The market is well supplied with gladioli. Orchids are abundant and lower, the best on Saturday selling at $25 per hundred. There seems to be no special demand for them, and for the lower grades as low as $10 is the quotation. There is a sufficiency of sweet peas, callas, coreopsis, delphiniums, pansies and the other seasonable flowers.

Club Meeting.

Nearly 100 of the faithful attended the last meeting the Florists' Club will hold until September, when, so the essay committee announced, there will be an address by B. Hammond Tracy, on "Gladioli."

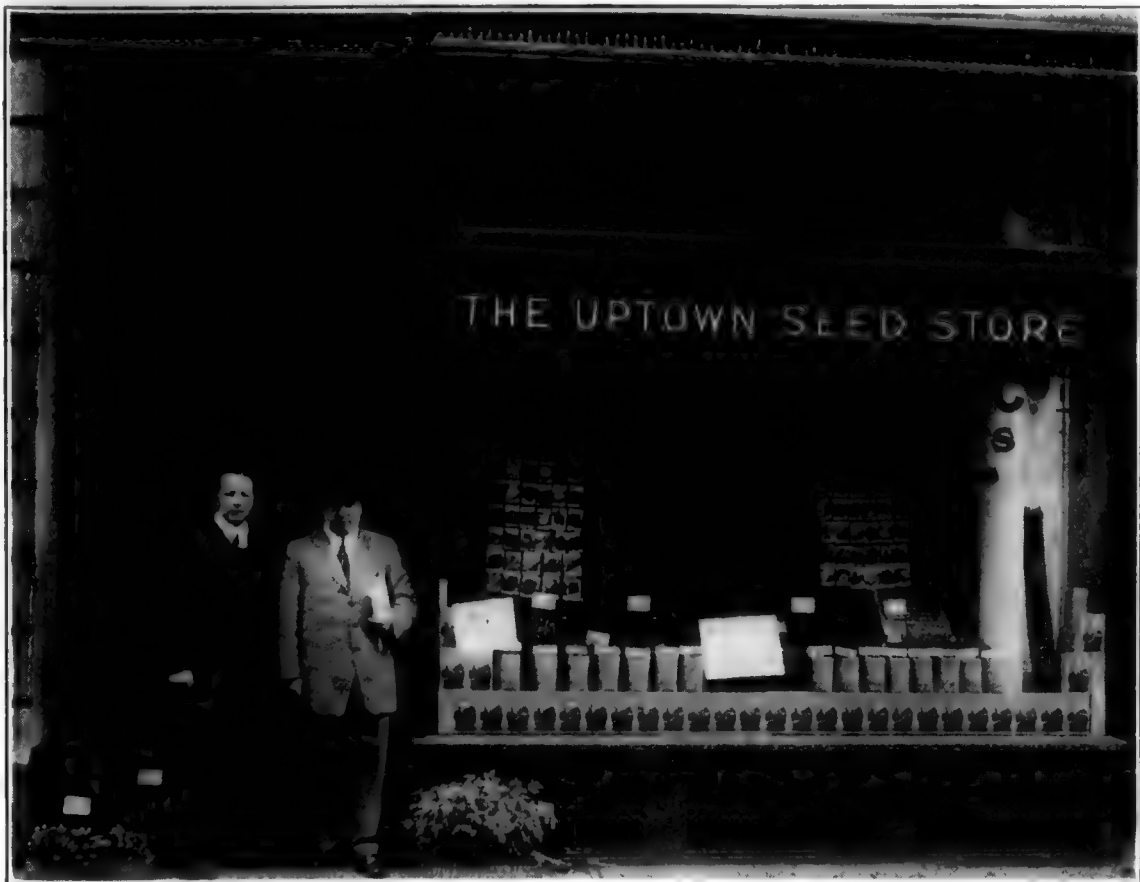

Emil Schloss, for the outing committee, announced everything in readiness for the club's celebration July 14. President Bunyard requested the usual prize donations. Chairman F. R. Pierson, for the committee on permanent home, suggested the time not opportune and on motion of C. B. Weathered the committee was discharged.

A. J. Guttman reported progress in the club's work with the Public Service Commission in the matter of carrying of flowers on the cars. R. T. Brown also spoke on the matter. The committee was given power to act, without employing counsel.

F. H. Traendly, chairman of the flower show committee, handed a check for $2,000 to the treasurer, with "more to follow." Chairman Miller, for the new flower show committee, reported meetings and progress.

T. A. Havemeyer, N. B. Irwin, H. E. Mengham, William A. Rodman and Peter Gerlaid were elected to membership. C. F. Heitzmann, John Scheepers and George Hildenbrand were proposed.

R. J. Irwin, for the transportation committee, said the officials must know before July 15 the intending travelers to the S. A. F. convention. Fifteen have arranged to attend and a special car is hoped for.

A new lavender swainsona was exhibited by Joseph Manda and received a certificate of merit. The plant was much admired, and is honored with the name of Mrs. Joseph Manda. The thanks of the club were accorded B. H. Farr for a grand display of Iris Germanica in twenty-three varieties. W. A. Manda showed vases of dahlias in many varieties and William Tricker showed roses and campanulas, both gentlemen being accorded the club's thanks.

B. H. Farr made an interesting address, divided into three parts, the Peony Society, peonies and iris. He gave much history and instruction concerning each of his topics, for which he was accorded a standing vote of thanks.

C. H. Totty's story of his trip to the expositions at San Francisco and San Diego held the close attention of all. Mr. Totty expects to repeat his experience by attending the S. A. F. convention.

Various Notes.

M. A. Bowe reports a busy month with weddings and funerals. In two weeks he furnished seven casket covers. Notable weddings were the Frew-Peters and Frank-Taylor weddings, at Glen Cove and Hempstead, L. I. He also furnished 157 bouquets for the Vassar College commencement, at Poughkeepsie, where Mr. Bridgeman had charge.

President Bowe, of the Retail Florists' Association, says the organization is in favor of Sunday closing. The society meets at the Hotel Woodward, Fifty-third street and Broadway, the second Tuesday of each month.

Last week at the gardens of Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, the type collection of Chinese herbaceous peonies, gathered by the American Peony Society, were in bloom, and thousands of invitations were distributed for June 9, 10 and 11, when refreshments were served. Invitations to the rose gardens the last of the month have been sent out. There will be a magnificent display.

Friends of Ed. Roehrs, of the Julius Roehrs Co., will be pleased to know he is convalescing after a long and serious illness. Both he and M. C. Ebel, of Madison, have been sympathizers of Job since the advent of spring.

Walter Gott, representing Sander & Sons, leaves for St. Albans, England, on the St. Louis June 19.

Early closing in July and August is the vital subject now under consideration in the wholesale section. With the retailers advocating a complete close-up on Sundays, the way is open for the wholesale section during the hot months to remain closed from noon on Saturday until 6 a. m. Monday.

W. E. Marshall and R. J. Irwin have returned from successful business trips.

Oscar Swenson, after seventeen years of service, has been appointed superintendent by Dailedouze Bros., Flatbush, succeeding W. H. Taplin, who has resigned.

Wm. Kessler has just received from Holland a fine lot of variegated aspidistras.

Alex. McConnell has had a successful season at his nurseries at New Rochelle. His beautiful display of evergreens, especially the specimen blue spruce, attracts the attention of thousands daily, the new branch of the New Haven railroad passing his grounds.

H. A. Siebrecht, Sr., is busy at his nursery and notwithstanding the many carloads of specimens he shipped to the Panama-Pacific Exposition, the home grounds seem as beautiful and as well covered as ever. The greenhouses formerly used for palms are now devoted largely to carnations, roses, orchids and gardenias.

Chairman Tuthill, of the outing committee of the New York Florists' Club, has sent out tickets for the annual holiday of its members, July 14, at Wetzel's grove, College Point, L. I. An elaborate program has been provided. The steamer Ursula has been engaged, and the hour of sailing changed to 9 a. m.

J. Austin Shaw.

Alwayn A. Hanft, junior member of the retail firm of Hanft Bros., Sixty-second street and Madison avenue, is to marry Miss Marion Dale, one of the members of the cast of "Nobody Home," at the Princess theater. She is 19 years old, lives with her mother at 2340 Seventh avenue, and is filling her first stage engagement. When Mr. Hanft, who is 28 years old, was called upon to furnish flowers for the opening performance of "Nobody Home," six weeks ago, he made the acquaintance of Miss Dale.

A. T. Bunyard has leased additional store space at his establishment at 413 Madison avenue, at the corner of Forty-eighth street, for a term of years.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

We are badly in need of rain and warm sunshine. Many of the outdoor flowers are just about standing still and refuse to open. Children's day, celebrated in many of the city churches June 13, brought heavy demands for red and pink peonies, but few were obtainable. However, carnations were somewhat plentiful and were substituted in many cases. At present the carnations are cheap and, for the season, are good, firm blossoms. A number of dark shades are on the market, but do not sell well. The supply of roses is large and exceptionally fine. Long-stemmed Maryland and Mock are found especially useful for bouquet work. Hadley, Ophelia and Taft also sell well. Beauties are good and are cheaper. Valley is plentiful and of fine quality. Sweet peas are good and somewhat plentiful, but are shorter in stem. Cattleyas and miltonias have sold well. Fine America gladioli are on the market and sell readily. Baby gladioli are being used extensively in basket work. Lupines, bachelor's buttons, syringas and daisies complete the stock. Asparagus and smilax are becoming more plentiful. In blooming plants little is seen at present. Campanulas, primulas, hardy hydrangeas and a few calceolarias are found. There has been a large call this year for hanging baskets and porch jars, and the greenhouse men are kept busy most of the time.

Various Notes.

George B. Hart and Charles H. Vick are attending the United Commercial Travelers' convention being held here this week.

Arthur Elder has just returned from a business trip to Ithaca and Cortland, N. Y. H. E. Bates has also returned from a brief visit to Pittsburgh, Pa.

Among the recent orders taken by the Lord & Burnham Co. was a house 28x100 for C. E. Clark, of Coudersport, Pa. Business, says this firm, is improving.

The many friends of Patrick Kelley, who a few years ago was employed by H. E. Wilson, will be interested in knowing that he was ordained into the Catholic priesthood at the Cathedral, June 12.

George T. Boucher reports business as excellent. He says his plant trade has doubled this season and a good counter trade is noticed. An extensive decoration for the United Commercial Travelers' ball and banquet was executed by Mr. Boucher at the State Armory, June 11. Besides a large quantity of palms and greens, hundreds of yards of blue, white and gold bunting were used, with a profusion of American flags.

Wm. H. Dildine, treasurer of James Vick's Sons, was suddenly stricken with appendicitis and was operated on recently at the Rochester General hospital. His condition is good and he is well on the road to recovery. It was his intention to go to the seedsmen's convention at San Francisco and he had already written to several growers in California, making arrangements to meet them there.

Among the visitors this week were G. Reising, of L. Baumann & Co., Chicago, and Morris Cohen, ribbon merchant, of New York. Both men are booking fall orders and are well satisfied with business.

Henry Salmon, on Mount Hope avenue, is a busy man these days. Store trade is good and his plant trade is large.

Jacob Thomann & Sons report fair business, with a good funeral trade.

David Scott, of Corfu, N. Y., is shipping in some fine pink and yellow snapdragons.

Fred Vick had a busy day Saturday, as he is a member of the Fifty-fourth Regiment band, which paraded with the U. C. T., and business also is good.

J. B. Keller Sons had a big wedding decoration at Geneva, N. Y., which took three days to complete it.

WRITE YOUR OWN HEAD.

As the owners of a certain make of automobile do the most extensive part of the concern's advertising, so do the readers of The Review form its best advertisement. The wide success of the automobile has resulted in the circulation of jokes without number about the car. Now The Review, through its success, is getting into the same class, for here is a joke submitted about it.

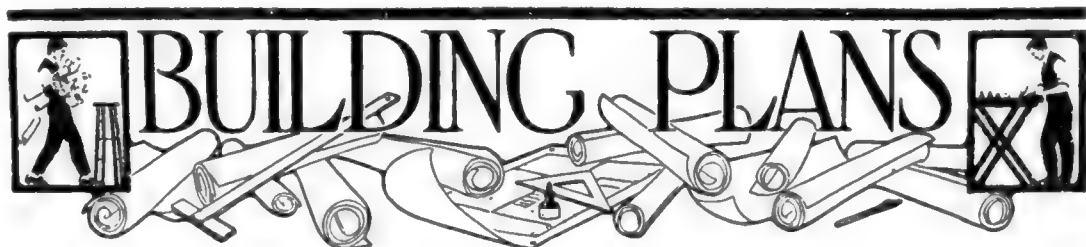

Were we looking for a caption, we might head it, "This Is No Joke," implying, of course, its truth, rather than a lack of humor; or we might write, "Too Much of a Good Thing," except that some people believe that such a paradox is an impossibility; but the heart of the matter is contained in the five words which the jokesmith himself underscored three times, "We All Talk from Experience." Here's the "experience":

Doctor: "You must go away for a long rest."

Overworked Florist: "But, doctor, I'm too busy to go away."

Doctor: "Well, then, you must stop advertising in The Review."

A. J. Schmidt, Jr.

Keyser, W. Va.—C. L. Wiseman is planning the erection of a greenhouse, 30x300 feet.

Jackson, O.—Nellie M. Dungan is having a small greenhouse built, preparatory to entering the florists' business.

Gibsonburg, O.—W. H. Schwan is planning to enter the greenhouse business. He has been engaged in gardening.

Stanton, Mich.—L. E. Brown, who has hitherto done a retail business in plants and flower and garden seeds, will build a greenhouse this summer.

Lawrenceville, Ill.—J. R. Guinea, 1525 Porter avenue, plans to build a greenhouse next fall. He now grows flowers and plants outdoors in a small way.

Williamsport, Pa.—The Williamsport Floral Co. has taken out a permit for the erection of seven greenhouses, a boiler house and an office building, at an estimated cost of $10,000. The new range will be on Herdic street, above Park avenue.

Booneville, Miss.—The Booneville Floral Co., of which Mrs. Kate Lacy is proprietor, finds business better this season than ever before, both in cut flowers and plants. Several new greenhouses are being added this year and a larger quantity of stock is being planted outside.

Silver Creek, N. Y.—C. Borgstrom is planning the erection of a greenhouse, with which he expects to open business next fall.

Erie, Ill.—The Erie Greenhouses are tearing down the old house and will build from it a house 18x75 feet. A new house, 25x100, is under way, the material for which was furnished by the A. Dietsch Co., Chicago. Although the bad weather just preceding Memorial day hurt the holiday business, trade for the occasion was much larger than that of any previous year.

Oelwein, Ia.—I. O. Kemble, of Marshalltown, has purchased desirable property on South Frederick street and will immediately begin the erection of an office and salesroom. Greenhouses will be built during the summer. This will be operated in connection with their other plants, as the Kembles already have greenhouses in six Iowa cities. W. E. Gleason will be the local manager.

Alton, Ill.—George Madsen, of the Alton Floral Co., has closed a deal with Miss Dietsch, by which he acquires the greenhouse on Fourth street which was erected a year or so ago by Chas. Newman. The building will be moved to the range of the Alton Floral Co., near Godfrey. Mr. Madsen is planning to erect one new house in addition to moving the Dietsch structure. He will then have five greenhouses.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Sarah Starr.

Mrs. Sarah Starr, for some years in the florists' business with her husband, the late A. R. Starr, at Joliet, Ill., died at the age of 85 June 8 at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George T. Relyea, 419 Richards street, Joliet. Her maiden name was Sarah A. Mogg. She was born June 1, 1830, at Euclid, N. Y. In 1850 she came to Illinois with her husband, and settled on a farm between Steger and Crete. Later they engaged in the florists' business at Joliet. For many years she lived at 110 Macomber street, and following her retirement from business, she traveled much. She had lived with her daughter for several years, and enjoyed good health until about three years ago, when began a gradual decline.

Mrs. Starr leaves three daughters, Mrs. A. C. Johnston, Joliet; Mrs. Charles Soudar, Rockwell City, Ia., and Mrs. G. T. Relyea, Joliet; two brothers, John Mogg, Euclid, N. Y., and Jerry Mogg, Fontana, Wis., and a sister, Mrs. F. G. Bemmett, Joliet.

The funeral was held Thursday afternoon, June 10, at the Relyea residence, and burial was in Oakwood.

George H. Evans.

George H. Evans, of the Jordan Park Floral Co., San Francisco, Cal., died in that city June 9. Mr. Evans was engaged in the flower trade there for many years, and his death is regretted by many friends. He had been in poor health for some time, and for the last few months had been living on a farm, which he recently purchased, in Sonoma county, hoping to be benefited by life in the country. He returned to San Francisco about two weeks ago to look after the business there, but soon after his arrival he was attacked by the illness which ended in his death. It is understood that a deal had been closed to transfer the business to F. E. Stratton.

S. H. G.

Mrs. Henry Baer.

The wife of Henry Baer, of Peoria, Ill., died suddenly June 2 at their home, on Pleasant street near the Lutheran cemetery. Mrs. Baer suffered a pain in the region of her heart, and called her husband to her. She slipped from his arms to the floor and was dead when a physician arrived.

Mrs. Baer suffered illness incident to the birth of a child last January, but had apparently been in good health since then. Heart failure is thought to have been the cause of death. Besides her husband, she leaves seven children.

Mrs. Lisette Bergstermann.

Following an illness of only a few days, Mrs. Bergstermann, wife of Conrad Bergstermann, the well known florist of St. Louis, died of paralysis, June 11. She was born at Millstadt, Ill., fifty-six years ago, and is survived by her husband, one son, Edwin Niebling, and a daughter, Mrs. Hulda Ruff. Mrs. Bergstermann was a member of the St. Louis Lady Florists' Home Circle. She entertained them for the first time at the April meeting, at which the ladies spent a pleasant afternoon. The funeral took place June 14, from the family residence. Many beautiful floral designs were sent by her many friends. Many members of the Lady Florists' Home Circle and of the St. Louis Florists' Club, of which Mr. Bergstermann is a prominent member, were present and extended their sympathies to the bereaved family.

J. J. B.

James O'Connor.

James O'Connor, who was well known in Milwaukee as a landscape gardener at the time of his retirement eleven years ago, died at his home, 182 Fourteenth street, Milwaukee, Wis., June 4, of old age. He was 92 years old. He had been a resident of Milwaukee for sixty years, and had been superintendent of the Fourth Ward park for twenty-eight years when he retired. He is survived by one son, Joseph L. O'Connor, and by three daughters, Sarah, Mary and Margaret. The funeral was held from the Gesu church June 7, and interment was in Calvary cemetery.

ILLINOIS BILL IN SENATE.

Contrary to expectations and prediction, the parliamentary "stall" of Lee O'Neil Browne proved sufficient to revive the bill providing for the licensing of engineers of heating plants carrying more than 5,000 feet of radiation or operating boilers of more than ten pounds pressure. At the time it was voted upon and lost, as reported in last week's Review, Representative Browne obtained postponement of consideration pending announcement of vote. Three days later, June 11, the bill was passed by the lower house, and is now before the senate.

Inasmuch as the senate adjourns June 18, it is possible that the bill will be passed, along with a batch of others, without being read. For this reason, the danger of its getting on the statute books is greater now than earlier, when the press of business was not so great. There is the compensating possibility, however, that one or two determined senators can stop the measure if they watch for it carefully. To vigorously protest its passage at the end of the session would mean the certain defeat of the bill. Various interests throughout the state are doing their best to get senators to make this determined opposition, and so kill the measure.

There is the additional possibility, of course, that, at this late hour, the bill will not even come to the attention of the senate. This is devoutly to be hoped for.

SHRAPNEL

London, England.—In spite of the war the great annual Chelsea show for 1915 compared well with any previously held under the auspices of the R. H. S. The great tent was one span less in extent than in 1914, but against this was the fact that the exhibitors were more numerous. The quality of the exhibits was up to the best previous record. The only bad feature was the weather, which was rainy.

Quedlinburg, Germany.—That the work of the seed growers here is less interfered with by the war than is supposed in America is made plain by the correspondence received. The work in fields, greenhouses, etc., is going along much as ever; there is help enough of its kind. In spite of Germany's isolation, mail has gone out and come in with no great delay, but most of the foreign business now is being handled through intermediaries in Holland, through whom shipments still are being sent out. The exporters here do not expect to suspend shipments.

Naarden, Holland.—Much to the surprise of most of the nurserymen in this section, trade has been quite fair. Naturally, the war shut off the German market and some of those who specialize on articles principally wanted in Germany, like Prunus Laurocerasus, were hard hit, but trade with America has been fully as good as ever during the last ten months. At least the usual quantities of conifers have gone over the ocean. Peony roots sold out closely last autumn and it seems likely the fall of the present year will see a lively demand both for peonies and perennials.

Amsterdam, Holland.—The government has been asked by Dutch nurserymen to interest itself in securing the withdrawal of the embargo placed on all imports of pinus by the United States government, effective July 1. The minister of agriculture will seek to disprove, with the nurserymen's help, the need for such quarantine.

London, England.—M. Vilmorin, of Vilmorin-Andrieux et Cie, Paris, was the guest of honor at a recent dinner of the Horticultural Trades' Association, having been stationed in London for some time as a representative of the French government in the purchase of war supplies. He told the diners that while the war has had a serious effect on the trade in France, still it is marvelous, under the circumstances, the way planting and cultivation have been attended to this spring.

Toulon, France.—It is estimated that the losses of growers in the Var and Alpes-Maritimes provinces during the season of 1914-15 on account of transportation difficulties, the closing of German, Belgian and other northern markets, and the light local demand, will amount to several million dollars. According to the report of Mr. Aussel, secretary of the Ligue-Florale du Sud-Est, to the Toulon Chamber of Commerce, the shipments of cut flowers, bulbs and nursery stock from the department of Var alone have averaged about $3,000,000 in value in recent years. Shipments of immortelles and the local consumption of the other lines add considerably to these figures. In Var there are 2,500 horticultural establishments, whose average area is a little less than three acres.

ual," which he expects to publish soon.

BUYERS should not pick out the cheapest offer with the fatuous thought that they are thereby securing for themselves the best stock. It may work that way sometimes, but it is not a reliable guide.

THE first thing to do, if you have no business stationery, is to get some printed letter-heads. They are inexpensive and they go even farther than they should in establishing one's standing in the trade.

ONE of the noteworthy features of the growth of the trade is the number of women who are engaging in it, usually in a small way at the start, but "great oaks," you know, and nearly always the woman is successful according to her ambitions.

EACH year sees an increase in the number of peony blooms subjected to the cold storage process as the result of overstocked markets during the flowering season. As the growers, one by one, find out how to handle the stock successfully the duration of the peony season is being extended. It now covers from mid-May to July 4, or later.

JOHN YOUNG this week has distributed the premium list for the International Flower Show, to be held at New York, March 17 to 23, 1916, one week preceding the National Flower Show at Philadelphia, of which Mr. Young also is secretary. Those who wish to consult Mr.
Young regarding either of these shows or the trade exhibition at San Francisco in August can address him at 53 West Seventy-eighth street, New York.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.
Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

Schilt, Peter, Evanston, Ill.
Simonson, C. A., McPherson, Kan.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story;
no bills are run up; no duns sent.

GREAT CROPS MEAN BUSINESS.

To the florists who prosper with the prosperity of the men next the soil, which means a large part of the trade, it will be good news that the farmers of the United States are to go one better than last year in the matter of crop production, and the phenomenal wheat yield of 1914 will be outdistanced unless actual disaster overtakes the crop between now and harvest. A total wheat crop of 950,000,000 bushels is predicted by the government crop bureau, as against 891,000,000 last year and an average of 686,000,000.

According to the official figures, there will be plenty of oats. The crop promises 1,288,000,000 bushels, as against 1,141,000,000 last year and an average of 1,131,000,000 bushels. There has been an increase of 4.6 per cent in the acreage. Barley acreage has been reduced 2.3 per cent in favor of spring wheat, but the condition of 94.6 indicates a crop of 197,000,000 bushels, against 195,000,000 harvested last year and an average of 182,000,000 bushels.
Such big crops mean good business for a great many florists.

A READER'S SUGGESTIONS.

A reader of The Review, in speaking the other day of business getting and advertising, spoke warmly of the great assistance to all advertisers that would accrue from the exercise of a little more care and thought on the part of those answering the ads. As most advertisers have a more or less fixed appropriation to be utilized for purposes of publicity, it behooves them to spend it where it will produce the best results. To this end, most advertisers make an effort to check up on their advertising, that they may be enabled to drop those mediums that are non-productive of results and increase their space in those that are productive.

To give every possible assistance to the advertiser, The Review is continually reminding its readers to mention
The Review when writing advertisers.
Yet in spite of these constant reminders, there are many who do not take the time to do themselves, the advertiser or the paper the justice to write five little words—"your ad in The Review." To do so would enable the advertiser to ascertain to a nicety just what proportion of his business was attributable to systematic advertising; and it would render unto the paper that thing that belongs to the paper —the credit for getting the results if brings. And remember, you cannot help those with whom you are doing business without its helping yourself.

NEXT WEEK'S WEATHER.

Weekly weather forecast,
issued by the U. S. Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C., for the week beginning Wednesday, June 16, 1915:

For the Region of the Great Lakes—Showers in the upper lakes region Wednesday and Thursday and again on Monday, with temperature slightly above
the seasonal average.

For the Upper Mississippi Valley and Plains States—Scattered showers are probable Thursday and again on Sunday; temperatures rather above the average are probable.

For the Ohio Valley and Tennessee—
A shower period beginning Friday will continue intermittently until the end of the week; temperature will be above the season average.

For the West Gulf States—Intermittent showers for the period beginning about Friday will continue throughout the remainder of the week, with temperatures above the seasonal average.

It is important that all who intend making trade exhibits at the American

The Market.

As a result of the strike of street car operatives, combined with cold, dark, rainy weather, local business is below normal. The buyers for the outlying retail establishments can reach the market only with great difficulty and their present needs are small at best, as the flower buying public, or that part of it that consumes the greater quantity of stock, is under the necessity of remaining at home. But this condition, disagreeable though it may be, so far from crippling the Chicago market only serves to throw into greater relief the importance and magnitude of the shipping end of the business. It also imposes on the commission men the obligation of doing everything that lies within their power to place their stock where the demand is not affected by the unfavorable local circumstances. That most of them realize this obligation is evidenced by the volume of shipping transactions, which remains quite near normal.

Beauties, Russell and the yellow varieties of roses have monopolized the greater part of the demand. Beauties, however, are rapidly losing ground to Russell. Long and medium-stemmed Russell have sold well and brought good prices. Beauties and the yellow varieties have held up well, but of short-stemmed roses there has been an

ROSES You Really Need

FIRST of all, there's Mrs. Russell; you will find you cannot get along without this rose once the flower buyers of your city become acquainted with it. Also, we offer Ophelia, Milady, Killarney Brilliant, Ward and Sunburst. Each a splendid seller.

Carry these roses in stock and they will draw trade.

AMERICAN BEAUTIES

We offer a very large crop, cut from young plants. These Beauties are right in every respect—including price—and you will find they are a fine money-maker for you—sure to please your customers and bring them back for more.

SWEET PEAS

The stock we offer is the spring-blooming Spencers—a large supply, splendid quality, all colors. Just what you need for Wedding and corsage work.

CARNATIONS

There are plenty of Carnations now, but not all of them will meet the requirements of critical trade. OUR Carnations are acknowledged second to none. They will give satisfaction.

FINE PEONIES

Of course we can supply the cheaper grades as well, but our specialty is extra fancy Peonies. They are the best, big, showy flower you can use for June Weddings and for Commencements.

LILIES

You can get here fine Easter Lilies in any quantity.

CATTLEYAS

There are no finer Orchids and our supply is large.

FANCY VALLEY ALWAYS ON HAND

We handle the Chicago Market Brand Valley exclusively. There is none better. A never-failing supply.

oversupply and prices are low. The quality of the roses received, while not up to the standard of several weeks ago, has been excellent for the time of year, as a result of the cool weather.

Carnations have not experienced a sufficiently large demand during the last week to take care of the receipts, and the prices have fallen accordingly. The one thing that has contributed more than all other things combined to the downfall of the carnation is the peony.

Peonies are to be had everywhere and for almost any price. Because of the greater show they make for a given amount of money, they have almost crowded carnations off the stage and have succeeded in forcing roses from the center. Their day, however, is rapidly drawing to a close. The local crop will all be cut by the end of this week. A larger number of wholesalers than usual have put peonies in storage, but probably the aggregate quantity does not exceed what were in storage at this date last year. Quite plainly, some of the inexperienced ones have stored peonies that will not keep long. Anyway, they will all want to get them out of the freezer by July 1 to avoid paying another month's charges, so there will be pressure to sell peonies for another two weeks.

Seasonable stock, such as snapdragons, gladioli and daisies, seems unable to waken a demand at this time. Easter lilies are kept alive by the funeral work. Valley finds a fair call at usual prices. Sweet peas are more nearly holding an average, though the quality of many of them is not so good. Greens are abundant, and the quality is all that could be desired.

The termination of the street car strike that had tied up all retail business for two and a half days, announced just as this issue goes to press, will be a material assistance to the local demand. But it comes at the same time that the weather turned warm again, so the market is sure to be crowded with stock for the rest of the week.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club June 10 was unqualifiedly a business session, yet it is doubtful if those present noticed the lack of entertainment, because of the snap and zest with which the officers brought up and disposed of the many matters that had been accumulating in the preceding month. Carl Cropp, on behalf of the combined flower show committee of the Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club, stated that he had nothing to add to the report of the committee's meeting May 20. A. Henderson, who was appointed a committee of one at that meeting to investigate whether or not the Municipal Pier building will be available for the fall flower show, reported that the idea of using this new exhibition building would have to be abandoned, as the structure is not nearly completed. Mr. Henderson also spoke on behalf of George Asmus, who was appointed at the committee meeting to confer with Mr. Spaulding, of the Coliseum. Mr. Asmus has been unable to get a definite reply to his inquiries. After some discussion, the club decided to leave all matters relative to the show in the hands of the committee. President Keimel appointed the following committee chairmen at the suggestion of the combined committee:

was raised, but at the suggestion of Guy W. French this matter was referred to the good of the club and the sports and pastimes committees, who were given full power to act and to add to their number as necessity seemed to demand.

The report of the resolutions committee on the death of John Zech was read and a recommendation entered to send a copy of the resolutions to the bereaved family and the firm of Zech &

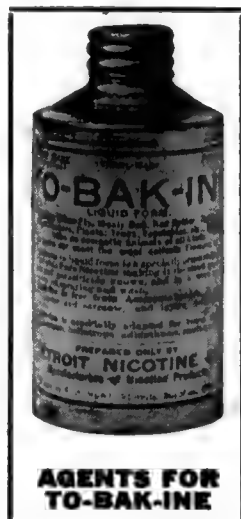

Mann. President Keimel took the opportunity following this to appoint N. P. Miller to the vacancy on the banquet committee caused by the death of John Zech. The committee now consists of H. N. Bruns, A. T. Pyfer, George Asmus and N. P. Miller.

The question was raised as to the status of those who had been elected to honorary membership in the Cook County Florists' Association. The question was quickly disposed of by following the suggestion of Arnold Ringier that they be elected honorary members of the Chicago Florists' Club. A list of these honorary members will be furnished to Secretary French by A. T. Pyfer.

The following applications for membership were submitted: George C. Weiland, 602 Davis street, Evanston, Ill.; H. B. Kennicott, Robert R. Brenton and Max Ringier, all of 165 North Wabash avenue, Chicago; G. F. Sykes and James M. Brown, both of the Lord & Burnham Co., Chicago; Charles Mathes, Western Springs, Ill.

Following is a list of those elected to membership: Oscar Leistner, 319 West Randolph street; Theodore Kirchen, 319 West Randolph street; H. H. Wilkerson, 56 East Randolph street, all of Chicago; Charles O. Youngstrand, Morton Grove, Ill.

A large vase of excellent Mrs. Charles Russell roses was exhibited by French & Salm, Union Grove, Wis., and several vases of splendid irises and peonies were staged by Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, Ill.

It is desirable to bear in mind that the special train to the annual convention of the S. A. F. leaves Chicago at 10 p. m., August 12. Secretary French wishes to call attention to the following facts: The special travels over the Chicago & North-Western, Union Pacific, Denver & Rio Grande and the Southern Pacific systems, passing through the plains of Illinois and Iowa, over the historic Overland Trail through Nebraska, through the Rocky mountains, allowing time to see Pike's Peak, the Garden of the Gods, Cheyenne Canyons and Crystal Park; then on through the Royal Gorge and Tennessee Pass, Salt Lake City and the Sierra Nevadas to California.

Sign at Erne & Klingel's.

Here is a neat little sign that hangs over the ticket machine in the store of Erne & Klingel:

Early to bed, early to rise;
Cut the weeds and swat the flies;
Mind your biz and don't tell lies;
Pay your debts; use enterprise; and Buy from those who advertise.

Various Notes.

Henry Penn, the widely known Boston retailer, will be at the Hotel La Salle June 19 to 24, on his way to the Pacific coast.

A. T. Pyfer has been canvassing the market to ascertain the sentiment with regard to Sunday closing. He says all the wholesalers in the Atlas block are willing to remain closed on the Sabbath during July and August and he hopes all the houses in the market will agree. By common consent, the daily closing hour during July and August will be 5 p. m.

When seen at Kyle & Foerster's June 14, F. F. Scheel stated that the unprecedented stretch of cold, wet weather has been extremely unfavorable for carnation plants in the field. He planted one of his five carnation houses with stock out of 3-inch pots, and these are looking fine, actually having made more growth than have the plants set in the field the last week in April.

John Schoepfle, 933 Belmont avenue, received his new six-cylinder passenger car June 10.

Miss Grace Donovan, 3428 Indiana avenue, was quite seriously injured the afternoon of June 14 by the White delivery truck belonging to W. J. Smyth, 3101 South Michigan avenue.

N. J. Wietor gives it as his opinion that Bonfire is the most profitable red carnation ever introduced. It is, of course, rather small, but Mr. Wietor says this is more than made up for, from a grower's point of view, by its wonderful productiveness. The color leaves nothing to be desired.

A. E. Turner, of Rosin & Turner Co., Mosinee, Wis., who was reported last week as being in town, says the Wisconsin fern crop is normal this year. A wreck on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul delayed the first large shipment to Chicago and caused no little inconvenience.

A. L. Vaughan is chauffeured into town every morning by his 16-year-old daughter, who, nothing daunted by the congestion of automobile traffic in the loop district during the strike, transports him to the doors of his office on schedule time each day.

The Market.

Business held up wonderfully last week. Summer has not arrived yet; the cool weather has kept the stock in fine condition and has kept the quantity down almost to normal. While the usual slump may be looked for almost any day, stock is moving freely, and sales show a substantial increase over last year's. Graduation at Downer College was a big factor last week; more flowers than usual were used at the exercises. Orders for graduation flowers for all schools keep pouring in, and June brides are greatly helping the florists' business. The so-called business depression has had no effect on Cupid; he seems to be just as busy as in previous years.

Roses are in fine shape and are moving well. The cut is large, but, owing to the rapid sales, is not accumulating to any appreciable extent. Carnations are also in large supply, but are not standing around the market for any length of time. The quality of the stock is exceptionally good.

Southern peonies are still with us, but are not so good as they have been. The local stock is just about ready and, if the present weather continues, the crop will last for several weeks. Last year the crop came on quickly and was with us for less than a week, owing to the extreme heat. Sweet peas are still in good supply and the stock shows little signs of deterioration. The cut is being moved readily at fair prices. Valley is in fine shape and is moving well. Lilies, however, are becoming a drug on the market, despite the good quality of the stock.

The retailers have been kept quite busy with decorations for churches and private homes and there is no stagnation whatever in the business, although any day may see the expected slump.

Nic Zweifel Sells Out.

June 1 the large greenhouse establishment owned by N. Zweifel, at North Milwaukee, Wis., was purchased and taken over by Grunwaldt Bros. This range consists of ten houses, kept strictly up to date. There are 70,000 square feet of glass under operation and the space has been devoted exclusively to carnation growing. Specialization and unceasing effort have produced exceptionally fine stock, which has won prizes at every exhibition in many parts of the country. The Holton & Hunkel Co. handles the entire cut of this large range.

Mr. Zweifel has been in business since 1893, when he started on a small scale at Fourteenth street and Groeling avenue, Milwaukee. In 1901 he built his first greenhouses on the present site. The place is located about seven miles from the center of the city and he was a pioneer in going out into the country to build. Besides the well kept greenhouses, he has erected a residence which is without a peer in that section of the country. The dwelling is modern in every respect and is lighted with gas generated on the premises.

Mr. Zweifel, who is not old by any means, has been highly successful in the trade and does not intend to embark in business again for a few years at least. His health is not of the best and he will take life easy for a while, spending his time partly in travel and partly in regaining his vitality. He was in Europe last year, accompanied by Mrs. Zweifel and their daughter, Edna, when the war broke out, and he has many interesting stories to tell of the hardships of travel and the stringency of money on the other side. He has not lost interest in trade enterprises and is still an active member of the Milwaukee Florists' Club. He will have no trouble in keeping busy during the summer, as he has just purchased a new Cadillac "eight."

The new owners of the range will maintain the high quality of stock for which the place is noted and will have

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The first falling off in sales in this market was noted June 11, when the mercury started to rise with the first real signs of summer weather. Washington had been enjoying unprecedented weather; outdoor flowers were slow in maturing, and the cool days and nights kept roses and carnations up to a high standard. Several days of heat, however, produced a marked deterioration in locally grown stock.

White roses with long stems and good foliage have been in marked demand, but in insufficient supply. There has been an excellent sale for American Beauty roses.

There has been an excellent supply of carnations, ranging in price from $1.50 to $4 per hundred. The higher grades are well worth the money, but they have been passed by for cheaper stock because the retailers declare it is impossible to get a better price than 50 cents per dozen for them. It seems that certain stores have been using carnations right along at this price as leaders, and people have the idea that more money is waste. It is getting to the point where it hardly pays to produce good carnations, and if the condition continues, it is safe to predict the killing of the demand.

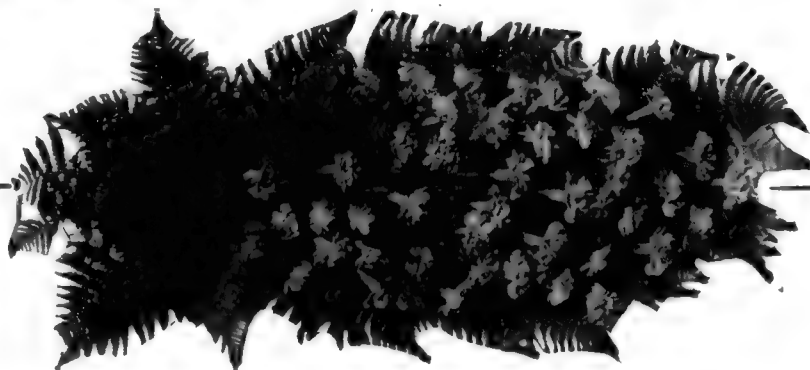

Valley is in good demand. Some excellent outdoor sweet peas are to be had. Cattleya gigas and Mossiae are in good demand. Dendrobium formosum is scarce and miltonia hangs fire.

Club Meeting.

The members of the Florists' Club of Washington, on the occasion of their June meeting, held last week at 1214 F street, northwest, were the guests of the Washington Chamber of Commerce at the closing meeting of that organization for the season. The speakers of the evening were Hon. William Cox Redfield, of the Department of Commerce, and Hon. Koliang Yih, secretary of the Chinese legation. The former gave an interesting talk on the commercial possibilities of Washington. Secretary Yih spoke on the existing relations between the two republics and the opportunities for American firms to capture a large share of the Chinese trade.

A committee, composed of O. A. C. Oehmler, chairman; George W. Hess, W. W. Kimmel, George C. Shaffer and William Marche, was appointed to make suitable preparations for an outing in the near future.

The members indorsed the movement of the Detroit Florists' Club to beautify that city through the use of window

Sydney H. Bayersdorfer, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., and Joseph J. Goudy, who travels for H. A. Dreer, Inc., both of Philadelphia, paid periodic calls on the local dealers during the week. Another Philadelphian seen here was Clifford E. Larzelere, of Wm. Larzelere & Co., custom-house brokers.

Proposals are being invited by the bureau of standards, of the Department of Commerce, for certain gardening work during the coming fiscal year. Blank forms for submitting proposals are obtainable at the office of the bureau, at Connecticut avenue and Pierce Mill road, northwest. The bids will be opened at 2 p. m., June 25.

Milton Moss, of the Huntsville Wholesale Nurseries, Huntsville, Ala., paid a visit to the stores of a number of prominent florists here last week.

F. W. Bolgiano & Co., 1009 B street, northwest, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000. The trustees are F. W. Bolgiano, Raymond B. Ward, Robert T. Maffett, Bessie McE. Bolgiano, Clair V. Allen and Cyrus F. Armiger. The corporation will deal generally in seeds, farming implements, fertilizers and harness.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Gude leave June 18 for Elkins Park, Pa., where Mrs. Gude is to spend several days as the guest of Mrs. Frank Esslinger and Mrs. John Steele. Mr. Gude will go to Philadelphia, where he will join others who are to participate in the opening of the season of the Waretown Rod and Gun Club, at Barnegat Bay, as the guests of Commodore Westcott.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The extremely warm weather has brought in a supply of flowers fully double that of a week ago. The demand has fallen off about one-quarter. Three-quarters the amount of business and twice as many flowers to do it with explains the exceedingly low prices of the week.

Many flowers have reached the market in poor condition, soft and too far open, rendering them useless for shipping and often even below the requirements of the least critical of the local buyers. Good stock in proper condition for out-of-town orders brought fair prices. There was not a great deal of such stock. The quantity buyer had an advantage that was used to push prices down to figures that discouraged work in growing and handling the blooms. There were some exceptions, made so by wedding orders. White orchids were in demand in a limited way. Dendrobium formosum brought good money. Valley sold better than for some time past. Good white roses were also wanted.

Peonies continue plentiful. The crop is over with some growers, but others still are cutting flowers. Roses are plentiful. They bring all prices, in accordance with their quality and their condition when marketed. Carnations are really better than might be supposed in such hot weather. Fine gladioli are a feature. Coreopsis and cornflowers suggest the idea of a scythe and a truck to facilitate cutting and marketing. Gardenias and callas are pretty nearly over for the season. Easter lilies bring low prices and will probably continue to do so until white peonies are over. Sweet peas from outdoors are good, plentiful and cheap. They can be had in every color, rainy days excepted, when the selection is hardly so choice.

Arthur A. Niessen suffered a painful accident June 8, when he caught his foot on a projecting board and fell downstairs at his company's building, Twelfth and Race streets. His arm was broken. Mr. Niessen suffered severely but was able to resume his work June 14.

The Retail Florists' Association held its monthly meeting at the Poor Richard Club June 17. A dinner was the feature of the evening.

Joseph Heacock entertained the Guernsey Breeders' Association and some of the florists at his company's model dairy farm and rose houses at Roelofs, Pa., June 11. There were about seventy-five persons in the party. While still suffering from a recent attack of sciatica, the senator pluckily received his guests in person.

B. Eschner motored to Wernersville June 12, returning by daylight despite the deluge of rain, a distance of sixty-five miles each way. The scenery was greatly enjoyed.

A pretty home wedding that took place in this city June 16 was that of Miss Anna Leister and Jack Neidinger. The happy couple are believed to have gone to New York.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The last two weeks have brought us to the beginning of the dull summer season. Business has been good right along, and at times it has been hard to get enough flowers, but now that the commencements are all over, and many people are going to their summer homes, we can expect things to be dull. There have not been so many good June weddings as usual thus far. Funeral work has been good, however, and the business in bedding plants has been the best ever, and continues to hold up, in spite of the hot summer weather.

Roses are rather short in crop as well as in quality, and gladioli are beginning to appear to help out in their place. There are almost no outdoor-grown flowers on the market at present except sweet peas. It would be profitable to grow more of the good perennials for this time of the year. I have not seen so much as a vase of coreopsis or gailardia on sale this season.

The planting of hardy perennials seems to have been heavier this spring than usual, and there is every indication that it will be still heavier this fall. The trade would do well to grow a wider variety of these useful plants.

Various Notes.

There was a spirited discussion in the daily press this season of the desirability of May 30 being observed as Memorial day here, as it is in the rest of the country. Mr. Lewis wrote some good articles, that were published as editorial matter, and the discussion by readers was interesting. Little, if any, demand was created for flowers, but another year, if the same program is carried out in time, there should be some results. Such things come slowly, but the trade needs this holiday and should educate the public accordingly.

Why does not some one in the trade see that the State Fair Association provides classes for exhibits in this line? It is done in most other states, and would be productive of good to the trade if it were done here. Another year should not be allowed to pass without this having been done. To

The Profit From Withered Flowers

The withered flower problem has always been a loss to you—hasn't it? You never heard of it from a profit stand point before.

The profit that is possible from withered flowers is to sell the flowers before they spoil and are thrown out. This is easily done through their proper preservation in a

McCray Florist's Refrigerator

Here the flowers are preserved at an even temperature and are kept fresh and cool. No other refrigerating system is so efficient as the McCray. It stops the loss from spoilage so common with inadequate refrigeration.

In addition the McCray, with its beautiful plate glass doors and sides permits an inviting and attractive display of the flowers. The compartments are of different sizes to accommodate the various lengths of stems.

The outside woodwork may be had in any finish to match your store's interior. The linings may be secured in either plate mirror or white enamel and are very attractive.

Make up your mind right now to increase your business and decide upon a McCray Refrigerator to help you do it. Every enterprising Florist needs a McCray. Write and learn why.

Next Year's Courses.

The department of floriculture at Massachusetts Agricultural College offers several new courses for the next college year. The outline of courses to be given in floriculture is as follows:

Course 1. Greenhouse Management. This course is designed to familiarize students with the methods followed in the management of greenhouse crops. The students are instructed in the practical operation of glazing, concrete bench construction, watering, potting, fumigating, ventilating, and in the methods of propagation of plants by seed and cuttings. They will be expected to arrange their hours according to the needs of the work. Associate Professor Nehrling and Mr. Thurston.

2. Greenhouse Management. Continuation of course 1. In addition, work in the use of cut flowers and plants in decorative work, the arrangement of flowers in baskets, designs,

5. Greenhouse Construction. The design, construction, cost, maintenance, heating and ventilating of greenhouse structures. Also the drafting of specifications for commercial houses and private ranges. Associate Professor Nehrling.

6. Garden Flowers and Bedding Plants. The propagation and culture of annuals and herbaceous perennials, bulbs, etc. Also detailed study of all bedding plants used in outdoor work. Associate Professor Nehrling and Mr. Thurston.

7. Conservatory Work and Decorative Plants. A study of the types of tropical and subtropical foliage and flowering plants used in conservatory work. The arrangement and care will also be considered. Associate Professor Nehrling.

Collection of Herbaceous Perennials.

This spring a botanical collection of herbaceous perennials has been started under the immediate supervision of A. S. Thurston, who has been making a special study of this subject. The collection, which contains about 400 different species and varieties, will be used for class study, observation and experimental study. The collection will be added to annually, and it is intended to make this collection the largest and best in New England. The garden is composed of eighteen beds, with 5-foot grass walks. The main part of the garden is made up of three series of beds, with four beds in a series; each of the beds is fifty-four feet long and twelve feet wide. One row of six plants of each species or variety is the unit, and for convenience of study each genus is kept together. At the head of the garden there is a double row of beds, each thirty feet long and eight feet wide. To one side of the garden there are three large blocks of peonies.

Various Notes.

With the close of the college year, the regular work in floriculture has ended. Professor A. H. Nehrling, the head of the department, will stay in Amherst through the month of July to teach in the summer school, in which he offers two courses, one in amateur floriculture and one in garden flowers. At the close of the summer school, Professor Nehrling will take a trip to the Pacific coast, where he will attend the two expositions and also take in the S. A. F. convention. He will return by way of Florida, where he will visit his father, Henry Nehrling.

A. S. Thurston, the assistant in floriculture, will spend the summer in graduate study at Cornell University.

The department strongly advises its students to get all the practical experience possible, and so each summer a number of the men go out into practical work. As usual, the department has placed a number of men for the summer.

During the summer months, the department will make numerous repairs, among which will be the painting of the greenhouses and the construction of concrete frames.

THE GENUS IRIS

By WILLIAM RICKATSON DYKES

With 48 colored plates and 30 line drawings in the text

This magnificent work brings together the available information on all known species of Iris. The most striking feature of the book is the life-size colored plates, reproduced from originals drawn from living plants—making it a volume of remarkable beauty as well as of great scientific importance.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Gentlemen:-

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.25 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received-----	$513.25
Less 20% allowed senders-----	102.60
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.65

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florist's business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,

The Market.

The school exercises caused a larger demand for flowers than in any previous year. Roses were used more than anything else, especially red and white. There were plenty to meet the demand, but they brought good prices. That funeral work was heavier last week than usual is the report of most of the retailers and June wedding orders are larger than ever before, from all reports. Never has there been so much rain at this time of the year, but the cool weather is a help to the cut flower growers, as good stock is being sent in.

Various Notes.

At the June club meeting it was decided that a picnic will be held July 28 at Holsinger Bros.' grove, on the Hocker Grove line. It is planned for every florist, nurseryman, seedsman and gardener to make it a holiday and close his place of business for that day.

Miss Marian Newell, for whom a chrysanthemum was named, is a graduate of Westport High school this spring. Walter Newell is at home for his summer vacation from the state university, where he is taking an agricultural course. Arthur Newell is the proud father of these two young people.

T. J. Noll reports business a decided increase over last year at this time.

fine lot of cyclamen plants. Some of them have as high as thirty well developed leaves. His place in general is in excellent shape.

Henry Kusik & Co. report business as better than ever.

Forest Hill cemetery is filling its greenhouse with mums for a fall crop. In the spring the entire place is devoted to bedding stock to be sold in the cemetery.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. says fancy baskets and pot plants have sold well, especially for hospital use.

Adolph Mohr has completed his new place, which will be devoted to mums, the old place being used for pot plants. His new greenhouse is 21x100 and the service building is 20x50, with a concrete basement. He has a fine batch of Cincinnati begonias, over 2,500.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Flowers in abundance are arriving and the demand is not at all robust. This week, however, signs of betterment are apparent and prospects are good for improved trade during the balance of the month. White roses continue in somewhat short supply and sell well. Russell, Hadley, Miller and Ophelia are in demand. Yellows are of poor color now and move slowly. American Beauties are in good supply, but the demand is only moderate. Hadley, Richmond and other red roses have cleaned up moderately well, but from now on will be in good demand. Carnations, thanks to the absence of excessive heat, are of good quality. A few fancy flowers have made $3 and $4, but the majority go at $1 to $2. Sweet peas continue abundant. Small supplies from outdoors are now available. These are of superior color to those grown under glass. Fine flowers sell well, but a great many short stemmed flowers realize little.

There is now a good supply of both single and double peonies, in which trade has not been good. Pure white and pink are the only colors selling at all well. Cornflowers are abundant, from outdoors. Yellow marguerites continue in heavy supply. Liliun longiflorum moves slowly, as do cattleyas. Lily of the valley is in good demand, but much of it is of inferior quality. Such flowers as snapdragons, German iris, calendulas, stocks and feverfew are hard to sell. Aquilegias and single pyrethrums are popular hardy perennials for window displays.

Bedding plants continue to sell well. Stocks of geraniums are pretty well cleaned out.

June Flower Show.

German irises were the principal feature at the exhibition in Horticultural hall June 5 and 6, filling seven large tables. For twenty-four varieties Miss Grace Sturtevant, of Wellesley, a new exhibitor, won with a splendid lot; T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., second, and E. N. Dunphe, third. Weld Garden, Duncan Finlayson, gardener, took first prize for twenty-five and twenty varieties of hardy herbaceous flowers. Rhododendrons made a smaller show than usual, as the date was too early for them. Prizes went to Henry Stewart, gardener for Miss Cornelia Warren; T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., and W. C. Winter.

William Thatcher, gardener for Mrs. J. L. Gardner, won for the best orchid group, with a first-class arrangement. Martin Sullivan, gardener for W. Whitman, had the best twelve plants of Canterbury bells. Henry Stewart showed a grand lot of Oncidium flexuosum, beautifully flowered. He secured a cultural certificate for Cattleya citrina. He also showed genistas, Canterbury bells, Iceland poppies, etc. F. J. Dolansky had some fine Cattleya gigas and Mossiae; also Miltonia vexillaria, finely grown, carrying nine to eleven flowers per stalk. George Page, gardener for Mrs. Frederick Ayer, had sixty vases of fine aquilegias, also Canterbury bells, peonies and German irises.

Eric H. Wetterlow, gardener for Mrs. Lester Leland, secured a first-class certificate for a new seedling pink zonale pelargonium, Lady Roscoe x Mary Pelton. Donald McKenzie, gardener for E. B. Dane, showed a pair of Clerodendron Balfourianum. William Thatcher had a well flowered Gloriosa Rothschildiana. Martin Sullivan showed Ghent azaleas and German irises. Walter Hunnewell, T. D. Hatfield, gardener, received a silver medal for an unnamed display of cut rhododendrons. The Boston Market Gardeners' Association had a grand collection of choice vegetables, mostly greenhouse-grown.

J. K. Alexander, of East Bridgewater, Mass., the Wellesley Nursery Co. and others had excellent exhibits of German irises.

The Second June Show.

The second of the June exhibitions at Horticultural hall June 12 and 13 should have been mainly peonies, but the belated season made the showing of these rather small and the exhibition of June 19 and 20 will bring out an immense display from this section. For twenty named varieties, Wm. Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, was first; M. Sullivan, gardener to Wm. Whitman, second. For twenty-five double white, Mrs. E. M. Gill was first. For twenty-five any other double, Wm. Thatcher was first. The uncompleted classes, fifteen in number, will be competed for June 19 in connection with the show of the American Peony Society.

There was a big show of German iris from T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., who also showed peonies; Wellesley Nurseries, Martin Sullivan, George Page and others. Eastern Nurseries showed eighty vases of hardy herbaceous plants. They secured a certificate of merit for Potentilla fruticosa parvifolia. Jackson Dawson received honorable mention for Azalea Hazel Dawson, which is A. ledifolia x A. Kämpferi. T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co. had some fine specimens of laburnums. Mrs. E. M. Gill and Henry Stewart, gardener to Miss Cornelia Warren, displayed cut flowers. Martin Sullivan had poppies and peonies and Wm. Thatcher had Canterbury bells. N. F. Comley showed Buck's Tresco tomato in pots, heavily fruited.

June 19 and 20 a large show of roses, peonies, strawberries, etc., is certain. The dates are a week too early for the best roses and strawberries, however.

Various Notes.

Charles E. Evans, of Watertown, had more early double peonies than any other local grower. Many of these were forced in frames. P. festiva maxima is his leading sort. He has a fine cut of Gladiolus America. His large stock of hydrangeas is about all sold.

Albert Roper, of Tewksbury, is getting top market price for his beautiful, new rose-pink seedling, No. 360. This outclasses all others of its color. Grace and Alice Coombs continue to come good.

The W. W. Edgar Co., of Waverley, will pull down one of the old plant houses this season and replace with a Lord & Burnham house forty feet wide. Many other improvements also will be made.

Wm. Hannan & Son, of Dorchester, report a splendid trade in bedding plants. Out of 30,000 geraniums they have hardly 1,000 left. They grew three houses of Spiraea Pink Sensation for Memorial day, which netted them a handsome profit.

Wm. R. Morris, of Wellesley Hills, will plant Hoosier Beauty and Black Beauty among other roses this season.

Henry Penn and wife left June 15 on their transcontinental trip. He will visit many retailers at the various cities on his journey and hopes to see as many of them as possible. His principal stopping places will be: Buffalo, June 16; Cleveland, June 17; Detroit, June 18; Milwaukee, June 19; Denver, June 26; Colorado Springs, June 27; Manitou, June 28; Salt Lake City, June 29 and July 5; Los Angeles, July 6 to 10; San Diego, July 10 to 13; Riverside, July 13 to 15; Los Angeles, July 14; Santa Barbara, July 14 and 15; Del Monte, July 15 to 17; Santa Cruz, July 17; San Francisco, July 17 to 23; Port-

Wm. R. Nicholson says his carnations, which were planted out early this season, are making splendid growth. He believes in plowing plenty of cow peas and other humus into the ground. This keeps his soil in fine shape. He will only plant one house early.

W. C. Ware, of Quincy, is sending to W. A. Hastings a splendid lot of outdoor sweet peas and bachelor's buttons.

Mann Bros. are starting to cut a fine crop of outdoor Spanish iris this week.
They also have splendid cornflowers outside. Lester H. Mann says that outdoor bulbs never paid so well as this season.

In Galvin's central circular window on Park street June 12 I noted a charming arrangement with large vases of Gladiolus America at the back, and in front of these were light colored fancy caladiums, the edging being Cyrtomium Rochfordianum and Asplenium Nidus-Avis.

S. J. Goddard says he never had so big a demand for bedding plants as this season, everything selling out clean.
He still cuts splendid sweet peas and carnations.

Patrick Welch, at his new wholesale store, continues to do a splendid counter and shipping trade.

In H. R. Comley's windows June 12
I noted fine vases of Trollius Asiaticus excelsior and Leptosyne maritima; also, an assortment of gloxinias.

The grounds of Prof. C. S. Sargent, Holm Lea, Brookline, were thrown open to the public June 12 and 13 and thousands of visitors availed themselves of the opportunity to view the fine displays of azaleas and rhododendrons.

William H. Elliott has a splendid cut of Christie-Miller, Taft, Kaiserin and other summer roses from his Brighton establishment.

The Boston Cut Flower Co. reports good business, with many funeral and wedding orders.

June continues to keep up the records of preceding months for dryness. Our

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market last week was in such a condition that a great deal of stock was dumped for want of demand. The almost continuous rain caused outdoor stock to be of little value, but it was not missed, as the wholesale houses had large supplies of all kinds of indoor stock of good quality. All are complaining that the demand was slow.

Roses are most plentiful; the hot weather caused them to come in wide open and rendered many unsalable.
Especially is this true of Killarney and Ward. Carnations, too, have been in heavy supply and cannot be moved unless at a cheap figure. One large retailer offered carnations June 12, at forty for $1. Sweet peas and gladioli are abundant. Candidum and Easter lilies are standing still, as are such other outdoor flowers as are coming in. This week will end the season in school and social circles. The trade can now begin to sing the song, "In the Good Old Summer Time."

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its monthly meeting June 10, in Odd Fellows' hall.
This was the twenty-ninth anniversary of the club and the members responded nicely to the call for a large attendance. President Bourdet opened the meeting. The trustees reported that they had arranged for the annual picnic to be held at Romona park, July 22. The club made the usual appropriation of $50. The trustees were given full power to act.

E. W. Guy, of the carnation meeting committee, reported in the absence of Chairman Ammann and said that the County Growers' Association had assured them of its hearty support in the coming meeting of the American Carnation Society at St. Louis. The chair appointed Messrs. Fillmore, Guy and Wells a committee to draft resolutions on the death of H. J. Weber. An appropriation of $15 was given for expenses for any outdoor meeting that may take place during July, August or September. An invitation was extended to the County Growers' Association to attend the annual picnic, July 22.

W. S. Wells spoke on the possibility of establishing an experiment station here. This was fully discussed and will again be taken up at the July meeting. For the good of the club, all ex-presidents were called upon for a talk. To this, Messrs. Fillmore, Guy, Beneke, Irish, Cannon and Weber each gave interesting reminiscences of the years they had served as presiding officers, mixing in a few humorous stories, which were greatly enjoyed. President Bourdet made some well chosen remarks. The trustees supplied plenty of good cigars and those who failed to respond to the invitation to attend missed a most pleasant afternoon.

The secretary announced that the next meeting will be held July 15, when the nomination of officers will take place.

Various Notes.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. A. Meyer, Jr., on South Jefferson avenue, June 9. An enjoyable afternoon was spent. The circle will be entertained at its next meeting, July 14, by Mrs. John Steidle, at Olivette, Mo.

Edward Kalisch, of Kalisch Bros.
 Floral Co., spent June 8 and 9 at Jefferson City, Mo., preparing the decorations for a large wedding. The bonquets were made here and shipped to that city. They arrived in first-class shape.

The great beds of Gruss an Teplitz roses at Compton Hill and Tower Grove parks are in full bloom and attracting a great deal of attention.

John J. Burke, who has been south for the last year, working in floral establishments in that part of the country, is home again. He says he is looking for a good location to open in the fall.

J. W. Schuette, of the South St.
 Louis Nurseries, has retired from business. He and his daughters will start this month on a western trip, taking in the San Francisco fair before returning home.

George Madsen, head of the Alton
 Floral Co., in company with Mrs.
 Madsen, spent a day in the city last week. Mr. Madsen says he has started his new range. The material, from the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, is on the grounds.

C. C. Sanders, head of the Sanders' Nurseries, spent a few days last week with his son, Walter, at St. James, Mo.
 Now that the season is at an end, Mr.
 Sanders will spend most of his time motoring through the country.

Wendell W. Webster, of Webster's Greenhouses, Centralia, Ill., with a party of friends, motored to St. Louis last week and spent a few days here calling on the wholesalers, retailers and at the local headquarters of The Review.

J. Erickson, formerly in business at Atlanta, Ga., who recently opened a flower store in the Jai Alai building as the Erickson Floral Co., has closed the place. He says it was not a paying proposition, but may try it again in the fall in another location.

Wallace J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, has made a fine success in growing roses this year. His stock is classed among the best coming to this market.
 Hadley and Milady were especially fine. For next season, Mr. Pilcher will try a house of Beauties.

he will have a good story to tell at the Detroit nurserymen's meeting next week.

The heads of the five wholesale houses met at C. A. Kuehn's place and decided that starting with June 14 and continuing for three months they will close at 5 p. m. daily and at noon on Saturdays, to remain closed until Monday mornings. Now that the whole-salers have started Sunday closing it would be well for the retailers to follow.

Miss Lillian Weber and Frank Delaney, employees of the Mullanphy Florists, at Seventh and Locust streets, will be married June 23. Both have been in the employ of this company for the last four years. Miss Anna Bernardt, another employee, will be maid-of-honor and William Seeger, president of the company, has agreed to act as best man. The wedding will be held at the home of the bride, 3808
St. Louis avenue.

The following out-of-town florists attended the club meeting, June 10:
E. W. Guy and Gus Grossart, of Belle-

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.;
 Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
 Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., June 22 to 24, 1915.

BECAUSE of the peculiar weather conditions, seed crops are in a most uncertain condition.

J. M. CLARK, of the Leonard Seed Co., left Chicago for a trip through the Michigan and Wisconsin seed crop districts June 15. He will be gone about two weeks.

APPLICATION for a charter has been filed for the Everett Seed Co., Atlanta, Ga., by E. C., I. B., J. H. and O. N. Everett. The capital stock will be $15,000, with the privilege of increase to $100,000.

THE first Harrisii bulbs of the 1915 crop are due at New York within three weeks. The latest advices indicate improved quality, an increased production of the larger sizes and a supply equal to the probable demand in the United States.

ARTICLES of incorporation have been filed by the Sloan Seed Co., of Palo Alto, Cal. The directors of the corporation are F. C., J. E. and D. L. Sloan. F. C. Sloan, as the junior member, has conducted the business of D. L. Sloan & Son, of Palo Alto, which grows onion seed.

INCORPORATION papers have been issued to the Caughey-Jossman Co., Detroit, Mich., to carry on a business in wholesale and retail seeds, grain and produce. The capital stock is $100,000, and the stockholders are F. T. Caughey, Grosse Pointe; Joseph R. Jossman, Oxford, and William R. Jossman, Detroit.

WHAT will the pansy seed situation be this year? It is an uncertainty. Of course, there are considerable quantities of imported stock carried over from late deliveries last season that, if properly stored, are as good as new seed, and there is an annual increase in the production of American seed, but the majority of the pansy seed used in the United States still comes from Germany. If the British can maintain their blockade we shall not have any fresh German pansy seed in time for this season's use.

HJALMAR HARTMANN & Co., Copenhagen, say: "Owing to the present situation, where many men are called to the security army, and the prices for bread-corn have risen considerably, many farmers have devoted themselves to growing of this, as it requires less labor and gives a very satisfactory return. This fact makes it more difficult to induce the farmers to grow seed and we are

THE SPENDER

In business, the man who makes really big money is the spender—not the saver. He is the one, too, who spends when others save, who buys when things look black, and who sells when times are good. He spends in order to invest. To invest means to convert money into some other form of wealth—usually to employ it for some profitable use. If you are a grower and want to make money, you must spend money—you must invest in something that will increase in value under your control, by reason of your ability to produce flowers and market them. And the best thing we know of in the flower business is lily bulbs. They are a sure crop in the hands of a good grower, and they can be used for so many different purposes that no other flowers can compare with them for general use. Horseshoe Brand lily bulbs have always been in a class by themselves because of their good quality; and they have been responsible for more profit in lily growing than any other brand known. Prices are reasonable—deliveries any time.

Not how cheap but how good.

convinced that the general growing of seed will be less than in former years."

THE Gray Seed Tape Co., of Plano, Ill., has outgrown its quarters and has leased part of the old Acorn Brass building, on Stone avenue, Aurora, Ill. The entire works will be removed from Plano to Aurora.

FROM Holland comes this comment: "There will be a good chance to sell all kinds of seeds next autumn, as the war trouble will cause a shortage everywhere. In former years Germany exported large quantities of all kinds of seeds, but this year there will be no seed crop of any importance, as every available yard of ground will be devoted to foodstuffs."

No doubt the United States can produce most, if not all, of the flower seeds that are needed here, but there are manifold difficulties. Stocks must be bred up; reputations established. And skilled labor is lacking; the same families in Germany have been employed in the work for generations. So it is certain American-grown seeds will cost more and at first will not command the confidence that is given the best German sources of supply.

To insure the supply of sugar beet seed for the crop of 1917, the Great Western Sugar Co. has planted about 400 acres near Billings, Mont., and in various places in Colorado. Of the 7,500,000 pounds of sugar beet seed annually required by the United States, less than one-twentieth has hitherto been produced in this country, most of it coming from Germany. Through the intervention of the federal government the supply for 1916 was obtained after the war broke out, but there is much question whether Germany will be able to furnish this country's seed for the 1917 crop.

BOUND FOR FRISCO.

AND WILSON are doing what they think to be right according to their judgment, or convictions, or opinions. But to be right in the flower business the up-to-date florist does not have to speculate, nor doubt, nor stumble. He can have the raw facts before him in choosing the right snapdragon to grow. He can reckon his profits by his neighbor's success.

The cars were to be laid out at the stops en route as per itinerary prepared when it was hoped the size of the party would justify a special train.

MONTANA'S SEED LIEN LAW.

Montana Session Laws, 1915, chapter 23, give a seller of grain seed a lien upon the crop for which the seed was sold, if the lien is preserved in the manner fixed by the law, provided that the lien shall not exceed the purchase price of 700 bushels. The lien survives harvesting of the crop and attaches to grain threshed therefrom. To preserve the lien, there must be filed in the office of the county recorder, within thirty days after the seed is furnished, a verified statement showing the kind and quantity of seed furnished, its value, the name of the purchaser and a description of the land on which the seed has been or is to be planted. The statement must be filed in the county where the land lies. A separate section declares that the lien shall have priority over all other liens on the crops affected.

PRINCESS*20—The New Upright Pansy

This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing, and extremely weather-proof, enduring many storms without damage to its flower. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture, on heavy stems carried well above the foliage. Attractive by the brilliancy of its colors.

500 Seeds 20c; 1000 Seeds 35c; 1/4 oz. $1.00; 1/2 oz. $2.00; 1 oz. $7.50.

- 24—Kenilworth Show—A fine strain.
- 38—Mme. Perret—Red and wine shades.
- 40—Zebra—Fine striped mixture.
- 42—Adonis—Light blue, white center.
- 44—Black—Almost coal black.
- 46—Black with bronze center.
- 48—Lord Beaconsfield—Purple shaded white.
- 50—Bronze—Beautiful bronze.
- 52—Bronze with yellow center.
- 54—Velvet Brown with yellow center.
- 56—Havana Brown.
- 58—Havana Brown with yellow center.
- 60—Cardinal—Curled, bright red, dark blotch.
- 62—Cecily—Steel blue, margined white.
- 64—Goliath—Large curled yellow, blotched.

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

22—KENILWORTH STRAIN—The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are from 3 1/2 to 4 inches; it is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.

26—KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE—Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower or for exhibition purposes, for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 inches long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.

28—MASTERPIECE—A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance, large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stems.

30—GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES—A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich velvety colors, reds are particularly conspicuous; the petals being distinctly marked with three or five large dark blotches.

32—GIANT PARISIAN—The flowers are of enormous size, and beautifully marked, mostly five dark blotches on white and yellow ground. An unusually showy mixture.

NEW SEED NOW READY

All sorts and mixtures, except the new Pansy Princess, are $5.00 per oz.; $1.25 per 1/4-oz.; 5000 seeds, $1.00; trade packet of 1000 seeds, 25c; any 5 pkts., $1.00. Please order by number.

- 66—Hero—Curled, deep blue shaded white.
- 68—Emp. William—Ultramarine blue, violet eye.
- 70—Eros—Velvety brown, yellow margin.

that the sale of such a preparation involves an implied warranty on the part of the seller that it is reasonably fit for the purpose for which it is sold, but that there is no such warranty when the manufacturer prescribes the manner in which the goods are to be used, and such instructions are not followed. In this case it appeared that defendant's general manager was instructed by plaintiff that two applications of Dynamine would be required to destroy grass or weeds, but that the general manager did not communicate this instruction to other representatives of defendant who were charged with the use of the chemical. On this state of facts, the court held that there was no implied warranty that one application of the preparation would prove effective, and hence defendant could not avoid liability for the agreed price because one application failed to produce the results desired. (Interstate Chemical Co. vs. M. K. & T. Ry. Co., 169 Southwestern Reporter 1120.) S.

RULINGS ON REFUNDS.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has decided that the rates on beans and mustard seed from Lompoc, Cal., to St. Louis are not unreasonable, and has dismissed the complaint of the Lompoc Produce Co., which attacked the rates.

The commission has directed the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad to refund $16 to the Barteldes Seed Co., on account of overcharges on seed shipped from Oklahoma City, Okla., to Denver, Colo. E. H. P.

HAIRY VETCH SEED SCARCE.

The greater part of the hairy vetch seed used in the United States has been imported from Russia and Germany, the annual importations increasing from less than 100,000 pounds in 1906 to over 2,000,000 pounds in 1914. On account of the conditions resulting from the European war, only 179,000 pounds of seed were imported between November 1, 1914, and May 15, 1915, and there seems to be little prospect of more coming in before seeding time this fall. This will result in only a small proportion of the normal supply of hairy vetch seed being available for this year's sowing. Although the domestic production of hairy vetch seed has increased for a number of years, it has not increased in proportion to the demand, and the price of the seed has constantly advanced as its use has become more general.

Farmers who have hairy vetch growing are urged by the specialists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture to save their own supply of seed this year, so that they may be able to continue the production of this valuable crop. It is not to be expected, however, that prices higher than those of last year will be obtained, as the high price of the seed under normal conditions in recent years has been the chief factor in limiting the use of hairy vetch in the past.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Employees of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., Los Angeles, on their Outing, June 6, 1915.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Work for school exercises and graduations has helped out considerably this week, and altogether trade has been quite up to the average for this season. Weddings also help, of course, and some excellent decorations have been carried out by our leading retailers. The indoor roses are good and are about equal to the demand. Good carnations are scarce, though there are more than enough of the other kind. Sweet peas have improved wonderfully and are now exceptionally good and plentiful. Orchids are not much in evidence and valley is scarce. Outdoor flowers are plentiful and there is much more blue than usual, as agapanthus, delphiniums and cornflowers are all in at the same time. Greens are plentiful, especially Asparagus plumosus. There is a spirited demand for palms and other plants for decorations.

Various Notes.

A most successful outing was held at the invitation of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., on Sunday, June 6. All the employees and their families were asked and about 200 accepted the invitation. They were taken in automobiles from the store, first to the trial grounds of the firm on the Whittier road, then to the new lath house at the new nursery site near Montebello, and all showed great interest in the work being carried on there. A photograph of the crowd was taken there; then all aboard for the San Gabriel river, where a barbecue was prepared, to which all did justice. After attending to the wants of the inner man, a ball game and various other sports were enjoyed. When it was discovered that the temporary bridge over the river was not nailed down and the planks had been taken to the mainland, there was some consternation among the ladies, but all reached dry land in safety, much to the amusement of the camera squad. The results of the snapshots are to be sent to Venice to aid the purity brigade in modeling the bathing dresses for that popular town. "A thoroughly enjoyable day," was the unanimous verdict.

At the Roserie I noticed some elegant though simple little baskets, the work of R. Shenk, who is now associated with this store.

Fine sweet peas have been making an elegant window display at Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson's, and funeral work has kept up remarkably well.

Taking the week of Memorial day all through, A. Knopf, of the Redondo Floral Co., says it was the best in the history of the company since he has been associated with it. Mr. Knopf is not given to exaggerated statements, either.

Another entrant into the company of indoor cut-flower growers in the fall will be Polder & Groen, who are building two houses, each 26x250. These houses have been purchased from George Watson.

Frank Wilhelm has an exceptionally good stock of the best commercial mums this season and reports a good demand.

Replanting is in full swing at H. W. Turner's range at Montebello. Mr. Turner reports a particularly heavy demand for Ophelia rose plants, many of which go to northern points. The new house is not yet glazed, but the plants are set out and are making wonderful progress. About 300 varieties, including both novelties and good standard kinds, are planted in this house, and Mr. Turner is clearing the ground for another house. Who was it said a few years ago that he had finished building?

A recent visit to the Lomita nursery of Staiger & Mundwiler showed everything in first-class order. There is an exceptionally fine crop of Easter lilies, of which many hundreds are being cut daily. I also noted a fine stock of flowering begonias of various kinds and an elegant lot of kentias in all sizes, from seedlings just starting to fine specimens. Mr. Staiger says retail business has been better this year than he has ever before known it. H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business is tending to get down to the usual summer dullness, but so far has been above expectations, at least at the larger downtown establishments.

There is still a good deal of graduation business for various schools around the bay, and June weddings are about as numerous as ever. Even the small counter trade keeps up well for this time of year, while large decorations absorb much stock that would otherwise be a dead surplus.

Flowers, however, are plentiful, and, with little demand for shipment, prices tend to sag. This is especially true of sweet peas and carnations, of which more are brought in than can readily be sold. Sweet peas are fine at present. The market is well filled, also, with all sorts of summer annuals, scabiosas, stocks, cornflowers, marigolds, gypsophilas, etc. Really good gladioli are not plentiful, though there is a great deal of ordinary stock of many varieties. Panama is proving popular. A few cactus dahlias are appearing, but so far dahlias in general are nothing extra. Peruvian lilies are more plentiful, and a little phlox is appearing. Some good late peonies are coming from outside points, but the supply is limited and there is no great demand for them.

Roses are still plentiful, and the less attractive offerings are hard to dispose of. Ophelia is fine and is rapidly gaining in popularity. Russell is doing as well as ever. Some say the weather is too hot for Cecile Brunner, but there seem to be plenty of good blossoms. Sprays of cut ramblers are used considerably, and there are still good potted ramblers, which come in nicely for weddings. New white hydrangeas are coming in, but move rather slowly. Spiræas are plentiful. This is rather a remarkable season for orchids, as cattleyas continue in liberal supply and are of high quality on the average; the demand is better than usual at this season. Greens of all kinds are moving well.

HENRY W. TURNER
Wholesale Florist MONTEBELLO, CAL.

tions for membership were received from F. Metzner, of Mountain View, Cal.; Al. J. Nevraumont, of the California Seed Co., this city; H. A. Hyde, of Watsonville, Cal.; J. Walter, a local gardener, and K. Nyeland, of Oakland, propagator of plants for the University of California.

H. Plath, on behalf of the exhibition committee, discussed prospects for the fall flower show, and advised members to begin growing stock for it, if they have not already started. W. A. Hofinghoff reported that the ladies had organized to entertain the visiting ladies of the S. A. F., and would be prepared to see that they had an enjoyable time during the convention. The question of a picnic came up for discussion, and as it appeared that a good many members, few of whom were at the meeting, desired a picnic, F. Pelicano, F. Bertrand and V. Podesta were appointed to consider the matter. Dan Raymond, who had been nominated for treasurer, withdrew, and J. A. Axell, of the E. W. McLellan Co., was elected to the office.

The lecture of the evening was given by Prof. Stevens, of the University of California, on "The History of Landscape Gardening," and was considered one of the most interesting talks heard by this society in a long time. Many fine slides were shown, some interesting ones being of the exposition at San Diego.

The evening's exhibits were of considerable interest. Frank Pelicano showed a bunch of Gladiolus Panama, about the first to appear here, which was rated at 95 points. H. Plath showed a large pot of Adiantum Plathi, a new seedling, believed to be a hybrid of A. gracillimum and A. cuneatum Roenbeckii. The fern makes a rapid, strong and large growth, with delicate leaves of good color, and the stems stand up strong. It is expected to be of some commercial importance when enough plants are available, though of course it cannot be propagated from seed. This was rated at 95 points. J. Gill showed a single flower of the new hybrid brier rose, Juliet, rated at 60 points.

Various Notes.

The ladies connected with the florists' and nursery trades of San Francisco and vicinity have held several meetings in the last few weeks, organizing a local Ladies' Auxiliary Society, of which Mrs. Vallance, of Oakland, is president; Mrs. H. Plath, vice-president; Mrs. J. Gill, secretary, and Mrs. Wessel, treasurer. The principal work in hand is to arrange for suitable entertainment for the ladies of the S. A. F.

Large shipments of plants have arrived during the last few weeks for the convention garden, and planting is progressing rapidly. About all the space originally provided for has been taken.

Messrs. Fotheringham, Plath and James, judges in the international rose contest for the $1,000 prize, are keeping pretty busy these days, as the contest plantings are blooming rapidly, and some fine and interesting roses are appearing.

The date of the American Sweet Pea Society's show in the Palace of Horticulture was again changed, on account of the recent hot weather, which has quickly brought the sweet peas to their best, and the show opened June 11. Chas. Howard, of Los Angeles, came up to act as one of the judges, the others being John McLaren, Emery Smith and G. A. Dennison. There were about 1,500 entries. The society held a meeting on the afternoon of June 11 at the Inside Inn.

Daniel MacRorie, of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., is making a business trip to Eureka, Cal. The MacRorie-McLaren Co., a few days ago, carried out one of the largest decorations ever done in this city, on the occasion of the convention of the National Electric Light Association. A large colonnade of classic style was erected around the Dewey monument in Union Square, each column being surmounted by an urn of hydrangeas, and the entire colonnade being garlanded with oak. Around the base of the central shaft was a great bank of over 800 specimen hydrangeas, shading from deep pink to pale pink. The base of the shaft itself was covered with eucalyptus studded with 'novagems,' or large imitation jewels, which, with a powerful indirect lighting system at night, made a wonderfully beautiful effect.

B. M. Joseph's shop made a hit with the first showing of phlox for the season. This house a few days ago had a handsome display of wedding bowers, brides' bouquets, etc., and has sold a great many fine shower bouquets during the week.

The Hogan-Kooyman Co. is receiving a fine lot of peonies from Carl Purdy's place, in Mendocino county.

The United Flower & Supply Co., on Bush street, is greatly increasing its cold storage facilities.

This week's obituary column contains a report of the death of G. H. Evans, of the Jordan Park Floral Co.

PORTLAND, ORE.The Market.

The weather has been cool, with heavy showers at night and light ones during the day. The showers coming on the days of the rose festival celebration considerably missed the hours when parades were being held. Preparation of floral exhibits for the festival has been the ruling feature in the market. Millions of outdoor roses were used in decorations; still the demand for greenhouse-grown stock was strong. Carnations, sweet peas and snapdragons did not fare so well. Delphiniums, gaillardias, campanulas, marguerites and other varieties of outdoor stock were used extensively with wild greens. The demand for funeral work has been normal.

The Rose Show.

The Portland Rose Society held its twenty-third annual show June 9 and 10. About 500 exhibits were placed by ninety-two exhibitors. Roses in groups and singles and decorated tables were shown. A pink Joseph Hill rose was judged to be the best single bloom; an Ulrich Brunner was a close second. Many prizes were awarded, among them being seventy silver cups. The Beaverton Nursery Co. had an exhibit of peonies, the only exhibit permitted which was not of roses.

The Rose Festival.

The ninth annual celebration of this distinctive feature, which has warranted the name of the Rose City, was held June 9 to 11. The directors of What stock have you for sale to the trade?

Is it moving as it should?
No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.—Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

the festival were elected at a convention of all the civic organizations and the expense money was provided by popular subscription. The most prominent events were the parade of 4,000 school children on Wednesday, the floral parade on Thursday and the industrial parade and the illuminated night parade on Friday. The grand prize in the floral parade was awarded to the float of the Washington high school, which was decorated by Clarke Bros.

Floral Center.

The Portland Floral Society co-operated with the festival managers in establishing a floral center, which was, in fact, the center of the celebration. This was located on two of the park blocks and included the intervening street.

The arrangement of the ground was planned by Julius Dorsche, chairman of the Floral Society's committee. It comprised nine interior plats, which were filled with plants plunged in sawdust and sand, for which the festival managers paid at the rate of $7\frac{1}{2}$ cents per square foot of plat. These plats were filled as follows: One plat in center, filled by the Floral Society; one plat filled by Rahn & Herbert Co. with salvias; one plat filled by Rahn & Herbert Co. with pink snapdragons; one plat filled by Clarke Bros. with King Humbert cannas and geraniums; one plat filled by Wilson & Crout Co. with red geraniums, heliotropes and ageratums; one plat filled by Holden Floral Co. with snapdragons, hydrangeas and potted roses; one plat filled by Clarke Bros. with heliotropes, ageratums, salvias and stocks; one plat filled by the Tonseth Floral Co. with red geraniums and heliotropes; one plat filled by the Swiss Floral Co. with pink Pride of Portland petunias, with a banana palm surrounded by purple petunias and pink hydrangeas as the centerpiece. Also there were twenty large urns alongside the central exhibit, filled with pink hydrangeas by Martin & Forbes Co.

The spaces outside the central plats and those adjoining the central space were allotted to individual exhibits. Sixteen booths were erected, fourteen of them being occupied by competitive exhibits of roses by amateurs in community exhibits. These were judged

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

President, H. B. Chase, Chase, Ala.; Vice-president, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Fortieth annual meeting, Detroit, Mich., June 23 to 25, 1915.

THE executrix of the estate of Hiram T. Jones, Elizabeth, N. J., offers the Union County Nurseries for sale as a going concern, with or without the real estate. If not so disposed of July 15, some other action will follow.

THE business of Clarence H. Weeks, at Lyons, N. Y., has been incorporated as the C. H. Weeks Nursery Co., with a capital stock of $15,000. The incorporators are Clarence H. Weeks and Mabel G. Weeks, of Lyons, and Frank N. Greenlaw, of Newark.

INCORPORATION papers have been issued to the Dansville 5 and 10-cent Nurseries, Dansville, N. Y., permitting the concern to deal in nursery trees and stock. The capital stock is $10,000, and the incorporators are F. E., W. J. and A. E. Maloney, all of Dansville.

THE loss from the fire which destroyed the big packing shed of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., at Owatonna, Minn., last week, is said to exceed $30,000. The shed cost $28,000, and there was much stock in the building at the time of the fire. Most of the loss is covered by insurance.

AFTER thirty years' occupation of the present quarters, at East avenue and Pitkin street, Chase Bros. Co., Rochester, N. Y., will move to the sixth floor of the Warner building, on St. Paul street, near East Main street. Need of additional space required the removal. In its new quarters the company will have 7,000 feet of floor space, compared with 5,500 feet in the old building.

ACCORDING to W. H. Kessler, manager of the Elmwood Nurseries & Greenhouses, at Birmingham, Ala., last winter was without precedent in its destruction of ornamental evergreen shrubs. Varieties that had not been known to be injured before, suffered badly and were even killed outright. Among them were Ligustrum Japonicum, L. aureo-marginatum, L. Nepalense, Buxus sempervirens, Prunus Laurocerasus and Euonymus Japonicus. The reason is thought to be that the shrubs were kept in growing condition until quite late, and then were subjected to a great drop in temperature.

NURSEYMEN AND THE WAR.

An Importer's View.

Replying to your letter of June 5, we do not think that the entrance of Italy into the European war will have the slightest effect on the production of French fruit stocks; all of the fruit seeds are produced in France. Some Myrobalan seeds have been imported from Italy into France, but the French nurserymen are not dependent upon the Italian seeds, even of Myrobalans. Besides, as Italy is fighting with France, there will be no interruption in commerce between the two nations.

The crop of fruit seedlings that will leave France next winter is already growing in France, and even if Italy were fighting on the side of the Germans, and commerce was entirely stopped between Italy and France, it would not in any way affect the French production of fruit stocks.

The two most important subjects now before the nurserymen and florists are:

1. The embargo placed by the British authorities on Belgian shipments, which will prevent fall shipments of azaleas, etc., being made from Belgium unless the embargo is lifted before fall.

2. The policy of the Federal Horticultural Board under the Department of Agriculture at Washington continuing to add items of nursery stock to the list of those under quarantine. The nurserymen and florists of the United States have enough to contend with these days, and we should look to our government for encouragement and help, instead of legitimate trade being

We offer this year an immense stock of Spring plants, all of the same high quality as other Craig specialties.

FICUS UTILIS

A species that came to us through the Botanical Gardens at Washington, D. C., which promises to be a valuable addition as a decorative house plant. The leaves are thick and leathery and are from 18 inches to 24 inches long, one-half as wide, of a rich, holly-green color, with midrib and veins of an ivory white, which stand out prominently.

BEGONIA KONKURENT

A Greatly Improved Begonia Cincinnati. The above variety is a German introduction, and we have tried it for three years. It makes a much better shaped plant than Cincinnati, is freer flowering, more shapely and, next to Norwood, is the best-keeping Begonia we have ever handled; the original flowers remaining on the plants for several months.

We offer strong plants, June delivery.

operations should begin. Early this spring, therefore, the nurseryman held a bargain sale of stock and advertised the fact in the local newspapers, a medium that he had seldom used before in disposing of his stock. He made the sale in truth as in name a bargain sale, and the prices quoted for the various trees and shrubs drew crowds of the residents of the city to the nursery. Many of them who came said they had not known of the existence of the nursery before they read the advertisements in the papers.

Not only did crowds of people come to see the bargains in nursery stock, but they bought freely and carried away their purchases. A large quantity of stock which might not have been moved within the year allotted to the nurseryman to clear the stock from the land was disposed of for cash and with the minimum of work. The proprietor is planning for one more sale this fall, and expects to clean out most of the stock remaining on the section.

Such a sale might not always be good policy, but in this instance, at least, it has been exceedingly profitable. The genuine bargain prices meant many quick sales. R. B. M.

McHUTCHISON WINS PROTEST.

A decision on the rate of duty on funkia, imported at New York by McHutchison & Co., New York, has been made by the Board of General Customs Appraisers. The product was assessed by the collector of customs as nursery stock, under paragraph 211 of the tariff act. The importer claimed the article to be dutiable under paragraph 210, "all other bulbs, roots, root stocks, corms and tubers, which are cultivated for their flowers or foliage, 50 cents per thousand." The board sustains the protests of the importer in the following opinion:

It will be noticed that paragraph 211 provides for such growths as stocks, cuttings and seedlings of plum, cherry and briar rose, of apple, quince and plum; and also numerous stocks, cuttings and seedlings of fruit and ornamental trees. It also provides for deciduous and evergreen shrubs and vines and all trees, plants and vines commonly known as nursery or greenhouse stock. It is under this last provision that the collector has classified the goods here in question. It will be noticed that the classes of goods provided for in this paragraph are such as have a woody, persistent growth above the ground. We do not think it was intended to include under this paragraph such plants as the ordinary annuals or perennials grown for their flowers or foliage. Paragraph 210, it will be seen, more especially provides for this class of plants. We find that paragraph 210 provides for all kinds of bulbs, herbaceous peony, iris, canna, dahlia, all of which are perennials. The growth above ground dies down in the winter. It is very unlike the growth of the shrubs and trees provided for under paragraph 211. Paragraph 210 finally provides for all bulbs, roots, root stocks, corms and tubers which are cultivated for their flowers or foliage. It is under this provision that the importer makes his claim. The testimony of the witness in the case, as well as the return of the appraiser, tends to show that these plants are specifically provided for in paragraph 210.

The law has been, in our judgment, materially changed since the law of 1909, under which the decision referred to by the government, abstract 31900 (T. D. 33325) was made.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Last week was fairly busy, funeral work, with wedding decorations, dancing receptions and a few graduations, keeping things from being dull. Prices are low and because of this many persons are buying cut flowers who otherwise would forego them. Carnations are a trifle short, but roses are still in good supply. The call for bedding plants also continues active.

Various Notes.

The case of Joseph Koppelman vs. the Adams Express Co. was defaulted in the Seventh District court last week.

Mrs. Charles Max, of San Francisco, who with her husband is visiting relatives here, fell in alighting from an electric car in East Providence June 7 and was seriously bruised and shaken up.

V. J. Berarducci has opened a retail flower store at 148 Atwells avenue. He was for several years with Richard Higgins.

Walter A. Kelton has withdrawn his interests from the Quality Flower Store, Pawtucket. The business is being conducted by J. W. Seaman alone.

Thomas Curley reports an unusually busy season so far this spring on outdoor work. W. H. M.

WESTFIELD, N. J.

Memorial day trade nearly cleaned Herder Bros., 766 Prospect street, out of bedding plants and greatly reduced other supplies; 4,000 geraniums were sold. They are now getting ready for the fall trade. During the summer Herder Bros. will build a number of coldframes for hardy potted stock. They think that these will pay well, as there will be no expense for heating, and plants that get a good start before cold weather can be kept in good condition during the winter, ready for forcing at any time if desired, or in excellent condition for the spring trade.

Charles L. Doerrer, 167 Elm street, reports that business has been good ever since the first of the year. The spring trade has been better than last year's. He has just begun planting mums for the fall trade.

Notwithstanding the general slackness in business, Wilford B. Woodruff, 51 Grove street, has had a spring business that was nearly normal. He is now beginning to plan for the fall and winter. R. B. M.

Stow, N. Y.—The Whitfords, Lawrence A. and wife, are doing a nice business, both here at the "gardens" and at the store in Chautauqua.

White Marsh, Maryland

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The weather remains wet, and weeds are getting a good start. This is one of the wettest seasons experienced for a number of years, and the ground at times has been too wet to give outside stock the proper culture, and almost everyone is behind with his work.

Good stock is scarce and trade is rather dull. Funeral work has been light, and wedding work is not so good as usual at this season of the year. Memorial day did not amount to much with the local florists; this, however, was not a surprise, as trade for this day in the south is of but little significance compared with that in the north and east.

For 50 Cents and Her Nerve.

Below is a copy of a letter, which is a fair sample of many plant orders received and gives an idea of what the florist of the fair southland has to contend with:

Dear Sir:

I herewith inclose 50 cents, for which please send me the following plants rooted: One tuberous-rooted begonia, some geranium plants, one flowering cyclamen, one heliotrope, one lily of the valley, four coleus (I want the large-foliated coleus; one with dark red leaf), one double fuchsia, one abutilon, one petunia, four verbenas, and a collection of small rooted ferns for table dishes. If you have any other plants that would be nice for beds, you may send me a nice collection of them also.

I want to thank you for the nice collection of plants you have sent me for the last two years. Everyone says we have the prettiest collection of flowers they ever saw for the money, and no doubt you have already received orders from some of my friends who have asked me for your address.

Please send me a nice collection by return mail, as I want to get them started.

Thanking you in advance, I remain,

Your customer.

The florist receiving the above order states that he filled it in full and put in extra count, in order to recompense the customer for her nerve.

Various Notes.

The store adjoining C. L. Baum's caught fire on the night of May 30, and practically everything was consumed. The fire did considerable damage to C. L. Baum's cut flower box stock-room, in the rear of his store, but was put out before it reached his salesroom, in the front part of the store. However, the stock was well insured, and will be replaced in a short time with but little loss.

Miss Mary Attix, saleslady for Chas. L. Baum, won first prize in a popularity contest, which was run for twenty weeks by a local drug store and ended June 5. The prize is a round trip to the Panama-Pacific exposition, including all expenses, with several side trips. Miss Attix will start on her trip early in July.

NEW NEPHROLEPIS FERN—JOHN WANAMAKER

We will introduce the above new fern on August 1st, 1915. In presenting this fern to the trade, we feel confident that it will make a place for itself. The John Wanamaker fern is a wonderful advance over all plain or wavy frond varieties. The side pinnae of the fronds are very fully undulated, giving the plants a very wavy appearance. It will make as many fronds as Teddy, Jr., plants in 4-inch pots having over sixty fronds. It is a beautifully formed plant, full and compact.

Orders will be filled strictly in rotation.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

THE COAL MARKET.

There is a slight improvement in the patient's condition since last week's bulletin was issued, and there are hopes that the period of convalescence is beginning—such a report, though its wording is borrowed from the phraseology of the medical profession, is sufficiently applicable to the present situation in the coal trade. There is enough acceleration in business, it is said, to create a greater firmness in the market and even to foreshadow a slight rise in prices. A Pittsburgh correspondent advises those "who have reason to believe that they will need coal to get in their orders early." A Chicago writer for the Black Diamond says: "The smokeless situation continues to gather strength slowly. Reports from the east have not encouraged the retailers to believe that they are going to get that grade of coal at sacrifice prices this year. In fact, the steady increase in exports of all high-grade eastern coals has proved somewhat alarming to western buyers, who are beginning to fear that fall will find them short of one of their standard fuels. This has encouraged both contracting in a small way and also precautionary buying for storage purposes. In fact, the storage movement in smokeless coal is about the only notable one in the whole list of fuels."

PIPING A LEAN-TO.

How many feet of 2-inch pipe will be needed to heat a lean-to greenhouse 20x75, ten feet high at one side and five feet high at the other? The house is well protected and one side is against the wall of another greenhouse. A temperature of 45 degrees is to be maintained in zero weather.

J. A. F. & S.—Ohio.

If there is no glass in the exposed side wall, or in the ends below the level of the side plate, the house described should be heated to a temperature of 45 degrees by using 650 linear feet of 2-inch pipe.

Without knowing where the boiler is to be located, it is difficult to give definite advice about arranging the pipes. Unless there is a door to interfere, the simplest way would be to run the pipes on the walls around three sides of the house, supposing that the boiler is at one end; this would take about four lines of pipe. If bottom heat is

Your No. 13 Boiler is carrying 25,000 sq. ft. of glass, and I can keep it at 60° in the coldest weather without any trouble. I have three cast iron boilers also, heating a range of 25,000 sq. ft. of glass, but the No. 13 Kroeschell Boiler only takes half the coal and half the work to get the same results.

Kroeschell Boiler Better Than Tubular Boilers or Cast Iron Boilers

Washington Court House, Ohio. Have used upright boiler, tubular boiler and cast iron boiler. The Kroeschell Boiler heats up better and easier than any other boiler we have ever had anything to do with. If we ever buy another, it will certainly be a Kroeschell.

Very truly yours,
POOLE & PURLLANT.Cast Iron Cannot Be Compared with Kroeschell

We bought a No. 2 Boiler in 1904. It takes care of 5000 sq. ft. of glass, and we could add 2000 more. We are very well satisfied. We used a cast iron boiler before we had yours. It cannot be compared with the Kroeschell boiler. Your boiler has certainly a great capacity for heating water.

HALL & ROBINSON,
Montreal, Canada.Cast Iron Boilers Break Down

Have fired greenhouse boilers since 1885, both steam and hot water. Yours suits me the best. I have two of your boilers. At one time I had two cast iron boilers working together, and during a blizzard the rear section of one boiler gave out and the front section of the other sprung a crack a couple of months later. No more cast iron boilers for me. I came very close to freezing out in both instances.

G. M. THOST, De Soto, Mo.

Cast Iron Boiler Cracked in Two Years

We have a No. 4 Kroeschell Boiler. It takes care of 7000 sq. ft. of glass; it would take care of twice that amount.

I first had a new cast iron boiler which lasted two years, when it cracked to pieces. The second was a second-hand boiler.

I consider your boiler the best paying investment I ever made.

You can refer anyone to us.
MARYSVILLE FLORAL CO.,
Marysville, Ohio.Cast Iron Boilers Cause Freeze-out—Kroeschell Boilers No Worry

I bought a No. 2 boiler in 1902. Takes care of 7000 sq. ft. of glass—would take care of 2000 more, I have had a cast iron boiler, but it broke down twice in four years, always in the coldest weather. It broke down Dec. 29, 1904, and I lost all my stock in consequence. I have now two No. 2 and one No. 6 Kroeschell boilers and do not worry about their breaking down.

GRANT NEWPORT,
Cedar Rapids, Ia.Kroeschell Versus Cast Iron

The No. 7 Boiler I bought from you is heating 14,000 sq. ft. of glass; I think it can take care of 16,000 ft. I do not have any trouble to keep up temperature of 50° in the coldest weather. I fire only once after 12 o'clock midnight. The boiler has given perfect satisfaction. I have four cast iron boilers—like the Kroeschell best of all. If anyone wishes to inquire about your boiler, let them write me, for I think your boilers are good ones.

CHARLES SCHULTZ,
Menominee, Mich.The Kroeschell Does Our Work Easier Than Cast Iron Boilers and Saves 20 to 25% Fuel

The No. 4 boiler is heating 10,000 sq. ft. of glass—it would take care of 13,000 sq. ft. easy. Have no trouble to keep temperatures of 50 and 60 degrees in coldest weather. The boiler has given perfect satisfaction. We had two cast iron boilers, one rated for 1200 ft. of pipe and one rated for 1500 ft. These boilers never did the work at their best and when the greenhouses were new. According to our experience with yours, we will save 20 to 25 per cent of fuel.

Please tell us how much piping to use, and how to arrange it, to heat a building 20x75, with a shed roof. The house is ten feet high on one side and six feet on the other and is well protected. We wish to maintain a temperature of 45 degrees. The house has glass in one end.

J. A. F. & S.—Ohio.

As I understand the question, the house described is a lean-to, one wall of which is ten feet high, while the height is only six feet on the other side. Such a house would require about 450 square feet of radiation with hot water heat, or not far from 225 square feet with steam, for a temperature of 45 degrees.

If the house is to be heated with

PORTLAND NEWS NOTES.

Co., Swiss Floral Co., George Goos, J. B. Pilkington, August Zitzewitz and Tonseth Floral Co.

The rose festival managers have expressed their appreciation of the work done by the Floral Society and its officers and members individually, and it is a safe guess that the floral center idea will be repeated in future celebrations.

President Van Kirk, of the Floral Society, acted as secretary of the floral center managers and was so busy that he missed several meals. Much credit for the success of the effort is due to him. Manager Dorsche had his hands full looking after the exhibits.

Various Notes.

Visitors seen at the floral center: Simon Swanson, of Seattle; Paul Jandl, of Spokane Florist Co.; J. F. Austin, of Spokane Greenhouses, and M. Lewis, formerly of Donart & Lewis, of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. P. Maris, of McMinnville, and Prof. A. S. Peck, of Corvallis, were noted among the judges of the community rose exhibits.

H. E. Weed, director of school gardens, says there is no contest arranged for this year. Thirty-five schools are participating in an educational effort at growing vegetables as a business proposition; each worker is credited with an hourly wage and is paid from the proceeds of the sale of the products.

The only reason why "Scotty" did not give every girl in the industrial parade a flower was that he could "rustle" no more flowers. S. W. W.

The Market.

For the last two weeks stock has been exceptionally plentiful and of excellent quality. Peonies are at the height of their season and are of splendid quality, commanding good retail prices. Beauties are holding their own and, with the advent of sunshine, the rose stock has improved. Carnations are still of remarkably good quality for the season. America gladioli meet with much favor. A variety of smaller flowers in season are Spencer sweet peas, which are fine; cornflowers, coreopsis, yellow daisies, orchids and valley.

The demand has centered chiefly in June weddings, of which there have been a large number; flowers for commencements and funeral work.

Various Notes.

The Chicago Cut Flower Exchange opened in the Peoples' Trust building just before Memorial day and took orders, but failed to deliver them at the appointed time, and had left the city on Monday. Police investigators have failed so far to locate the parties.

Markey Bros. have moved their flower shop from 120 East Washington street to the first block west of Calhoun on Wayne street. This is an excellent location and spring business has been brisk.

The Bradley Flower Shop has taken advantage of a new show window to introduce the June bride in her bridal array, with a handsome bouquet. The window is attracting much attention.

The Market.

The weather during the last week has been rainy and cold. June 13 and 14, the sun came out, but before one got thoroughly thawed out, it began a cold rain again. While such weather naturally has a depressing effect on business, June weddings and graduations keep the market fairly active. Beginning the week with plenty of stock, the market gradually improved, and by the week's end stock was pretty well cleaned up. Peonies hold attention now, and are of fine quality, finding a ready market.

Outdoor bedding is still dragging slowly along, every warm day bringing a rush of hurry-up orders, which only subside again with the change in the weather. The usual large shipments of bedding stock to the Michigan resort towns are no doubt being held up because of the bad weather.

Various Notes.

Are You?

Missing a Good Thing?

Read here the camera's reproduction of a letter written by Pittsburgh's largest plant grower—a man you all know, whose conservatism is well understood, whose word counts for something. He says Federal Elastic Cement is the best thing on the market for tightening the roofs of old greenhouses.

Federal Elastic Cement never grows hard or disintegrates in the package; never crumbles or pulls loose on the roof; lasts at least five times as long as putty or any other glazing material; water-tight; holds the glass—no breakage if your houses are putty-bulbed with Federal Elastic Cement.

We make a special grade for greenhouse glazing—a thinner, short fiber consistency that can be used in a putty bulb or mastic machine. One pound goes as far as two to three pounds of putty. Black is best, but almost any color can be furnished.

Write today for a trial pail, stating how many square feet of glass you will putty-bulb this year.

Price of Federal Elastic Cement, greenhouse grade:

Per barrel (550 lbs.).....per lb., 8c Per keg (100 or 150 lbs.).....per lb., 10c
Per half-barrel (300 lbs.).....per lb., 8c

April 5, 1915.

Florists' Review,
Chicago, Ill.
Gentlemen:-

Replying to your inquiry regarding my experience with Federal Elastic Cement, I would say anyone who has old houses and does not use this Cement is missing a good thing.

We used Federal Elastic Cement on sixteen old houses in July, 1914. They were in pretty bad shape, but since then not one light of glass has blown out. Had it not stopped any leakage we would have been well paid in the saving of breakage. If we had to put it on every year we would do so, but it looks today the same as it did last fall. It is a little hard to put on, but we think it is the best thing that ever came out for greenhouses.

Yours respectfully,

The Market.

Conditions during the last week have been satisfactory to the growers and retailers. After most of the bedding and seeding was completed, a heavy frost put in its appearance June 9. This is the latest frost for many years. There is no question that more bedding stock was sold this year than in any year past, a great deal of replanting being necessary. All growers are cleaned up on stock and well satisfied with the season's business. The cut flower end is well holding its own and stock of all kinds is in good demand. Roses and carnations are of good quality and moving well. Local peonies are now coming into this market and the quality is good. The wet season has so increased the insect pests that many growers of peonies who have not kept their eyes open have had their stock greatly depleted by them.

Various Notes.

Holm & Olson report a heavy planting season and are completely cleaned out of that class of stock. This firm has an effective insecticide window display, featuring two large made-up bugs electrically illuminated and well reproduced; the remainder of the window is filled with insecticides of all kinds.

H. C. Hanson reports a heavy season on all cut flowers and plants, and expresses himself well satisfied.

The West Side Greenhouses are completely cleaned out of bedding stock, and surely had a large amount to dispose of. This firm is renovating its houses for the coming season.

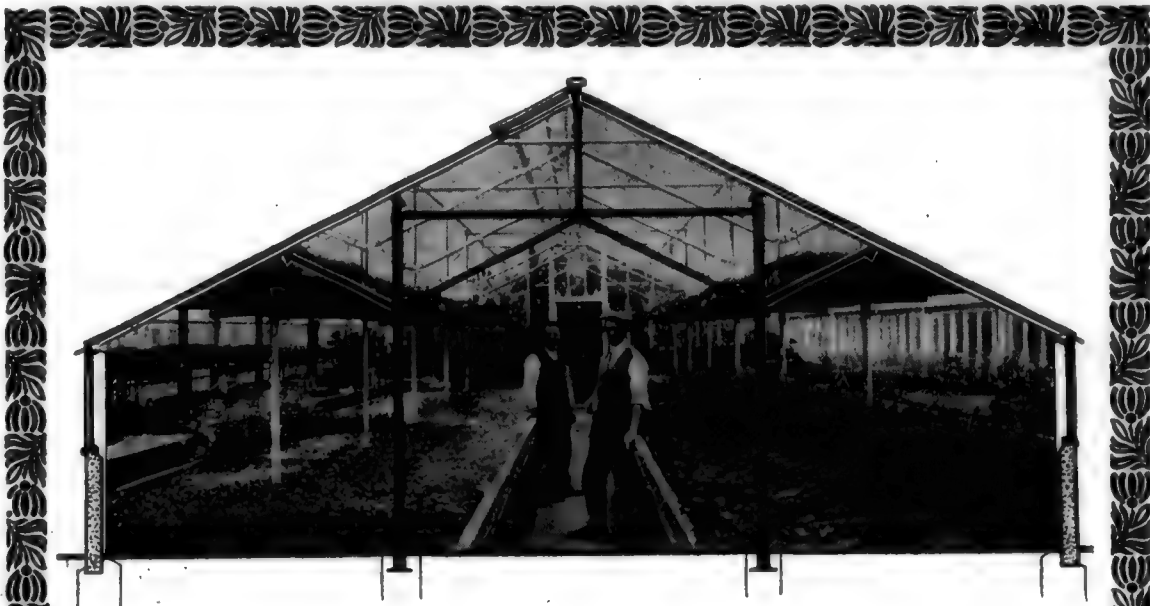

The Flower Shop reports a fine season in its new location, business in all branches being good.

Geo. Bates, of Holm & Olson, who recently was hit by a street car at Seventh and Wabasha, is back on the job again. He asserts that if it had not been for his heavy head of hair, the car would have sent him into the old library. As it was, he was laid up for two weeks with several broken ribs and a general shaking up. C. R. F.

An Exaggeration With a Reason Back of It

THIS is an interior view of the Half Iron Frame Greenhouse we built last year for the Mt. Feake Cemetery, at Waltham, Mass. Its roof supports are framed exactly like some of our largest Full Iron Frame Houses.

We have blackened and exaggerated a set of the roof framing members to the stronger impress them on your mind. But don't compare this framing with the usual pipe purlins and posts, having clamp fittings.

All our purlins, in all our construction, are angle iron.

All our fittings are bolted through-and-through. Not clamped on. Bolted on.

There's absolutely no chance of a slip off. For 30 years we have been bolting our columns and fittings through-and-through.

Let us give you full particulars of our Half Iron Frame and Full Iron Frame Construction.

You know we go anywhere for business or to talk business.

RADIUM MAKES THINGS GROW

How to apply RADIUM BRAND Fertilizer (RAF) in June

Plants are living things and need food while they are growing. June is a splendid time to apply that ideal plant food, Radium Brand Fertilizer (R. A. F.). Top dress your lawn with it, dig it in around your flowers, vegetables, shrubbery, etc. Feed the plants that they may have strength and vitality, and they will come through the summer strong and beautiful. One pound will fertilize 50 square feet, or a plot 10x5 feet.

contains Nitrogen, Phosphoric Acid, Potash and Radium Element. Radium has an influence described by scientists as very similar in its effects upon vegetation to the ultra-violet rays of the sun, and as applied to growing things is the most important discovery of the century.

How to Get Radium Brand Fertilizer (R. A. F.)

Radium Brand Fertilizer (R. A. F.) meets a need among thousands of people who grow things in a small way, and want a concentrated plant food in handy form. Your dealer probably has it; if not, we will send, prepaid, any of the following. East of the Mississippi River. Beyond, add 6c lb.

The Market.

The market is overstocked. The demand for stock, while pretty steady, is only fair, and does not suffice to take up all the offerings. Shipping business, however, holds up pretty well.

The rose supply continues large and generally good, and is more than enough for the present call. American Beauties are excellent. The gladiolus and lily cuts are both good. Valley and orchids meet with a pretty fair call. Some fine sweet peas are coming into the market. Other offerings include carnations, snapdragons, water lilies, coreopsis and cornflowers. New eastern ferns are now offered.

Various Notes.

Thos. Windram has returned from Leesburg, Fla.

Mr. Sheppard, of the E. G. Hill Co., of this city, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his mother.

C. E. Critchell was the first in the market this season with new eastern ferns.

Recent visitors include Ellis Woodworth, representing the Sefton Mfg. Co., Chicago, and Mr. Fleener, of Rushville, Ind. C. H. H.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y.

The spring show of the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society was held in Fireman's hall, June 11. In quality as well as quantity of exhibits this show surpassed all previous spring shows of the society. Although the weather has been unfavorable, the cut flower classes were well filled with excellent stock and the many visitors pronounced the vegetables the best seen this year. Messrs. Johnston, MacGregor and Everitt acted as judges.

The principal exhibitors and prize-winners were: James Duckham, James Duthie, P. J. King, Frank Kyle, C. Mills, J. Sorosick, M. O'Neill, D. Hothersall, J. Robinson, H. Gibson, A. Walker and John Miller.

There were a number waiting admittance when the show was opened and the attendance was unusually large all afternoon and evening.

W. D. Snell, Herkimer, N. Y., hied himself away immediately after a busy round, leaving the business in charge of junior, who recently took on a running mate, an artist in the profession.

E. A. Baker, Ilion, N. Y., has had all the business he could attend to of late. The big addition to the factory of the Remington Arms Co. will benefit him.

William Mathews, Utica, N. Y., was reminiscent, harking back to the days when a new orchid was a rara avis and brought big prices. While owning up to over three score and ten, our expert orchid friend believes he will see those good times return. He has a most beautiful cross in Cattleya Schrøderæ alba x Brassavola Digbyana, a pure white flower with a tip of lace-like texture. Son Harry says they use many Cattleya Mendelii and gigas in funeral work and table decorations.

Adolph Frost, Cortland, has a unique sign in the shape of an immense pansy of the Trimardeau type, painted true to color. It catches the eye from every direction. W. M.

DETROIT, MICH.The Market.

Business remains good, there being the usual number of decorations, weddings and commencements that always tend to make June a month with the balance on the right side of the ledger.

Stock has remained pretty well cleaned up, with an occasional slaughter sale of some one article. Beauties, for instance, have been overplentiful and sell cheap. The quality, however, is good.

Various Notes.

Harry Breitmeyer has recently acquired a new car and may be seen speeding about town in a light gray National car of 7-passenger capacity.

June 9 a number of gentlemen representing the Panama Canal district were the guests of the Detroit Board of Commerce, and the decorations by E. A. Feters were elaborate. Over 1,000 long-stemmed Beauties were used with other flowers, palms and greens, and the large dining room was a garden of Beauties.

Robert Rahaley has moved his family to his summer home on the Canadian side of the Detroit river and will soon acquire his usual summer coat of tan.

Sidney Beard, of Beard Bros. Co., some time ago conceived the idea of making his Ford car do extra work by hitching a trailer on the rear. This was all right for the trailer, but not for the Ford, and after breaking an axle or two, it balked entirely. H. S.

PEONY PEOPLE PLAN PUBLICITY PROGRAM

American Peony Society holds its twelfth annual exhibition at Boston with meager competition. The need for interesting a greater number of persons is keenly felt and plans are laid to publish a bulletin for that purpose. Also, a committee is appointed to prevent distribution of old sorts in the guise of novelties.

THE annual meeting and exhibition of the American Peony Society was held at Horticultural hall, Boston, June 19 and 20, in connection with the exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. Weather conditions in June are so variable that it is always difficult to fix on a proper date for a peony show. The show this year was an extensive one, the quality good and the postponement from June 12 proved to have been a wise move, the local peonies being about at their best. The majority of the exhibits came from Massachusetts, but there were several large lots from New York, which arrived in fine shape. The peony society is not a strong one, but is doing an excellent work and is worthy of increased support. In order, however, to let the public see the value of the peony, efforts should be made to interest the retailers and classes for baskets, vases, tables and other arrangements for artistic effects should be encouraged; so also should the amateur growers. The premiums now are too stereotyped and attractive only to a few large growers.

Business Session.

The business meeting of the society was held June 19, with President B. H. Farr presiding. Mr. Farr, in his extemporaneous address, referred particularly to the peony garden being established at Washington and expressed the hope that all members will contribute some plants for it. Secretary A. P. Saunders, in lieu of a report, gave an excellent informal talk and brought up many points, both valuable and timely.

A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y.

1916 Meeting Place.
New York City.

He specially urged action toward suppressing the sending out of old kinds as novelties and hoped the society would help to stamp out this practice.

A communication was read from Mrs. Francis King, Alma, Mich., urging the society to use the Ridgeway color chart. President Farr said that the society for ten years has used the French chart and that he considers it superior to the Ridgeway. It developed that many of the new garden clubs are advocating the use of the Ridgeway, but the members felt they already had a better chart and the suggestion of changing found no favor in the meeting.

A discussion over the small number of amateur competitors arose and the general feeling was that it was necessary to provide more small classes for amateurs, as herein lies the future hope of the society.

Secretary Saunders spoke on the desirability of issuing a peony bulletin at an early date, as a means of interesting a greater number of people, especially among the amateurs, and after some discussion it was voted to empower the secretary to publish one. This, it was felt, would help to interest the widespread membership and bring in new members.

Registration.

Messrs. B. H. Farr, A. H. Fewkes and R. T. Brown were appointed a committee to draft rules for the operation of the registration committee. Action taken in 1907 on this matter was rescinded by this new appointment. It was felt that only through its plan of registration of varieties can the society exert its influence against the dissemination of old sorts as novelties, and it is hoped to evolve a system so good that no variety can find a market until it bears the stamp of the society's approval through its registration committee.

The Business Year.

Treasurer J. H. Humphreys sent the following statement of the society's business year, June 6, 1914, to June 15, 1915:

RECEIPTS.

Balance as per last report.....	$1,394.96
To dues	$207.00
To admission fees, 1914.....	20.00
To admission fees, 1915.....	80.15
To interest	18.90
Total	$1,716.01

DISBURSEMENTS.

By balance	$1,577.78
Total	1,716.01

The Election.

Three officers who have served the society for several years were given the reward of loyalty in the form of reelection. With a former secretary in the vice-presidency, the roster for 1916 stands:

President—B. H. Farr, Wyomissing, Pa.

Vice-President—A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass.

Treasurer—J. H. Humphreys, Germantown, Pa.

Secretary—A. P. Saunders, Clinton, New York.

Director for Three Years—R. T. Brown, Queens, N. Y.

It was voted to hold the annual meeting in June, 1916, with the Horticultural Society of New York. The secretary reported the receipt of many invitations, especially from the west. New York, it was stated, had not had the Peony Society since 1909. The president was empowered to appoint a local committee to make arrangements for the New York show.

The Membership.

There was a good addition to the list of members, most of the new names being those of amateur growers. At present over two-thirds of the society's membership is east of Ohio, but a large proportion of the new members are from the west. The list added is as follows:

George E. Hart, Lynbrook, N. Y.
 Frank W. Campbell, 23 La Mothe Ave., Detroit, Mich.
 Dr. Geo. W. Post, 4138 Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.
 James Boyd, Twenty-fifth and Wharton Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.
 Arthur E. Winston, 5 Choate St., Wakeville, Maine.
 Judge F. H. Cutting, Municipal Court, Duluth, Minn.
 Henry L. Rowley, Waterbury, Conn.
 Mrs. Geo. O. Fraser, 800 South St., Morristown, N. J.
 Homer Reed, Kansas City Peony Gardens, Kansas City, Mo.
 Alfred T. Towney, Arlington, Md.
 A. L. Gifford, 334 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
 Howard E. Weed, Beaverton, O.
 W. S. Linton, Saginaw, Mich.
 J. C. Wister, Philadelphia, Pa.
 A. L. Underwood, Cheyenne, Wyo.
 A. S. Parker, Detroit, Mich.
 Milton Nursery Co., Milton, Ore.

The Exhibition.

The peonies on exhibition were numerous and nearly filled the main exhibition hall. The greater portion of these, however, were shown for premiums and gratuities offered by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The largest exhibitors in the competitive classes were T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., A. P. Saunders, Dr. C. S. Minot, A. H. Fewkes and Mrs. J. F. Flood, but there were many large non-competitive exhibits. Awards in the leading classes for the American Peony Society's premiums were as follows:

Largest and best collection of not less than 100 named varieties—T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., first, with 136 varieties of fine quality.
 Six blooms, any variety—A. P. Saunders, first, on Therese; T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., second, on Lady Alexander Duff.
 Twenty-five named varieties, double—T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., first, on M. M. Cahuzac, Lamartine, M. Dupont, Felix Crousse, Therese, Lady Alexander Duff, Triomphe de l'Exposition de Lille, Mme. Auguste Dessert, Modeste Guerin, Mme. Ducl, Mme. Calot, Dr. Caillot, Asa Gray, Rosa Bonheur, Marguerite Gerard, Duchesse de Nemours (Calot), Mr. Manning, Venus, Marie Jacquin.

Twenty-five named varieties, double—A. H. Fewkes, first, on Claire Dubois, La Lorraine, Rosa Bonheur, Walter Faxon, Admiral Togo, Lamartine, Mlle. Eugene Verdier, Souvenir de Gaspard Calot, Sarah Bernhardt, Grover Cleveland, Mme. Aug. Dessert, Avalanche, Germaine Bigot, Neptune, L'Indispensable, Etienne Mechin, M. Dupont, Mont Blanc, La Fayette and Baroness Schroeder; T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., second; Mrs. C. S. Minot, highly commended.

Collection of singles, one whorl of petals—T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., first, the best varieties being Emily, Duchess of Portland, Stanley, Black Prince, Queen of May, Rosy Dawn, Hermes, De-fiance, Victoria, Areos, Mrs. Key and Dread-nought.

Fifty blooms, white, double—Mrs. J. F. Flood, first, on Festiva Maxima; Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., second.

Fifty blooms, double, dark pink or rose—T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., first, on Modeste Guerin.

Fifty blooms, double, salmon pink or flesh—T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., first, on Venus.

Largest collection of Japanese varieties—A. P. Saunders.

New seedling—Many seedlings were shown, but none was deemed worthy of the silver medal.

Best new variety introduced since 1910—A. P. Saunders, on Jules Dessert.

AMATEURS AND PRIVATE GROWERS.

Largest and best collection—A. P. Saunders won silver medal on 100 varieties, all clean, fresh flowers.

Collection of white varieties—A. P. Saunders, second.

Collection of dark pink or rose—A. P. Saunders, second.

Collection of salmon and flesh—A. P. Saunders, first.

Collection of crimson—A. P. Saunders, first.

Six blooms, any variety—A. P. Saunders, first and second.

The judges were Messrs. Dauphin, J. H. Humphreys and James McKissock.

A. P. Saunders showed forty-five varieties of seedlings, some being extremely good. The best were: White Wings, Jean Bancroft, No. 340, Favorite, No. 295 and Gaiety. The latter has a clear yellow center with pink guard petals, and is quite striking.

Massachusetts Society Awards.

Awards in the Massachusetts Horticultural Society's classes were:

Twenty named varieties, double—A. P. Saunders, first, on Tecumseh, Venus, Lucrece, Marguerite Gerard, Duchesse de Nemours (Calot), Jas. Kelway, Mme. Auguste Dessert, Volcan, L'Indispensable, Le Cygne, M. Martin Cahuzac, Exhibit of T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., at the Peony Show at Boston, June 19 and 20, 1915.

Carmen, Marquis de Lory, Gloire de C. Gombault, M. Bastien, Le Page, Marie Crousse, Germaine Bigot, Mme. Calot; T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., second.

Ten named varieties—T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., first, on Modeste Guerin, Therese, Mme. Ducel, Boule de Neige, Mme. Jeanne Riviere, Venus, Jas. Kelway, Mr. Manning, Marguerite Gerard; Mrs. Frederick Kellogg, second.

Specimen bloom, double—George N. Smith, first, on M. Jules Elie; A. P. Saunders, second, on L'Indispensable.

Twelve named varieties, single—T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., first, on Stanley, Duchess of Portland, Defiance, Prince Bismarck, Rosy Dawn, Black Prince, Queen of May, Dreadnought, Areos, Meteor, Prince Alexander.

Twelve named varieties, Japanese, single.—A. H. Fewkes, first.

Six named white varieties, double—T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., first, on Alsace Lorraine, Kelway's Glorious, Baroness Schroeder, Mme. Crousse, Mme. Emile Lemoine, Duchesse de Nemours; Mrs. O. S. Minot, second.

Six named varieties, double, rose—T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., first, on Washington, Modeste Guerin, M. Bouchariat Aine, Nobilissima, Coquelin and Arsene Meuret.

Six named varieties, salmon pink—T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., on Georgiana Shaylor, Therese, Lamartine, La Perle and Mme. Barillet Deschamps.

Six named varieties, red or crimson—T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., first, on Pierre Dessert, Cherry Hill, De Candolle, Plutarch, M. M. Cahuzac and Adolphe Rousseau.

Twenty-five, double, white or blush—T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., first; Wm. Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, second.

Twenty-five blooms, double, pink or rose—T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., first and second.

Twenty-five blooms, double, red or crimson—T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co.

Twelve named varieties, double—M. Sullivan, gardener to W. Whitman, first, on Avalanche, Felix Crousse, Sir Thomas Lipton, Festiva Maxima, Souv. de L'Exposition de Lille, Germaine Bigot, Bretonneau, Chas. Dilke, Baron Schroeder and Sara; R. C. Morse, second.

Twelve named varieties, pink—A. P. Saunders, first.

Twelve blooms, white—A. P. Saunders, first; S. A. Perkins, second.

Twelve blooms, red—A. P. Saunders, first; Martin Sullivan, second.

T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co. received a silver medal for Cherry Hill, a new crimson similar to M. Martin Cahuzac.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

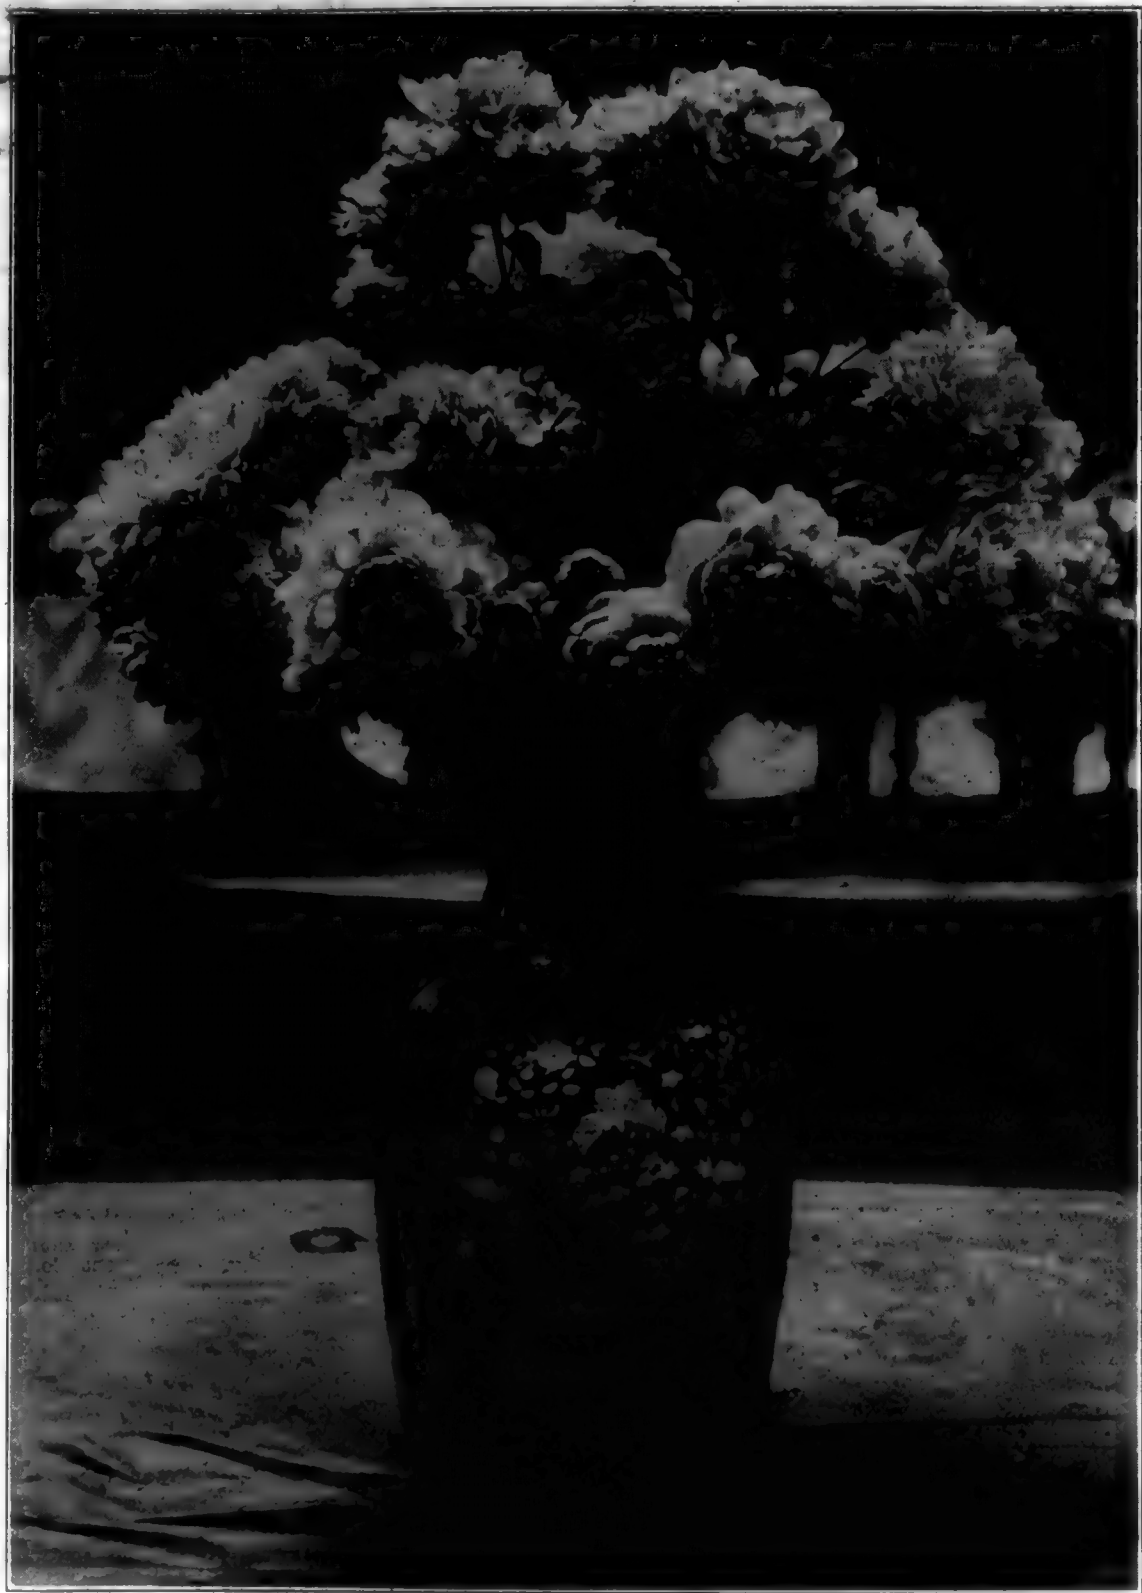

The largest, most imposing and best arranged collection came from Farquhar & Co. This was the only group arranged for artistic effect, immense vases being dotted here and there to break up any flatness. The most striking variety was Walter Faxon, an immense bright salmon pink, and Queen Mary, white. Other fine vases were Richardson's Perfection, Pulcherrima, Venus, Mme. de Verneville, etc. This group contained thousands of flowers and was awarded a silver medal.

There were splendid peony displays from the Blue Hill Nurseries, Wellesley Nurseries, T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., J. K. Alexander, Mrs. J. F. Flood, Mrs. E. M. Gill, Martin Sullivan, Eastern Nurseries, Mrs. N. P. Cutler and others.

Hardy roses were less extensively shown than usual, the season being backward. The leading prize-winners were W. J. Clemson, J. O. Christensen, gardener; Thomas N. Cook, Mrs. Frederick Ayer, George Page, gardener; Albert Geiger, Mrs. N. P. Cutler, William Sim and Hemlock Hill Rose Gardens.

William Thatcher and Duncan Finlayson had the best sweet williams. Duncan Finlayson won for twenty-five vases of herbaceous plants. For the best display of herbaceous plants the first prize went to the Bay State Nurseries, the second prize to the Eastern Nurseries. For Campanula Medium, Martin Sullivan and Donald McKenzie, gardener to E. B. Dane, were the winners.

William Sim had a fine display of sweet peas and roses. Henry Stewart, gardener to Miss Cornelia Warren, had roses. William A. Riggs had some finely flowered hydrangeas; also, Henry Stewart. W. N. Craig secured a first-class certificate for Verbena Miss Wil-mott. George Page had a fine group of German irises and aquilegias and the Blue Hill Nurseries had irises and gillienias. Donald McKenzie received a silver medal for an artistic group of orchids. For six gloxinias William Thatcher was first and Henry Stewart second.

The strawberry display was smaller than usual. A week later they would have been in better season. Marshall again proved to be the champion variety. There was a splendid vegetable show.

PINCHING DAHLIAS AND MUMS.

I have some dahlias which are about two feet high, planted outside. I wish to know whether I should pull all the leaves off, leaving only the main shoot to grow. Also, should mums be treated in the same way, so as to make larger flowers? Any other information in regard to this will be appreciated.

R. L.—Md.

Dahlias are better if grown to single stems. It would be well to cut away all the side shoots, but do not remove any leaves from the main stem. I like to pinch the dahlia shoots when they are a foot high, to make them stocky and bushy, and they are then less in need of supports, but your plants are now somewhat tall to stop. You will certainly get better flowers by reducing the number of shoots.

All side shoots should be rubbed from chrysanthemums, whether in benches or pots. Leaves must not be removed. The removal of side shoots and all but one terminal bud insures larger and better blooms.

NAME OF PLANT.

Enclosed you will find a leaf of a plant of which I should like to know the name. It grows from fifteen inches to two feet high and has a lavender flower.

L. G.—Ohio.

The plant is Funkia undulata media variegata, a variegated form of plantain lily. It is useful for edgings and mass effects, especially in formal gardens.

Notes of the

Hardy Garden

JUNE-FLOWERING PERENNIALS.

Hemerocallis, or Day Lilies.

Several of the showy and attractive day lilies are now flowering. Some have been blooming since May 20. Flava, with sweet-scented lemon-colored flowers, is a desirable sort of the easiest culture, and, like all members of the family, is fine for cutting. H. luteola, orange yellow; Middendorffii, deep yellow; aurantiaca major, deep orange; Dumortierii, deep yellow, and Queen of May, deep Indian yellow, are some of the more desirable June-flowering day lilies. H. aurantiaca major is not so hardy as the other sorts named, but produces immense flowers and is a noble variety. In sandy soil it will winter well; otherwise it pays to lift and store the roots in a cellar or coldframe.

All the day lilies are easily increased from the division of the roots, fall being a better time than spring for this work.

Dictamnus, or Gas Plant.

Dictamnus Fraxinella is invariably included in the list of the best twelve hardy herbaceous perennials. It is, indeed, a valuable variety, for not only does it form a handsome bush-like clump, carrying spikes two to three feet in height, of pink or white flowers, but the foliage remains dark green until late fall, making it all the more desirable. Dictamnus can be raised from seed, but seeds germinate rather slowly and it takes several years for seedlings to make plants of respectable size. It dislikes disturbance at the root, but once strong plants are had, carrying several dozen spikes each, what a noble subject it is! The name gas plant comes from the fact that during the flowering season the blooms give off, during hot weather, a volatile oil which readily takes fire if a lighted match is held near it.

Papavers, or Poppies.

In addition to the June-flowering perennials described last week, many others should be mentioned. The showy oriental poppy, or Papaver orientale, which opened its flowers in May, is still flowering. This gorgeous poppy is of the easiest culture and comes easily from seed. Besides the well known P. orientale, there are some fine forms that are different in color. One or two of the best are: Parkmanni, deep scarlet; Mrs. Perry, salmon rose, and Goliath, fiery scarlet. Another beautiful hardy poppy now flowering is P. nudicaule, the beautiful Iceland poppy, which comes in white, yellow, orange and other shades. This poppy blooms the entire summer, and for table decoration nothing is more charming. In either border or rock garden this makes a most useful plant. The Iceland poppies come easily from seed.

Iris Germanica, or Fleur de Lis.

No garden is complete without some of the irises, and the June garden without some of the many fine varieties of I. Germanica will lack what ought to be one of its strong features. These are of easy culture, but should have well drained ground and plenty of sun, and the roots must be covered lightly. It is also necessary to divide and replant the stock once in three or four years; August and September are the best months for this work. A few really fine irises, selected from a rather bewildering list, are: Mrs. H. Darwin, Queen of May, pallida Dalmatica, pallida Mandraliscæ, Florentina alba, Victorine, Bridesmaid, Gracchus, King of Irises, Mme. Chereau, old, but effective, and Glory of Hillegom. In addition to the German irises, there are now blooming the several forms of I. Sibirica and I. orientalis. These are even better adapted for cutting than the German section and succeed well in almost any location; a moist site is the best, however. I. orientalis Snow Queen is a splendid subject for cutting.

Miscellaneous Perennials.

Among the many other perennials now flowering are Viola cornuta, of which the deep blue atropurpurea is the best. This is one of the finest low-growing perennials for massing, for edging or for rock gardens. Several of the lychnis, such as Flos-cuculi, vespertina and Viscaria splendens, are blooming. Veronica incana and rupes-tris are useful blue perennials, the latter for the rockery. Thalictrum adiantifolium produces leaflets like an adiantum, fine for cutting, and is seen at times in the wholesale markets. The trollius family, including both Asiaticus excelsior and Europæus, are full of flowers. The last named prefers a moist location, but Asiaticus does well on dry ground. Spiræa Japonica, astilboides, Peach Blossom and palmata are in bloom. All like moist locations if well drained in winter. The hardy phloxes of the subulata type have passed, but suffruticosa Miss Lingard is almost in flower, with the big paniculata family to follow.

Peonies are at their best in June, but they need an entire, special article. The hardy larkspurs, or delphiniums, will soon make a noble showing. Now is the time to sow seed of these. The digitalis, or foxglove, will be beautiful in a few days. Several varieties of pentstemon and polemonium are open. Geranium platypetalum and sanguineum have been flowering for some time and Doronicum excelsum and Caucasicum are on the wane. Dielytra spectabilis is passing, but D. eximia formosa will bloom all summer.

The glorious blue colorings of the alkanet, or anchusa, stand out prominently. Of these A. Italica, Perry's variety, and Opal, the former dark and the latter pale blue, are wonderfully fine. Aster speciosus, blue and white, twelve inches in height, is the earliest of the hardy asters to flower. Dianthus barbatus, or sweet williams, and D. plumarius, dwarf hardy pinks, are popular and desirable hardy border plants, the latter being of especial value as a bordering subject or in a rock garden. Of rock plants there are many more than those named, but a whole special article would be needed to mention them.

SHAW'S GARDEN TO BUILD.

The Board of Trustees of the Missouri Botanical Garden, popularly known as Shaw's Garden, St. Louis, has awarded a contract to Lord & Burnham Co., of Chicago, for the erection of a new $75,000 greenhouse in the tract which will be used for propagating purposes. The new structure will contain more than 45,000 square feet of glass. This new building will not be so large as the one recently completed, in which the tropical plants and ferns are kept, but will be of handsome design. It also is proposed to make extensive improvements this summer in the tract of land purchased last year by the board between the garden and King's highway.

TULIPS AND HYACINTHS.

Will you kindly tell us what variety of tulips and hyacinths can be forced for Christmas? M. B.—Kan.

Roman hyacinths can be easily flowered for Christmas, but none of the Dutch varieties are suitable for so early a date. The little dwarf Duc Van Thol and Tournesol tulips can be flowered for Christmas. It is also possible to get in small batches of White Hawk, La Reine, Yellow Prince and Proserpine, if you can secure your bulbs early. Those grown in southern Europe have smaller bulbs than the Dutch, but are much earlier bloomers and the best for Christmas flowering. C. W.

Cobden, Ill.—In addition to growing vegetables for market, J. B. Fitch makes a specialty of gladioli and peonies.

Bellwood, Pa.—C. F. Luse, who grows both flowers and vegetables at his greenhouses, finds present business first-rate.

West Grove, Pa.—A severe hail storm visited this place June 22. The Dingee & Conard Co. lost 6,000 panes of glass on the north side of their houses. There was no insurance, but the stock was not injured. M. Henry Lynch says it was the worst storm in his thirty years' experience.

Vegetable Forcing

MAKING A MUSHROOM BED.

Will you please give me some information on mushroom growing? How long can the spawn be kept? Can good mushrooms be grown under the benches in greenhouses? L. L.—Iowa.

Mushroom spawn, if stored in a cool, dry place, can be kept as long as a year and will still produce mushrooms, but it is vastly more productive when obtained as fresh as possible. Mushrooms can be quite successfully grown under greenhouse benches in winter, but it is much too warm for them there in summer. Make up the greenhouse mushroom bed about the last of October or later, protect it from drip and hang cloths around the sides to exclude light and air and to prevent the bed from drying out. Fresh horse manure should be collected a week or two before the bed is to be made. Discard the long straw. Throw the manure in a heap and turn it over each day to allow the rank heat to escape. Add one-fourth as much pasture loam to the manure, to prevent burning; it also helps to hold moisture.

When the rank heat has subsided, make up the bed. Spread out a layer and tramp or pound it as hard as possible. Continue adding layers and tramping until the bed is nine or ten inches thick. It is important to firm the manure thoroughly, as it will then retain heat longer and the spawn will run better. Plunge a thermometer into the bed. The mercury may run up to 115 or 120 degrees. Spawn it when it has declined to 85 or 90 degrees. Break the spawn in pieces the size of a walnut and plant these a foot apart each way in the bed, and two inches deep. Eight or ten days later give the bed a top-dressing of a couple of inches of fresh pasture loam; then leave the bed alone until mushrooms appear. If there is any danger of the surface drying out, this can be avoided in large measure by giving the bed a covering of excelsior, hay, cocoanut fiber refuse or moss. It is best to remove this as mushrooms appear, which may be in a month, but more frequently it takes six or seven weeks and occasionally double that time. When the surface dries, water with hot water, at a temperature of 100 to 120 degrees.

The two principal spawns used are American Pure Culture and English Milltrack. The first named will appear the first and the mushrooms are large. The Milltrack mushrooms, however, are generally preferred in the market.

In the hot months, mushrooms can only be grown successfully in a cool, well darkened cellar or pit, where the maximum temperature does not exceed 70 degrees. Ventilation should only be given on cool nights. Given suitable conditions, immense crops can be produced in summer, and mushrooms always realize the highest market prices during the hottest months. C. W.

Wolfe City, Tex.—Mrs. P. P. Allen has found the florists' business a quite profitable line since her entry into it. Present business is good.

Aalsmeer, Holland.—It seems to growers here that the astilbe (spiraea) must have gone out of favor, especially in America. Of all Holland plants exported in quantity the decrease in the sale for the astilbe was most pronounced last season and at all growing centers in Holland large quantities remain unsold.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

SWAINSONA IN THE SOUTH.

Swainsona galegifolia alba is perhaps the most useful flower for southern florists to grow for funeral designs, on account of the quantity of flowers a few plants will supply and the length of time they remain in bloom. The plants are in bloom from April 1 to January 1.

When setting out the young plants, give them plenty of room, say $1\frac{1}{2} \times 2$ feet, so that they need not be disturbed for several years. A solid bed is decidedly the best place for them. The plants may be kept growing steadily for the first two years after planting, but after that it is better to let them rest during the month of January, cut them back severely and allow them to start slowly. It is risky to try to transplant them even in a dormant condition; hence the necessity of giving them permanent quarters at first planting. An occasional mulch of cow manure will keep them going.

A night temperature of 50 degrees suits them in winter. Plenty of air and water is the rule for summer. The flowers, after standing in water a few hours, last a long time in designs. L.

HYDRANGEAS IN THE SOUTH.

If the young hydrangea plants intended for blooming next Easter, in the south, have not had their final summer shift, they should have it at once. Late struck cuttings will probably only require 4-inch pots, but earlier rooted ones will need $4\frac{1}{2}$ -inch or 5-inch pots. One pinching is all that the plants require, three to five flowering shoots being enough for a 1-year-old plant. Be generous with the manure in the potting soil. Try the addition of a little leaf-mold and note the effect on the foliage. Plunge the plants out in a coldframe. While it is not absolutely essential, a partial shade during the hottest part of the day, here in the sunny south, will be gratefully appreciated. All through the summer the plants require plenty of water.

The ripening process in the fall is the particular part in their culture. As the days shorten and get colder, less and less water is required, but give enough so that the plants retain their leaves. Cover them with sashes when there is danger of freezing, but allow plenty of air during the day. So long as the plants do not freeze, the temperature cannot be too low. A slight freezing, however, is liable to destroy the embryo flower. In most sections of the south the plants can be kept in the frame until time for going into their flowering pots, which should be twelve to fourteen weeks before Easter.

Old plants left over can be cut back severely, well shaken out and pruned at the roots, and planted out in a frame where they can be easily watered. They can be lifted just before frost, potted in good, rich soil and kept in a cool house. They will make nice plants for late spring or early summer sales, but are of no account for forcing. The new French varieties are becoming great favorites and are much more easily forced than the old Otaksa.

TANK FOR LIQUID MANURE.

We desire information as to the best way to construct a liquid manure tank, and also the best way to force the liquid through the water pipes. All information you can give us will be greatly appreciated. B. F. C.—Mont.

Without knowing the extent of the range, I cannot advise definitely regarding the size of the manure tank. I would suggest, however, that it be built four feet wide and deep, and a length of eight to twelve feet will probably answer. The walls should, of course, be of concrete, with the bottom about four inches thick, and the walls six inches thick at the bottom and four inches at the top. Sharp gravel is desirable, and if bank-run gravel is used, four parts to one of cement will be needed to make a good job. With sifted gravel or broken stone, four parts of the coarse aggregate and two of sharp sand may be used with one part of cement.

After thoroughly mixing the gravel and cement, add water enough to moisten the mass and work it until every particle is wet. If water enough is added so that it will pour from a pail, forming what is known as a wet mix, it will be about right.

After making the bottom of the tank, set up the forms for the walls, supporting and bracing them so that they will be rigid. As soon as the cement has set, take down the form and plaster the wall with neat cement, so as to make a surface that will be smooth and impervious to water.

It is a good plan to make a partition about two feet from one end, to form a sort of settling basin, connecting the two parts by means of an inverted 4-inch sewer pipe trap.

While a small steam or electric pump will be desirable for distributing the manure water, good results may be obtained by means of an injector connected with the water system. The Kinney pump, which is used for this purpose, works on this principle. T.

LANCASTER, PA.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Club was held June 17, with a good attendance. "Field Culture of Carnations" was the topic of the evening; the discussion which followed the paper on this subject by Ira H. Landis, of Paradise, brought out many good points.

The picnic committee reported an overwhelming vote for Rocky Springs park, where the picnic will be held July 15. Indications are for the largest gathering in the history of the club. The picnic committee is arranging a program of sports for the day.

President B. F. Barr extended an invitation to the club to hold an outing at his Avondale Farms sometime during August. Those who attended last year's outing there know what a pleasant time is in store for the members of the club.

Various Notes.

Weather conditions have been such that the carnation growers are astonished at the wonderful growth of their plants in the field. Several growers are already making a start at planting in.

June 13 a severe rain and wind storm passed over Lancaster county. H. A. Schroyer's place suffered most. Several of his older houses were demolished. The heavy rainfall caused many wash-outs and the flooding of fields.

Elmer J. Weaver is harvesting an extra fine crop of greenhouse tomatoes. There is a brisk local demand for them.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Last week's market proved to be rather quiet. The supply of stock continues too heavy for market requirements, and this, combined with the fact that the amount of available business is not large, has served to hammer prices down to a low point. Shipping business, however, holds up pretty well.

The rose cut is as large as it was, but is not of the same high average quality. Mildew has appeared on the stock of some of the large consignors to the market. The good stock, however, is so plentiful and so reasonable in price that poor stock finds no market at all. Outdoor roses are becoming plentiful, but as long as the forced ones are as plentiful as they are now outdoor stock will have no call.

Lilies are plentiful. They move rather slowly. Gladiolus receipts are becoming heavy. The outdoor blooms from the south are here in addition to the end of the cut of forced ones. Sweet peas are fine, but are not cleaning up well. Both valley and orchids are plentiful and are good. Hardy hydrangeas are now in the market. Other offerings include carnations, coreopsis, feverfew and snapdragon. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The marriage of Frank Kyrk and Miss Edna Ganzmiller was solemnized at the Poplar Street Presbyterian church Tuesday, June 22. The church decorations, by Miss Edith Kyrk and L. H. Kyrk, consisted of plants and lilies. The couple are taking a short trip to Columbus, O., now and plan a longer honeymoon in July.

William Speck has been cutting some fine auratum lilies.

C. E. Critchell has been receiving some excellent America gladioli from the south.

Visitors include Jos. Molek, New Albany, Ind., and Chas. Pommert, Amelia, Ohio.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

More seasonable weather has caused the rapid growth of flowers, and this has resulted in a larger stock in the market and lower prices. The fact that so many people have rose bushes and flower gardens of their own, which are now beginning to bloom profusely, also hurts the florists' business. Most of the florists, however, have been quite busy on funeral or wedding work, and there is some demand for flowers for graduation gifts, though this demand is far smaller than it was before the public presentation of flowers during graduation exercises was forbidden in many of the schools of the city. The quality of greenhouse roses is not up to what it was during the winter months, and the prices are lower. Ophelia is popular, as are Sunburst and Killarney. Carnations, which a few weeks ago cost $4 and $5 per hundred, can now be bought for from 50 cents to $2. The quality is much inferior to what it was, many growers nearing the end of their crops. There is much fine sweet william in the market and the quality is good. Larkspur is beginning to appear. Some fine maidenhair fern is coming into the market. Wild spiraea is nearly gone. Mountain laurel is cheap and quite plentiful. There is a plentiful supply of the various varieties of iris, though the quality is beginning to deteriorate. Gladioli of excellent quality and in fairly large quantities are seen in the different stores. Peonies are plentiful and are getting a little cheaper, though the price still keeps fairly firm because of the fact that large quantities are being kept in cold storage.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Essex County Florists' Club, which was held June 17 in the Krueger auditorium, further plans for the summer outing of the members of the club and their friends were discussed. It was decided to hold the outing during the early part of August at Gillette, N. J. There will be plenty of refreshments, a ball game and various athletic contests. Prizes will be awarded the winners in the sporting events. The exact date of the outing and its details will be fixed by a committee consisting of Richard Yule, Ernest Hausmann, August Begerow and James McLaughlin.

At the request of the Yard and Lot Improvement Association, a committee,

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

C. S. HARRISON.

PROBABLY no man in the trade has had a more remarkable career than C. S. Harrison, and certainly few men in it at 83 will possess anything like his vital forces. Harrison was born in 1832. He was educated for the ministry and at 66 he was on the superannuated list! But just then he began to live—he started a nursery at York, now one of the most important in Nebraska. His preacher's training in handling words and in talking standing up caused him to be in great demand at the trade conventions and at meetings of horticultural societies, so it is probable this octogenarian is personally known to more people than is any other member of the trade today. He has specialized on the peony, the phlox, the iris, and has written monographs on them that are in all horticultural libraries. And at 83 he's still one of the youngest of us.

consisting of August Begerow and William G. Muller, was appointed to supervise the department of its work affected by the prizes offered by the Florists' Club. There are 300 entries in the floral contest. The Florists' Club two months ago voted $50 for prizes for the best plot of blooming flowers grown under the direction of the Yard and Lot Improvement Association. The committee appointed by the club to interview the Newark school board regarding the prohibition of the presentation of flowers at graduation exercises in the various schools reported that the board stated it had not officially forbidden the giving of flowers at graduation, though it had discouraged it. Principles of various schools have forbidden such presentations.

Various Notes.

Henry F. Strobel, 931 Broad street, has had several weddings to provide flowers for during the last few weeks and has others coming along during the rest of the month.

William A. Manda has been elected a vice-president of the Civic Association of South Orange, which was recently organized for the purpose of bringing the needs of the residents before the South Orange village board of trustees.

John W. Walsh spent several days in Newark and vicinity last week in the interest of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia.

Fred Wolfinger, 883 Broad street, has been busy with wedding and funeral work during the last two weeks. He has placed a large order for magnolias for the summer trade, which will arrive about July 1.

August C. Begerow, 946 Broad street, had a pretty display of iris in his window last week, the different varieties being so arranged as to show off their colors to good advantage.

Philips Bros., 938 Broad street, have had several weddings to provide flowers for recently. A large bouquet of Canterbury bells in the window last week attracted considerable attention.

A representative of the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, called on the trade last week.

Graduation season is at hand again. Exercises in some of the schools have already been held, and in the other schools will be held within a week or ten days. Newark florists are getting some extra trade because of this fact, but the trade that they are getting now from this source is small compared with what they got before the school authorities prohibited the presentation of floral gifts to pupils publicly during graduation exercises. Each year sees a greater reduction of revenue from this source.

Hausmann Bros. & Son, on Boyden avenue, Hilton, have done a good spring business, but find collections a little slow. They are now supplying a large quantity of outdoor sweet peas to the Newark and Elizabeth trade. A greenhouse, 40x125 feet, is being built for the firm by Hitchings & Co., of Elizabeth. This may be enlarged to 200 feet in length later. R. B. M.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The Market.

Planting finishes this week with the benching of the chrysanthemum plants. The favorable showers we have had lately have given the outside stock a splendid send-off for the season. Some fine gladioli are being cut at present, the bulbs having been brought from Holland and planted among the carnations during the winter. It is doubtful if florists will ever want to use the local product again after seeing some of the new varieties that are now coming into bloom. Roses are rather more plentiful than is usual at this time of year, but carnations find a ready market at $3 per hundred. Cattleya Gaskelliana and gigas, at $35 and $40 per hundred respectively, also find a regular sale during June, even though the percentage of weddings is markedly less than for many years. It looks as if the same steady difference in business that has obtained since the war began will continue so far as the flower trade is concerned. Practically no new greenhouses are likely to be built throughout the province during such time as the price of glass and labor remains at the present level.

Various Notes.

Walter Calvert had a good violet season in his new houses. He is going in for asparagus more extensively this year.

Mark Henderson has a fine crop of tomatoes just ripening.

A. A. Elliott continues to devote his energies to the successful propagation of the popular sweet pea.

Wm. Fendley has been cutting large quantities of marguerites lately. He is experimenting with some new varieties of single dahlias.

W. G. Mullis has been fortunate with his sweet pea crop at the McIntyre Greenhouses this spring. He intends to grow chrysanthemums for the fall trade. W. G. P.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market is full of outdoor roses and, while peony shipments have about ended, the great quantities in cold storage continue them an important factor in the street. Last week the market was heavily overstocked and prices continue to average abnormally low. There were tremendous shipments of roses all last week and most of them were sold in the boxes in which they arrived, at prices which are unmentionable. Whatever strength there was in the rose market was created by the American Beauties, and yet the best of these at times could be obtained at less than $10 per hundred.

The carnation situation is calamitous. The finest of these could be found mingling with the loads in the carts of the peddlers last week and the stores secured their supplies at 75 to 50 cents per hundred. They did not use more than a small part of the receipts, as, notwithstanding the few commencements and weddings still occurring, general retail trade is much below normal.

The finest gigas sold at $12 per hundred June 19. No one thought of asking over 20 cents for them. On Mossie and other varieties sales were made as low as $6 per hundred. The accumulation of lilies is enormous. The best of them did not go above $2 per hundred last week and many were sold as low as $10 per thousand. The supply of valley is far in excess of the demand and the same is true of sweet peas, now at their best in quality. All other flowers are abundant. Branches of the rambler roses are much used in window decorations.

Various Notes.

At the September meeting of the Florists' Club a stereopticon lecture on "Gladioli" will be delivered by Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy.

Early closing will be the rule after July 1. Many of the retailers announce from noon on Saturday to Monday morning as their program during July and August.

A visit at Tarrytown last week made possible the enjoyment of the most perfect and beautiful summer flower show the Tarrytown Horticultural Society has ever staged. The showing of outdoor roses was magnificent and the attendance was gratifying to the management. Secretary Newbrand was in charge of the arrangements and display. F. R. Pierson was not too busy to escort visitors through his new store and office building, the most beautiful building devoted to floriculture in this country, and through his nurseries at Scarborough. To his immense greenhouse plant here are to be added two more houses of similar size to the seven already there, the whole to be devoted to roses. The force employed by the company now numbers over 100.

L. B. Coddington, of Murray Hill, N. J., has begun daily shipments of the new red rose, Hoosier Beauty.

Samuel Woodrow has leased his store at Narragansett Pier, R. I., to Messrs. Marketos and Hart for the season.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The Market.

There has been little sunshine during the last week, and the weather has been mostly cold and dark. This condition has kept the market from going to pieces and has kept prices up better than is to be expected for this time of year. Stock is plentiful, but the quality in general is good and the daily cut is being disposed of to a great extent. The cut of roses and carnations is heavy, but the demand remains strong and there has been no glut so far. Sweet peas are still in the market and are bringing fair prices. We need only a few days of bright, warm weather to bring the end of this stock for the season. Peonies are in fine shape. Their season has been considerably prolonged by the cold, cloudy weather.

June weddings are the big item for the trade just now, although graduation exercises are helping clean up stock to a great extent and are no small factor in the business. There is surely no complaint on spring business this year, for while there has not been enough stock to go around, prices have been good, and business in general has been much cleaner than in previous years.

Various Notes.

Among the visitors last week were Mr. Mandas, of the Sunshine Florist, Minneapolis; H. B. Kennicott, of Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, and C. Gould, from Onarga, Ill. H. J. S.

Emaus, Pa.—Clayton Weaver, who has taken over the business of the Emaus Floral Co., formerly known as Weaver & Collett, has secured a florist from Philadelphia to take charge of the plant houses.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

During the last six months much important work has been done by the National Flower Show committee of the S. A. F. in connection with the fourth national flower show, to be held in Convention hall, Philadelphia, March 25 to April 2, 1916, and arrangements are rapidly assuming definite form. Chairman George Asmus, of Chicago, has been in attendance at several of the meetings of the local executive committee in an advisory capacity, and the committee has had the full benefit of his experience with such exhibitions. The local executive committee is well organized and in no other city have the different horticultural interests been so well represented on an exhibition board as in this instance in Philadelphia. This committee will hold regular meetings from the present time until the close of the show.

The various sub-committees, too, are well organized, and are working on the various details of preparatory work harmoniously and with a zeal which leaves no doubt as to the successful outcome of the undertaking. These committees, with their chairmen, are as follows:

Press, Publicity and Advertising—W. F. Therkildson.
Securing Exhibits—William Kleinheinz.
Decorations—John Habermehl.
Special Premiums—William P. Craig.
Special Features—Charles Grakelow.
Lease and Contracts—A. Farenwald.
Music—Leo Niessen.
Printing—S. S. Penneck.
Concessions—Henry F. Mitchell.
Trade Tickets—E. J. Fancourt.
Lectures—J. Otto Thilow.
Bureau of Information—Frederick Cowperthwaite.
Secretary and Treasurer—A. A. Niessen.
Committee-at-large—George Burton, Louis Burk, Robert Craig.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society has been invited to assist in the work of the exhibition and, through Hartman Kuhn, its president, the ladies of the different garden clubs in the vicinity of Philadelphia have been invited to take part in the exhibition, and are already at work on plans to have a tea garden, or something similar, on lines followed by the ladies of the Red Cross at the recent New York show. Sufficient space will be allotted them by the management for the purpose.

An unusual feature and attraction will be exhibits by different societies devoted to aquarium fish and aquarium plants. This section of the show is being taken care of by Franklin Barrett, whose personal exhibit alone will cost almost $600 to stage.

The trade exhibition in connection with the show will be most extensive and comprehensive, and applications for space are coming in rapidly. The H. F. Mitchell Co., Philadelphia, has booked up for Block 30, and Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Riverton, N. J., and Philadelphia, for Block 1, each containing 1,026 square feet. A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., is among other large exhibitors in this section. Floor plans have been distributed and extra copies may be had upon application to the superintendent of the trade exhibition. [Or see page 21 of The Review for June 10.]

THE COMING CONVENTION.

The attention of the members of the society, and of the trade at large, is now quite naturally diverted to the thirty-first annual convention, to be held in San Francisco, August 17 to 19. Reports received from the transportation committees of the various local organizations throughout the country indicate that the attendance at the convention will be considerably larger than was at first anticipated.

President Welch expects that the party from Boston and the east will be large enough to fill a car. The New York party as already booked numbers fifteen, and in all probability this booking will be at least doubled. These bookings are, of course, exclusive of the attendance of those whose duties will require them to be in San Francisco in advance of the convention dates. The glowing reports concerning the horticultural features of the great exposition in progress in San Francisco, as presented by Chas. H. Totty and others who have returned from the coast, will undoubtedly influence many in their decision to attend the convention, so that a good average general attendance is confidently expected.

The Welch Prize.

Vice-president Daniel MacRorie is the only one to comply with the rules and regulations governing the President Welch prize offered for the member sending in the greatest number of applications for membership before July 1. Mr. MacRorie has already sent in almost 100 names, and reports that he will complete the hundred by July 1.

The Trade's Display.

Floor plans of the Memorial auditorium, where the business sessions of the convention and the trade exhibition are to be held, have been sent to all members. These plans show the spaces allotted to exhibitors, and the great adaptability of the building for exhibition purposes. While exhibitors from the far east, owing to distance and high transportation charges, will not occupy such generous display spaces as they have done at other exhibitions, the following have contracted for liberal areas and will make fine displays:

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia.

M. Rice Co., Philadelphia.

John A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.

The Advance Co., Richmond, Ind.

The secretary will be in San Francisco considerably in advance of the convention, and will cheerfully care for

The S. A. F. Badge.

The S. A. F. annual badge button has been sent to all members who have remitted for the 1915 assessment. There are a few life members' buttons still available for those entitled to them and they will be sent upon receipt of 75 cents. It would be a convenience to the secretary if the members who have not already done so will send in their 1915 assessment at once. The receipts to date for dues compare favorably with those of other years.

The printed 1915 annual report has also been distributed, and a copy should be in the hands of every member in good standing. John Young, Sec'y.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The Market.

The retailers have all been busy with weddings and commencements. As these are about over now, store renovations and vacations will soon be in order.

There has been an abundance of stock at reasonable prices. Indoor sweet peas are about past. Roses are showing the effect of the warmer weather in the decreased size of the buds, with the exception of summer varieties such as Russell, Key, Shawyer, Maryland and Milady. Double White Killarney is the only white rose grown in quantity the year around. Carnations are about past; the growers are now busy replanting.

Flower Show.

The Connecticut Horticultural Society held its first spring flower show June 10 and 11 in lower Unity hall. The exhibits were laid out to represent flower beds. On each side of the entrance leading to the hall were box trees shown by W. W. Hunt & Co. They also had an oblong of perennials. John F. Huss, superintendent of the Goodwin estate, was another exhibitor of a wonderful variety of perennials. He also showed some primroses never exhibited before, discovered in northern China by Professor Wilson, of Boston. An effective round bed of blue perennials was shown by Oscar F. Gritzmacher, of New Britain. A round bed of roses was shown by Niel Nelson, containing in the center Enchantress and White Enchantress carnations and sweet peas.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, arranged a long bed of roses of all kinds and also displayed twenty-five blooms of each variety of roses grown in the Cromwell gardens. Four tables were decorated by John Coombs, Edward Welch and Louis Chauvy, assisted by Miss Benson, to represent wedding breakfast tables.

The design of this exhibition was the creation of Walter A. Cooke, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., New York. Following are the awards:

Perennials—James J. Goodwin, first; W. W. Hunt & Co., second; A. N. Pierson, Inc., third. Palm and foliage plants—James J. Goodwin, first; Mrs. A. A. Pope, second; A. N. Pierson, Inc., third.

Decorated tables—Edward Welch, first; John Coombs, second; Louis Chauvy and Miss Benson, very highly commended.

Cut roses—A. N. Pierson, Inc., first; Niel Nelson, second; Prof. M. W. Jacobus, third.

Bedding plants—Walter L. Goodwin, first; J. A. Brodrib, second.

The following certificates were awarded:

W. W. Hunt & Co., first-class certificate for boxwood plants.

John C. Willard, first-class certificate for pansies and certificate of merit for columbine.

Spear & McManus, first-class certificate for group of palms.

John Coombs, first-class certificate for groups of palms and lilies.

J. Albert Brodrib, first-class certificate for group of bedding plants.

Louis Chauvy, first-class certificate for bedding plants.

John F. Huss, first-class certificate for Primula Bulleyana.

H. L. Ritson, certificate of merit for perennials and roses.

J. Vidbourne & Co., first-class certificate for peonies.

Alfred Cebellus, certificate of merit for roses, and first-class certificate for campanulas.

Park department, first-class certificate for display of bedding plants.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., first-class certificates for group of palms, group of roses, and for cut roses.

Warren S. Mason, first-class certificate for perennials.

John F. Huss, special for best general exhibit, $2.50 in gold, offered by Walter A. Cooke, of New York.

Oscar F. Gritzmacher, first-class certificate for group of perennials.

Niel Nelson, first-class certificate for roses, carnations and sweet peas.

Various Notes.

John Coombs' new house is well under way. Planting will be started shortly.

Signboard advertising is now popular among the retailers.

Charles Peterson, who has been manager of the Whiting greenhouses for a number of years, has purchased the business and will take possession July 1. The business will be conducted under the old name.

Axel G. Bloomberg, who had charge of the carnation department of A. N. Pierson, Inc., until recently, has joined the staff of M. O'Field & Sons, of Grimsby, Ontario. R. C. S.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—After having been in bed all the latter part of the winter with typhoid pneumonia, Brott, the Florist, is around again.

Minot, N. D.—Mrs. I. Hudspeth, formerly manager of the Flower Shop & Nursery, Marysville, Cal., is now connected with Valker's Greenhouses.

Shippensburg, Pa.—U. G. Harglerode has taken his two sons into partnership and the business now is being conducted under the name of Harglerode & Sons.

Gary, Ind.—A. T. Bushong has returned from a trip to Green Bay, Wis., where he was at one time at the head of the street railway department of the Wisconsin Public Service Co.

Eldora, Ia.—C. C. Wakeling, formerly of Oskaloosa and later lessee of the Harlem Greenhouses at River Forest, Ill., has come here to become manager of Pierce's Greenhouses and Vegetable Gardens, in which he has acquired an interest.

Racine, Wis.—W. S. Jackson, of the Lake View Greenhouses, has presented a claim of $150 against the city for the damage done his automobile in a collision with Fire Chief Cape's car a short time ago. The responsibility for the disaster is disputed.

Walla Walla, Wash.—Andrew H. Freeborough, 54 South Palouse street, who recently entered the florists' business for himself, has left for the harvest fields for the summer. He states that the town has gone automobile crazy and people are not buying flowers.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—At the death of Richard E. Evans the business conducted under his name was incorporated as the Evans Floral Co. George A. Peterson, who has been with the firm sixteen years, continues in the position of manager, which he has held for the last nine years.

Haverhill, Mass.—Frank Leith has taken his son into partnership and the firm trades as Frank Leith & Son. Business has been excellent since spring came.

Cincinnati, O.—William Murphy, after seven months of illness, during which his case was given up as hopeless by three physicians, is out on the street again.

Hastings, Neb.—The widow and elder son of Charles W. Winkler have asked the court for an order restraining the filing of deeds which transfer the greater part of his $35,000 estate to Charles W. Winkler, Jr., to the exclusion of the widow and other son. Mr. Winkler's incompetency is alleged.

Paterson, N. J.—The judges at the third annual exhibition of the Paterson Floricultural Society, June 14, were James McCollom, superintendent of parks, Arthur Vescelius, the florist, and Thomas Heminsley, a grower. The exhibit of George H. Peterson, of Fairlawn, was the most interesting single display.

Denver, Colo.—Mrs. J. A. Valentine is convalescing in a local hospital, following an operation performed early in June, for appendicitis and related disorders. She had been ill for some time before going to the hospital and was not strong enough to rally quickly after the operation, but her ultimate restoration to good health is confidently expected.

Lancaster, Pa.—Frank M. Siebold, the son of Julius P. and Mrs. Siebold, recently forsook his trade of pattern-maker and returned home to take up the wholesale florists' business with his parents, their trade having increased to such proportions as to make this necessary. "And," adds Mrs. Siebold, "of course The Review sells all the stock."

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

C. F. Baker & Son, Utica, rebuilt their entire establishment, including one of the prettiest and most commodious offices in the state. With first-class stock, sales are beyond the average.

Williams & Weider, successors to Frank McGowan, Utica, are making many improvements and report satisfactory business.

The proprietors of the Williams Welded Wire Works, at Utica, feel they have revolutionized the manufacture of wire goods by their new electrical method. As an illustration, forty 16-inch wreaths were completed in thirty minutes.

W. P. Pfeifer, Utic, keeps up his reputation as a carnationist. His Philadelphia, White Wonder, White Enchantress and Matchless are in splendid condition.

W. A. Rowlands, Whitesboro, N. Y., is growing Rosette and Philadelphia carnations in place of Mrs. Ward, which does not flourish here. White Wonder and Enchantress Supreme are staples. "Doc" is an equally successful dentist. As the Standard Oil Co. has purchased the building in which he has his office, with a two years' lease to run, he may be so situated that he will be quite a plunger in new varieties.

Whitton & Sons, Utica, disposed of practically everything in the shape of a bloom in their wholesale and retail departments around Memorial time.

Brant Bros., Utica, kept the craft well supplied with fine cuts of roses for the Memorial day trade. W. M.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

This has been one of the busiest weeks that we have had since Easter. Graduations and commencement exercises have been numerous and weddings galore. Funeral work, too, has added to the rush. The weather has been warm, and outdoor stock is pouring in. There is a mammoth glut of peonies, and they are offered at low figures. Outdoor roses are becoming more plentiful. Gaillardias, oriental poppies and garden pinks are sold cheaply.

Indoor stock continues to arrive in satisfactory condition. American Beauties are plentiful and of good color. The Mock rose, owing to its richness of color and strong stem, has been much sought after for bouquet work. Sunburst, Taft, Mrs. Ward and My Maryland are fine and sell fast. Radiance and Hadley are in good demand. Sweet peas are plentiful and of good quality, but the stems are getting much shorter. Orchids sell quite well just now. Calendulas, bachelor's buttons, yellow daisies and mignonette are among the finer flowers, and are much used in basket arrangements. Spanish iris, pink and white baby gladioli and a good supply of Americas complete the stock. The supply of green goods meets the demand. Galax, ivy and magnolia leaves are all plentiful. A big scarcity of potted plants is noticed everywhere.

Various Notes.

William H. Dildine is getting much stronger and is able to walk around, but unable to be at the office at present.

Harry Brush, who until recently managed the West Main street store of Henry P. Neun, has commenced business for himself at 245 East Main street.

William Pitkin, president of the Chase Bros. Co., has donated to the Honeoye Falls Improvement Association 400 shrubs, which have been planted in prominent places about the town.

Visitors last week included J. E. Giles, of the Nashua Gummed & Coated Paper Co., Nashua, N. H., and J. Bieber and A. Leipzig, of the Leipzig Co., New York. The latter firm had an elegant display of all kinds of baskets at Powers' hotel and did a fine business among the city florists.

The Lady Florists' Auxiliary held its monthly meeting Tuesday, June 15, under the trees at Highland park. After business was over, an enjoyable time was spent visiting the beauty spots.

George Arnold, Jr., for many years superintendent of James Vick's Sons' aster farms, at Spencerport, N. Y., will leave their employ July 1 and will take entire charge of the Letchworth estate, at Ensenore, N. Y. He will undertake a little commercial growing on the side.

Salter Bros. are displaying some beautiful hanging baskets filled with ferns at the West Main street store. At the east side store they have a good display of ferns, baskets and bird cages.

The Rochester Florists' Association held its monthly meeting at the store of George B. Hart Monday, June 14. About thirty members were present. Topics of unusual interest to both grower and retailer were discussed. It was decided not to hold any meetings during the summer except for the exposition and flower show. The monthly meetings will be resumed next October. Refreshments were served by the house committee.

Jacob Thomann & Sons are growing some splendid blue double lobelias in 2½-inch pots, which find ready sale.

H. J. H.

Waltham, Mass.—Peirce Bros. distributed 10,000 rose bushes to the citizens of Waltham through the Home Garden Association June 16.

Davenport, Ia.—Forber & Bird sent out neatly printed invitations to the formal opening of their new store June 19 and welcomed a large number of visitors. As the card said, there were souvenirs and the glad hand for all.

Hillsboro, Ill.—B. B. Pohlmann, who conducts a greenhouse establishment under lease at Rockford, Ill., has purchased the J. A. Wibe place here and has taken possession. At the end of his Rockford lease he will devote all his energies to the business here. He considers the prospect excellent, there being a good local trade and all facilities for the wholesale plant business. The range includes 12,000 feet of glass.

Washington, D. C.—To fill the 250 public beds in and near Washington, between 600,000 and 700,000 bedding plants were propagated in the greenhouses of the government last winter. The man in charge of the work is Charles Henlock, who began his service under Cleveland's administration and who has been in charge of the thirty-two greenhouses maintained by the government for the last six years. Under him is a force of twenty men.

Thompson Falls, Mont.—E. S. Doods, cashier of the Thompson State bank, is promoting a greenhouse and nursery business here, and when he has arranged other business affairs will probably devote his whole time to it. There are 4,000 acres east of town being cut up into 10 and 20-acre tracts for settlers, and as at present all horticultural stock must be shipped from either Spokane, 150 miles west, or Missoula, Mont., 100 miles east of here, the outlook for a successful business seems good.

Utica, N. Y.—Fire June 15 in the cellar under H. G. Martin's flower store, at 39 Genesee street, threatened the destruction of the 4-story brick building in which it is situated. No cause for the fire could be ascertained. The damage amounted to about $500.

Superior, Wis.—G. Tjensvold, founder and for a number of years exclusive owner of the Superior Floral Co., which operates a store at 1410 Tower avenue and greenhouses on Twenty-first street, Billings Park, has sold his interest to his partner, William Berg, who will continue the business. A. C. Gardiner will continue as manager of the store.

Fairmont, Minn.—John Leng and Hartvig Sjevik, who not long ago purchased property and built a greenhouse here, preparatory to operating under the title of Fairmont Greenhouse Co., have sold out to J. C. McCullough, of Reinbeck, Ia. They have purchased property at Canton, S. D., where they intend to build later on. Mr. Leng will not move to South Dakota until autumn, being in the meantime at his old address, Truman, Minn.

Portsmouth, Va.—The Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia has awarded a writ of error and supersedeas in the case of George E. Richardson versus the Portsmouth Cotton Oil Co., upon appeal of the defendant from the Circuit Court of Norfolk county. In his suit for $20,000 damages, Mr. Richardson won a verdict with judgment for $3,000 in the lower court last December. He charged that the oil company polluted the water of Paradise creek and caused noxious stenches to pervade the air, thus hindering him in his flower growing business. The oil company in its appeal alleges errors in the admission of evidence and errors in the instructions given by the court, and contends that the verdict was contrary to the law and the evidence.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Boston, Mass.—Sidney Hoffman, doing business at 59 and 61 Massachusetts avenue, Boston, with greenhouses at 581 Mount Auburn street, Cambridge, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy June 14, in the United States District court. His liabilities are scheduled at $67,727.03. Of this amount, $63,891.74 is unsecured debts, $3,410 secured debts, $285.29 wages and $140 taxes. Of the total assets, amounting to $14,040, stock in trade is given as $6,500; book debts, $7,000; cash and money in bank, $140. Some of the heaviest creditors, locally, are: W. H. Elliott, $6,715.68; Waban Rose Conservatories, $6,927.71; W. R. Nicholson, $1,400; W. A. Hastings, $1,030; George H. Noyes, $1,200; W. J. Patterson, $108; Frank Edgar, $400; H. M. Robinson & Co., $1,100; John C. Gray, $4,375; Mrs. S. Goldberg, $10,300; Thomas Roland, $1,375; Jean Newcomb, New York, $4,000; B. Hammond Tracy, $1,287.

Business is being done as usual at the Massachusetts avenue store, on a cash basis, and will probably be continued when a settlement has been made. It is understood that the store has proved quite profitable, other interests the reverse, and these latter will be dropped. Referee Gibbs has appointed Alexander I. Stoneman receiver, with authority to continue the business.

Kansas City, Mo.—A petition asking that the Southern Nut Nursery Co., 2943 East Twenty-eighth street, be adjudged bankrupt was filed in the federal court July 15. The liabilities are given as more than $44,000, on notes held by Henry C. Brent, receiver of the Southern Orchard Planting Co. Elinor Anderson, stenographer, is one of the petitioners, asking for $35 due her for services. C. V. Norfleet is the manager of the nursery company.

ROCHESTER TO HOLD SHOW.First Annual Show Next September.

Rochester is to have a big flower show from August 30 to September 11. It is to be held in connection with the annual Rochester Industrial and Agricultural Exposition, asserted to be the greatest municipal exposition in the United States. Now, in its eighth year, it is attended by upward of a quarter of a million people.

This is the first year of the flower show, but it is to be on a big scale. Exhibition space is offered free to all growers, florists, seedsmen and nurserymen. This is made possible by the immense attendance at the exposition. Florists in New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and the New England states will be invited personally to attend, and will be informed of the names of the important growers who are to show their products.

One of the best buildings in the city's million-dollar Exposition park has been assigned to the flower show. It has 20,000 feet of floor space, with high skylight roof, cement floor, water and sewer connections, etc. It is said to be an ideal place for a flower show.

The flower department will be in the charge of the Rochester Florists' Association, which already has a record of many successful shows to its credit. That in itself guarantees the artistic features of the show, which will be arranged in garden effect.

Interests which appeal not only to growers directly, but also to their families, will be an extra inducement to visit the Rochester exposition. The exposition is entertaining, educational and inspirational. It has all the desirable features of a large state fair. Its horse show is considered second to none in the country. Its manufacturing exhibits represent almost every line. Its art loan exhibit brings together oil paintings and water colors by the famous artists of America. The supply of fruit and vegetables is unrivaled in this country. Rochester as a summer playground is famous. Its first-class hotels, beautiful drives, lake resorts and fertile agricultural surroundings afford all the opportunities for rest and amusement to a discriminating public.

OBITUARYAlbert C. Rott.

After an illness of only four days, Albert C. Rott, of Joliet, Ill., died June 17 at St. Joseph's hospital. The cause of death was uræmic poisoning.

Mr. Rott was widely known, both in the trade and fraternal circles. He was a member of the Illinois State Florists' Association, the Chicago Florists' Club, the Masons, Odd Fellows, Elks, Knights of Pythias, Moose and other organizations. He was a man who made friends readily and whose activities were ceaseless.

Mr. Rott was born at Bloomington, Ind., forty-nine years ago. He started in the florists' business in that city and had built up a fine business when he left for Colorado Springs, Colo., on account of his health. After he had improved he removed to Joliet, Ill. This was eight years ago and he quickly built up a retail business that was of excellent proportions for a city of that size. He was ably assisted in the store by Mrs. Rott. They had no children. Surviving with Mrs. Rott is his aged mother and two brothers, all of Bloomington.

The body lay in state at Chamberlin's chapel in Joliet until June 19. The funeral was held at Bloomington, Ind., June 20, in charge of the Masons. There was a large attendance, including many in the trade, and the floral remembrances were numerous. A. Zech, of Chicago, was among those present from a distance.

Gustave H. Taepke.

Gustave H. Taepke, Detroit, Mich., died Friday night, June 18, aged 61 years. He leaves his wife, one son, Walter, and three daughters. Mr. Taepke was one of Detroit's pioneer florists, starting in business there forty years ago. In addition to the range at 450 Elmwood avenue, for the last twenty years he conducted a retail store at 95 Gratiot avenue, in the heart of the business district. This store has been directly under Walter Taepke's supervision for many years. Mr. Taepke had been ill all winter. The funeral took place Monday afternoon, June 21, all the Detroit florists attending in a body.

H. S.

August Gaedeke.

August Gaedeke, of Nashua, N. H., died at St. Joseph's hospital, Nashua, June 15, of pleuropneumonia, after a few days' illness. He had the best of medical skill and his naturally strong constitution made a brave fight for the mastery. The end came quietly and peacefully. He was born at Stettin, Germany, in 1866, where the early part of his life was spent. When 17 years of age he went to Perth, Scotland, with an elder brother, and worked at gardening for three years. In 1886 he came to America. He located for one year at Cambridge, Mass., and left there to work for former U. S. District Attorney C. W. Hoitt, better known locally as Judge Hoitt, who had greenhouses on Franklin street. In 1893 the greenhouses were moved to Concord street, where they now stand. In 1900 August and his brother, Rudolph, bought out Judge Hoitt's share in the greenhouses and Major E. Ray Shaw went into partnership with them. Extensive improvements were then made.

Mr. Gaedeke sold his Concord street business only a few weeks ago to Fred D. Sperry, of Reading, Mass., and was planning to retire from active business. The deceased stood high as a floriculturist in New England, and had a host of friends in that part of the country. He was married in 1902 to Miss Ida Benson, and she proved of great help to him in his business. He is survived by Mrs. Gaedeke and also by two brothers, Albert, in Perth, Scotland, and Rudolph, in Nashua, and three sisters, one of whom lives in Milwaukee and the others in Stettin, Germany.

Funeral services were held at the First Unitarian church, June 18, and were largely attended. The gardeners and florists of Nashua attended in a body and sent a magnificent broken wreath. Large delegations were also present from the Knights Templar, Knights of Pythias, Foresters, and other secret orders to which Mr. Gaedeke belonged. The floral tributes have rarely been equaled in the city of Nashua, and attested the great popularity of the deceased.

W. N. C.

Chas. H. Koenig.

Chas. H. Koenig, of Millvale, Pittsburgh, Pa., died June 18, after an illness of two weeks. He was born in Konigsbronn, Wurttemberg, Germany, May 2, 1871. He came to America in 1888 and worked for a time for John Bader, in Pittsburgh. He was united in marriage to Miss Fischer, July 4, 1894. Shortly afterward he leased three small greenhouses, which he purchased a few years later and added to them until he had built up the present place. For several years he was associated with the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., acting as superintendent of the Bakerstown place and renting his own houses, but ten years ago he left this firm, on finding it necessary to take charge of his own houses. He was known as one of the largest growers of lilies and bulbous flowers in the Pittsburgh district.

He was a most industrious, conscientious man and a faithful member of the First Evangelical church, of Millvale, Pa. All who knew him realize that they have lost a friend and most worthy citizen. He is survived by his wife, nine children and two brothers. Funeral services were held June 21, at the church to which he belonged.

Clarke.

Louis Dreher.

Louis Dreher died of Bright's disease last week at a Denver hospital. He was 50 years of age. Mr. Dreher was formerly in business for himself at Deerfield, Ill. Then he worked for some time for Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Morton Grove, Ill. He went to Denver about five years ago, and had been working for C. F. Maler and Emil Glauber. He had been ill for the last few months.

The funeral took place from the Hoffman undertaking parlors. It was largely attended by leading men in the profession. There were many flowers. The interment was at Riverside cemetery. Mr. Dreher was not married, and as far as is known to his friends in Denver, leaves no relatives.

ILLINOIS BOILER BILL DEAD.

Illinois greenhousemen have reason for congratulation in the fact that the bill providing for the examination and licensing of firemen is dead. After it had passed the lower house of the state legislature, as reported in last week's issue of The Review, it was lost in the tremendous press of business that confronted the senate on the last few days of the session.

THE OHIO BOILER BILL.

The trouble experienced some months ago, in Toledo and in some other Ohio cities, with reference to the proposed new boiler law, has been revived. The law would make it compulsory that all boilers developing thirty horsepower or more be operated by union firemen. The union endeavored to aid in securing positions for its members, but the florists, naturally, were not highly pleased with the idea that greenhouse employers and men who had been engaged in firing their boilers for a period of years might be unable to secure a license on account of the fact that they could not answer some question to suit the member of the union who had charge of the examination.

At the time of the inception of this idea the florists were caught unawares, and it was only through some hasty and strenuous organization, and speedy action by the committee in charge, that they succeeded in defeating the plan for a time. The florists and gardeners saw that a calamity had narrowly been averted. They became more fully organized and became affiliated, also, with the Boiler Makers' Association, which offered the florists vigorous support in combating a law that would have dealt a death blow to many florists who could not afford to pay the required scale.

The idea of a licensed fireman in some places is justifiable, but this does not justify the demand that every florist having a boiler developing more than thirty horsepower should have a licensed man, especially when it is considered that the average fireman is entirely ignorant as to the correct temperature for greenhouses, and in that case severe losses would be incurred by the changes in the heating. Under these circumstances, the florists cannot be blamed for doing their utmost to defeat the proposed measure.

COLD STORAGE EASTER LILIES.

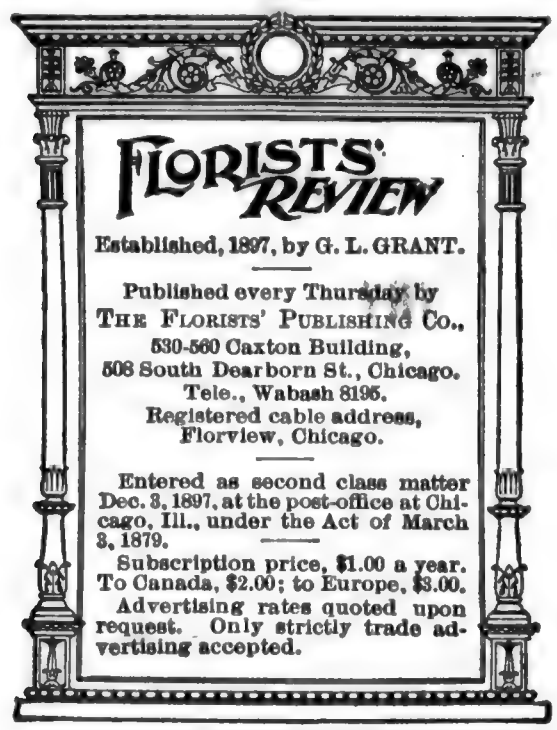

Would cold storage Easter lilies planted outside in June bloom this summer?

R. W.—Ind.

Yes, the cold storage longiflorum lily bulbs can be planted out now and will bloom this summer. Of course, the number of flowers per stalk is small compared with those produced from fresh bulbs.

Crestwood, Ky.—Geo. O. Klein, manager of the Sunny Mount Nursery & Floral Co., reports that the bedding plant season was so prosperous that the company will have to buy stock for next year of a good many items.

The Review brings results.

A GOOD many small florists think they are economizing by not having printed letter-heads, but the fact is it's a case of "penny wise and pound foolish."

ENCHANTRESS SUPREME has added materially to its already long list of good friends since the warm, bright weather came. There will be a big demand for cuttings of it next season.

As Fra Elbertus once said, the business of life is to idealize, to imagine a thing first and then to create it. A florist who loves his profession does just that; and one who is not an idealist has no business in this business.

THOSE of the readers of The Review who are interested in such subjects may obtain a pamphlet on "Nematodes and Their Relationships," by addressing the U. S. Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C. It is by N. A. Cobb, technologist in charge of agricultural technology in the bureau of plant industry, and was originally prepared for the Yearbook of the department for 1914. The call for the article required a second separate printing.

WHOLESALE cut flower markets frequently seem most inactive when the largest quantities of stock are being absorbed by the ultimate consumers and, conversely, the markets sometimes seem most active when comparatively little stock is being sold. But it usually is the fact that the small quantity sold at high prices brings the producer more money than does the great quantity sold at the sacrifice rates that prevail when the outlet is more or less outside of regular trade channels.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.
Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

FIVE YEARS.

Rissmann, Mrs. C., Herington, Kan.

THREE YEARS.

Wagenfohr, Fred W., Corona, N. Y.

TWO YEARS.

Stamp, J. O., Watertown, N. Y.

Albrecht, Mrs. Chas., San Antonio, Tex.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story;
no bills are run up; no duns sent.

NOT YET DECIDED.

John Young, secretary of the committee that has charge of the New York flower shows, advises that the holding of a spring exhibition in New York in 1916 is as yet undecided. The statement in last week's issue of The Review that Mr. Young has sent out premium lists for such a show was an error.

THE PART OF PRUDENCE.

While it is true that the flower business seems to be about as good as most lines the country over, with excellent conditions in certain sections, it can not be contended that the next few months hold out an altogether pleasing prospect. It seems scarcely probable that business conditions will improve greatly, for florists, during that part of the year that lies before frost.
While florists probably will fare better this summer than last, normal business hardly can be expected. Until other lines are busy as usual it is too much to hope that our trade will be as in years gone by.

In the meantime, prudence counsels conservatism. The careful man will, first of all, seek to free himself of obligation, a thing much easier said than done; he will give careful and continuous attention to collections, to the clearing of both sides of his ledger.
Capable financiering does not consist of postponing the day of reckoning—rather, it lies in a state of preparedness to meet contingencies.

THE TRADE IN GREAT BRITAIN.

When one considers that the Census Bureau found, in 1910, 10,614 greenhouse establishments in the United States, with a total of 105,165,730 feet of glass, it is interesting to note the results of an attempt at a census of the trade in Great Britain. This was undertaken some time ago by the Horticultural Trades' Association through a certified public accountant. The results were made public at a dinner in London in May. The chairman, William Cuthbertson, of Dobbie & Co., Edinburgh, said:

"The association sent out forms asking for particulars about the horticultural trade of the country. About half of the number replied, so the figures could not be taken as authoritative, but in coming to their conclusions they thought they were justified in doubling the figures received. The returns showed that the area cultivated amounted to over 26,000 acres, which, doubled, gave, roughly, 50,000 acres. The area under glass was 20,000,000 square feet—doubled, 40,000,000. The number of employees doubled for the whole trade was 30,000 men; boys, 5,400; women, 3,350; girls, 1,500; giving over 40,000 employees in the whole trade of Great Britain. The wages, doubled, were nearly £2,000,000 per annum, and the capital involved was something between £8,000,000 and £9,000,000."

NEXT WEEK'S WEATHER.

Weekly weather forecast,
issued by the U. S. Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C., for the week beginning Wednesday, June 23, 1915:

For the Region of the Great Lakes—
Fair weather will continue until about Friday, when a brief shower period may be expected; showers are probable again on Tuesday, June 29. Average temperatures will prevail.

For the Upper Mississippi Valley and Plains States—Showers are probable about Saturday, June 26, and again on Sunday, June 27. The temperatures will be close to the seasonal average.

For the Ohio Valley and Tennessee—
A period of intermittent showers will set in about Friday or Saturday, and again on Tuesday, June 29. The temperature will be close to the seasonal average.

For South Atlantic and East Gulf States—Fair weather, with continued high temperature, is probable throughout the week.

For the West Gulf States—Fair weather, with continued high temperature, is probable throughout the week.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

By a superficial observer, Chicago market conditions during the last week would probably be denominated bad.
But as a matter of fact, this is not true considering the time of the year.
True, prices were, generally speaking, not only weak but inclined to be uncertain, while the same week last year they were much better. On the other hand, however, a much greater quantity of stock was moved last week than a year ago. This, to a large extent, balances the scale of trade. It should be borne in mind, though, that the low prices bear no relation to the really excellent stock—stock that is of sufficient quality to stand shipping, but only to the abundance of poor stock that has been flooding the market. From the standpoint of both grower and commission man, it would appear by far the more profitable plan to dump this class of stock before it reaches the market, as it has a strong tendency to pull down with it, by the mere force of association of ideas, the price of fairly good stock.

Roses of practically all grades were in heavy oversupply. The demand, after the shipping trade had been taken care of, was more forced than natural.
There was much good stock on the market, but there was also much that should not have been there. Russell, as usual, led the demand, and in the greater lengths practically usurped the place formerly belonging to Beauties alone. Ophelia is not in such good request as earlier in the season, for it is received in moderate quantities from

The Russell Rose

WE HAVE THE LARGEST SUPPLY IN THE COUNTRY

ONE day last week our receipts of the popular new Mrs. Russell Rose totaled 24,000—and every day our supply is, if not quite so large, at least large enough to insure our ability to fill orders. No rose ever made a greater hit than Mrs. Russell. It's a splendid keeper. If the flower buyers of your city don't know it yet, don't let them gain their acquaintance with it in the store of your competitor.

We also have large and fine supplies of Ophelia, Milady, Killarney Brilliant, Ward and Sunburst—all good roses.

AMERICAN BEAUTIES

We offer a very large crop, cut from young plants. These Beauties are right in every respect—including price—and you will find they are a fine money-maker for you—sure to please your customers and bring them back for more.

CARNATIONS

There are plenty of Carnations now, but not all of them will meet the requirements of critical trade. OUR Carnations are acknowledged second to none. They will give satisfaction.

FINE PEONIES

Our specialty is extra fancy Peonies. They are the best, big, showy flower you can use.

SWEET PEAS

The stock we offer is the spring-blooming Spencers—a large supply, splendid quality, all colors. Just what you need for corsage work.

LILIES

You can get here fine Easter Lilies in any quantity.

CATTLEYAS

There are no finer Orchids and our supply is large.

We Offer Fine New Ferns at a Moderate Price

FANCY VALLEY ALWAYS ON HAND

We handle the Chicago Market Brand Valley exclusively. There is none better. A never-failing supply.

a large number of growers who are cutting their first crop.

The supply of carnations was large, and the quality was unusually good for June. Demand, however, was quite dormant in the local market. It is reported one wholesaler cleaned house by selling 1,600 bunches to a department store at 5 cents per bunch. Peonies, the old rivals of the carnations, are about done for, so far as fresh cut stock is concerned. Only enough are being taken out of the freezer to meet the immediate demand, which is not large. The quantity stored this year is about as usual, but the crop was a week late, so that the quantity on hand is larger than usual at this date—a week's selling usually has been done by now.

Valley and Easter lilies are moving fairly well and at moderate prices. Snapdragons, gladioli, gardenias and daisies are clearing well in view of existing conditions. Sweet peas are getting soft and there is little of the stock that will grade up to shipping standards. The demand for them, however, holds up remarkably well. Cattleyas are in small supply and are the one item on the list that is firm in price. Greens are moving with everything else and much in the same manner, though not with any rush.

Visitors.

The convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World has brought a number of florists, nurserymen and seedsmen to town this week. Henry Penn, of Boston, who, with Mrs. Penn, is on his way to the Pacific coast, is at the La Salle hotel. Mr. Penn delivered an address on flower store publicity before the retailers' section of the convention at the Auditorium hotel June 22.

The ad men's convention brought J. S. Wilson to town as a member of the Des Moines delegation. He reported an excellent spring season and business still good.

T. H. Joy, of the Joy Floral Co., Nashville, Tenn., was in town June 21 to 23, with the publicity people from his section, but could not stay to see the finish of the convention because of a Rotary doings that called for his Milo Crozer, of Cedar Rapids, arrived June 22 with a delegation of Iowa advertising men. It was his second visit here this month.

W. F. Therkildson, advertising manager for W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, is here for the convention.

John W. Furrow, of Furrow & Co., Guthrie, Okla., has arrived for his annual summer stay. Mr. Furrow has for several years spent several weeks in Chicago each peach season as the sales representative of an association of Oklahoma growers. For the 1915 season he expects to market up into the hundreds of carloads. Mr. Furrow is accompanied by his brother, who has been out of the florists' business for several years, but who now is returning to it. Last year Furrow & Co. started a branch store at Oklahoma City, under the management of Lon Foster. The erection of a range of houses there now is under contemplation.

The combined executive committee of the Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club held a meeting June 21. After much discussion it was decided to hold a big fall flower show in the Coliseum, from November 9 to 14 inclusive. The arrangements with the managers of the building will be taken care of by George Asmus. The premium committee, of which Mr. Asmus is chairman, expects to meet June 23 for the purpose of making up a premium list. Practically $1,000 of the

Various Notes.

C. C. Wakeling, who, with a partner, leased the W. E. Lynch greenhouses at Harlem avenue and Twenty-second street, growing carnations, has gone to Eldora, Ia., where he has acquired an interest in the Pierce establishment, doing both wholesale and retail business in cut flowers and plants. Mr. Pierce has other business interests and Mr. Wakeling will be manager.

E. F. Winterson was born June 21, 1869. That made him 46 years of age last Monday. Of course there was a celebration at his handsome home on the west side.

If summer does not come to Emil Jehlik, 1825 South Ashland avenue, he will go to summer. Mr. Jehlik owns some choice lots in San Diego, Cal., and is quite seriously considering the idea of disposing of his business here, erecting greenhouses on these lots and spending the rest of his days growing asparagus and adiantum.

The condition of the flower business depends altogether on the point of view, according to E. C. Amling, who suggests that more people are buying and enjoying flowers than in any previous June. He thinks the retailing of good flowers at low prices is adding steadily to the number of people who will prove regular customers.

Edward Drehmann, chief assistant to Charles Grabig, 843 Irving Park boulevard, will, as usual, spend his two months' vacation on his farm in Michigan. He hopes to leave by July 1.

Emil Buettner seldom has sent in so many flowers as came from Park Ridge last week. In addition to an unusually heavy cut of Killarneys, he had a big crop of peonies of fine quality.

Bassett & Washburn are making some changes in their carnation ranges. They have dropped the entire Enchantress family. White Wonder and Matchless are their pick of the white varieties and Pink Delight, Gloriosa, Helen Washburn and a light pink seedling of their

The Lady Florists' Club held its first meeting June 19 at the home of Miss Marguerite K. McNulty, of Peter Reinberg's store staff. The July meeting will be held at the home of Miss Olga A. Tonner.

In answer to the popular demand, George Weiland, secretary of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, has added two benches of Ophelia to his stock of roses. He is quite impressed with this variety and believes it will prove a winner. Mr. Weiland now grows fourteen varieties.

I. B. Thurman, 4246 Indiana avenue, who has been in ill health for the last few months, has improved sufficiently to be about his store again. Mr. Thurman had considered going to Texas, but the change in the weather here will make it unnecessary.

Think!

If you had the task of trying to sell flowers that you knew were of superior quality, and offer service that would make a chronic grouch smile with pleasure, what would you do?

Just ask yourself, as though it were up to you—"What can I do to make the many people that really do appreciate quality realize that we have just what they want?"

It is hard. We can't bring the people that we want to sell to down here to the store, so that they can look into our coolers, or it would be simple. They would just buy.

We must make them believe us when we say that we are not merely "talking," but really do live up to our claim to be:

William Paselk, bookkeeper at Morton Grove, who recently purchased a new touring car, was arrested June 16 after his auto collided with a wagon at Belmont and Sacramento avenues. Mr. Paselk's auto was slightly damaged in the clash. Tony Gabel says the mum department made a large shipment to Havana, Cuba, June 16. The greenhouses were operated by Mr. Gustavsen as the St. Paul Floral Co. A good business was built up, and no doubt Mr. Gustavsen will be permanently located before fall. The Market.

It has been many years since there has been so general a use of cut flowers and floral decorations in connection with the numerous social functions of the Brown University commencement as has been the case this year. Reunions, receptions, teas, dances and other gatherings, far outnumbering those of previous years, kept the florists and decorators busy during most of the week.

The holding of the annual June exhibition of roses, peonies and strawberries by the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, June 16, also served to accelerate conditions here. One noticeable feature in connection with the present situation is the increasing use and popularity of the peony, which a few years ago was never seen and scarcely used in the florist's shop. There is a plentiful supply of everything, and prices are normal.

Various Notes.

Richard L. Hogan has purchased the greenhouse on Eaton street and Wyndham avenue, with eight lots of land, belonging to the estate of the late John W. Hogan, for $4,475.

The Market.

Late last week the bottom of the market seemed to drop out, and the stores are facing the usual inactivity of summer. Business had kept up wonderfully well until that time because of continued cool weather and a large number of June wedding decorations, but the heat now precludes any kind of indoor entertainment requiring any great use of flowers.

A. A. ARNOLD PAPER BOX CO.
1302-1308 W. DIVISION ST. - - - CHICAGO

Mention The Review when you write.

Locally grown roses and carnations are small and not desirable. Some exceptionally fine white carnations from the north, sent in by A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., were offered during the week. There are more Catleya gigas to be had than there is call for. Good gardenias are still to be had. The storage peonies now coming in are undesirable because they drop soon after the boxes are opened, having been kept too long.

Various Notes.

J. Harper Hetherington, manager of the store of the Washington Floral Co., at 714 Fourteenth street, northwest, was married Wednesday evening, June 23, to Miss Alice Cramer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Cramer, of this city. The wedding is a result of a romance of real life, which had its commencement when the bride first entered the employ of the company about four years ago, as a member of the sales force, later, on the marriage of the bookkeeper, succeeding to that position, which she retained until shortly before the wedding. The groom is the son of Joseph H. Hetherington, who is connected with the store of Robert Craig Co., of Philadelphia. He entered the business in that city a number of years ago. Upon coming to Washington he secured employment with Fred H. Kramer and was located at the F street store. He later returned to Philadelphia, and upon coming back to Washington he obtained a position as salesman with the then Washington Florists' Co. When that concern was absorbed by the Washington Floral Co. he was made its manager. After a honeymoon spent in Atlantic City and Philadelphia, the young couple will make their home here. Howard Hetherington, a brother of the groom, came on from Philadelphia to act as best man.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

THE WEST POST TELEGRAPH COMPANY.
Philadelphia, June 23, 1915.

To The Growers.
City and State, Pennsylvania.

A Ten Word Telegram:—

Ship one-third flowers only.
All the best; some white.
Signed,
The Cut Flower Market.

When the growers receive their returns for the current week the foregoing telegram will be clearly understood. Everyone concerned would be better off were two-thirds of the flowers now coming into town not sent. No wholesaler likes to tell his growers this cold fact, yet every wholesaler must feel that his growers would be better off were they to devote the energy and time used in growing, cutting and shipping these flowers, to preparing their stock for next season.

The quantity of flowers has been simply enormous. Every means has been tried for their disposal, without avail. There has been heavy waste, despite outrageously low sacrifice sales. Under these conditions the market report this week is curtailed.

Out-of-town orders, local commencements and some funerals formed the bulk of the business. High temperature and humidity worked havoc with that part of the stock that was not in good shape. Prices on good flowers were reduced by the oversupply of poor ones.

George Auegle Succeeds Hayden.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., 1517 Sansom street, will change owners July 1. R. C. Hayden, the proprietor, has sold his stock to George Auegle, the manager. The business will be continued under the same name as at present. Mr. Hayden will devote his energies to his greenhouse establishment, the Highland Rose Co., at Morton, Pa. Mr. Auegle has won hosts of friends during his eleven years with the company. The Highland Rose Co., Mr. Hayden states, will continue shipping all its products to the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co.

A School Commencement.

There is a rather interesting little story connected with a school commencement in West Philadelphia this week that is a trifle out of the ordinary. It chanced that two of our local florists had friends among the sweet girl graduates. The rivalry between them grew keen as commencement day approached; so keen, in fact, that the other girls, who had taken no especial interest, became much interested indeed, in the question of placing the order for commencement bouquets. It was quite a large order, 160 bouquets, each of two dozen Killarney roses. So it was finally decided that sample bouquets were to be submitted and voted upon. To make the affair more interesting, some outside florists besides the two favored ones were invited to enter the competition. Some accepted the offer; some declined. At the stated time there were a number of lovely bouquets on hand. The voting concluded and the votes counted, it was found that both favorites had lost and an outsider carried off the honors. To make things secure, a contract was made out and signed that each and every one of those 160 bouquets must contain two dozen Killarney roses precisely, with all the fixings exactly as in the sample. It needs calculation with the aid of paper and pencil to show that this order required 4,000 blooms of the Irish rose.

The Outing at Schuetzen Park.

Perfect weather favored the Florists' Club's field day June 21. Fully 200 members and their families heartily enjoyed the day. There was a great ball game, as hotly contested as a world's series struggle could have been, though, perhaps, not quite as faultlessly played. Each side had a great unknown in the pitcher's box, and each mildly endeavored to dissuade the umpire from making any unhappy blunders. There were the sports hotly contested, with a whole trunkful of prizes; there was bowling and shooting of a high order, and dinner served at dozens of prettily decorated little tables, that was even of a higher order. The orchestra played and the prizes were presented by President George Burton and Chairman John Gracey, their selection showing a practical taste most admirable. It is pleasant to record that the ladies did nobly, winning many prizes and adding greatly to the pleasure of the gathering by the spirit with which they entered into everything. Dancing closed one of the jolliest entertainments the club has ever given. Here are the events and results:

exceedingly, floriculturally speaking, as all or nearly all the florists there rejoice in motor delivery.

H. H. Battles and Mrs. Battles announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Grace, to George Burgess Yerkes, of New York and Plainfield.

George Craig and G. C. Watson have been enjoying with others a few days' fishing with Commodore John Westcott at Waretown, on Barnegat bay.

James H. McKay, formerly well known as a florist doing business at 2142 North Second street, was drowned in a heavy surf and undertow at Atlantic City, June 20, with seven other bathers. Mr. McKay, who had been in the real estate business for the last year, was about 45 years of age and leaves a family. Miss Elizabeth Burton, daughter of the Hon. and Mrs. John Burton, was married at Grace church June 10. The name of the happy bridegroom I have unhappily missed. Instead you shall know that the bridesmaids' bouquets were astonishing creations of loveliness. They were made of Tausendschon roses in long sprays.

tablet was unveiled at the luncheon of the Chestnut Street Business Men's Association, June 15, in the Hotel Adelphia. Dr. Ellis Paxton Oberholtzer extolled the financier of the Revolution as having accomplished even more for

THE THIRD EDITION OF THE Album of Designs

(A Book Every Retailer Needs)

THE original Album of Designs was published in response to many requests from florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book that could be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it was not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it would be when ready for use. With the publication of this album it became possible to show the finished work in beautifully printed pictures. The first edition sold like hot cakes, and a second edition went quickly. Now a third edition is off the press. Everything is in it—all the standard designs and many new and heretofore unpublished pieces.

This site is chosen because it was on this ground Morris planned to erect a residence calculated to surpass in magnificence any building in the land. He laid the foundations, which still are to be seen in the basement of the Dreer and other properties in the row, just before he met financial misfortune, which resulted in his being thrown into the debtors' jail.

The tablet is bronze, 18x24 inches, and bears the inscription: "Site of the Residence of Robert Morris, Statesman and Financier. Born 1734. Died 1806. Founded Bank of North America in 1781. Buried in Christ Church. This Tablet is Erected to His Memory by the Chestnut Street Business Men's Association."

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The annual show of roses, sweet peas, hardy flowers, etc., by the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held in the Y. M. C. A. building June 16. The show was larger and finer than last year's. It was free to the public and the attendance was large. All of the exhibits were of fine quality. A silver medal was awarded the F. R. Pierson Co. for a vase of Ophelia roses and a cultural certificate for Francis Scott Key roses, as well as a fine collection of climbing roses, etc. The principal exhibitors and prize winners were:

The Market.

Since the last report, business conditions have not improved any. A large quantity of stock is still coming in and there is only a limited demand. The indoor flowers have been arriving in large quantities and have been supplemented by a good deal of outdoor stock, such as rambler sprays, candy-tuft, sweet peas and herbaceous flowers. Prices have reached so low a point that it is doubtful in some instances whether they pay the grower for cutting and shipping. At the commencement exercises held last week by the two largest high schools for girls, hardly half as many presentation bouquets were seen as in other years. Wedding orders have decreased, and even for valley and white roses the demand has fallen off considerably. Large

By WILLIAM RICKATSON DYKES

With 48 colored plates and 30 line drawings in the text

This magnificent work brings together the available information on all known species of Iris. The most striking feature of the book is the life-size colored plates, reproduced from originals drawn from living plants—making it a volume of remarkable beauty as well as of great scientific importance.

254 pages, demi folio, half morocco, $37.50. Postage extra (weight 11 lbs. 7 oz.)

organization, recently issued in book form and distributed to its members, is an interesting volume.

The next club meeting will be held June 28 and the outing committee will report on the available resorts for this occasion.

Mrs. H. J. Quick, who has been ill in the hospital for some time, has recovered sufficiently to be removed to her home.

L. H. A. Klein, of Towson, has discontinued attending the markets for the summer, having sold out his entire bedding plant supply.

The attempt to remove the street fakers from the shopping district has failed and the boys are on the corners as usual. The city council adjourned for the summer before the bill prohibiting the fakers from standing on the streets reached the stage where it could be acted on; consequently these street merchants will not be molested until fall. PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Gentlemen:-

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.25 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received-----	$513.25
Less 20% allowed senders-----	102.60
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.65

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florists's business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,

F. M. Weber

The Market.

The last week has been extremely hot, in fact, regular midsummer weather. There has been plenty of rain, enough to hinder field work the latter part of the week. The trade has been busy getting in new soil and planting chrysanthemums and carnations. There will be few left to plant in another week at the present rate.

There have been more chrysanthemum plants shipped from this city to other parts of the south this season, I am told, than ever before. There are plenty on hand yet. There are plenty of good carnation plants in the hands of the growers. There was never more good stock for sale here or better distributed among the growers.

Roses are in better supply than they were a few weeks ago, but there are few Beauties. These, with gladioli and sweet peas, constitute the greater part of the cut flowers at present.

Business has been dull during the last week, except for a few funerals and a wedding or two, and there is little prospect of better conditions till fall.

Various Notes.

The Hillcrest School Farm is digging bulbs at present. I saw some hyacinths that they had dug that were as sound as a dollar, and there were a few as large as twelve inches in circumference, the largest hyacinth bulbs that I have ever seen. Their tulips are also of good quality.

T. C. Joy is in Chicago this week as a delegate to the Advertising Men's Association. He has been secretary of the local organization.

McIntyre Bros. have closed their branch store on Church street. Miller McIntyre, who had charge of this store, will visit several of the large northern cities, working for a time in the first establishments of each, cultivating improved business ideas.

The Joy Floral Co. has finished the summer's rebuilding, having torn down eight of the old houses and replaced them with new cypress houses with black locust posts. The benches were set on vitrified blocks, the bottoms constructed of reinforced cement, and the sides of cypress.

Oscar Geny is just beginning to be able to get out to the greenhouses a little again. He has been near death's door for the last month.

Haury & Son have employed a new foreman recently. They have planted a house of Prince d'Arenberg roses for next season.

Joe Brown, of Lischey's Gardens, has finished a good season's business, and is getting things in condition for fall as fast as possible. Two years ago everyone thought that he was not going to stay with us long, but Joe said he was not nearly done with this old world, and has made a complete recovery.

Lewis Haury, who left the firm of Haury & Sons last spring, is constructing nine new Foley houses. He will devote these to vegetables and pot plants.

Having had much surplus stock that had to be disposed of at a loss or thrown away, several of the growers have determined to plant less of these items another season, save coal bills and make more money on the whole. This is a plan that could be followed in many another place with profit.

A number of traveling men have been in the city during the last week, and most of the trade have stocked up pretty thoroughly for the fall's business.

Chicago, was here last week, and accompanied Tom Joy to Chicago.

Miss Carrie Chance, secretary of the Joy Floral Co., won a trip to the Panama exposition in the Banner's contest. She will leave the last of the week.

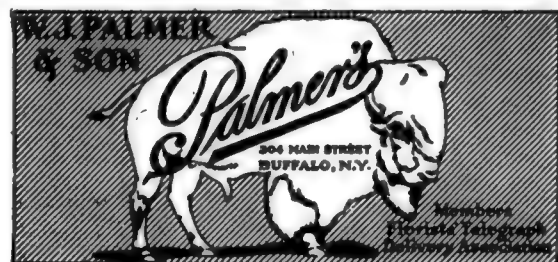

Harold Joy was married last week. He is head of the plant growing department of the Joy Floral Co. He moved at once into his new residence on Lischev avenue. This adds one more to the row of Joy dwellings in front of the greenhouses. F. B.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business has been rather depressed of late, but shows an improvement this week, due to graduation exercises, class days, etc. At the school graduations flowers are now barred in many cases, and this means a considerable loss to the florists. As there is no steamer trade now, it is too bad to have this additional source of revenue also removed. The supply of roses is much reduced and flowers have cleaned up quite well. American Beauties, Kaiserin, White Killarney, Miller, Killarney Queen, Ophelia and Killarney are selling well. Some hybrid perpetuals from outdoors appeared last week and sold well. Carnations are down in price, sales as low as $3.50 to $5 per thousand having been made. Select flowers make $1 to $2 per hundred.

Sweet peas, if of good quality, sell well, but many are poor, with short stems, the tail end of crops, and realize little. Peonies are at their flood, and prices are low except for select white and soft pink. Lilies have a slow sale. Valley is in a little better demand. Yellow marguerites are still in heavy supply, and cornflowers are abundant. Snapdragons sell poorly, except pink. The small gladioli are done, but there is an abundant crop of the large varieties, on which prices have dropped considerably. There is still a fair supply of cattleyas, such as gigas and Gaskelhiana. There are outside flowers in

Club Meeting.

There was an attendance of 300 at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club June 15, the occasion being ladies' night. A charge for admission did not affect the attendance at all, and all who attended had a most delightful time. It was voted to send a letter of good cheer to Peter M. Miller, a popular past president of the club, recovering from a severe illness, and one of sympathy to Edward Welch, in his recent heavy bereavement. There was a splendid display of roses, carnations, sweet peas, aquilegias and other flowers, which later were distributed among the performers and ladies. The Elliott sextette of singers furnished a full hour's concert, which was received with enthusiasm. After a collation had been served, dancing was enjoyed until midnight. The next club meeting will be held September 21. The annual picnic at Cunningham park, East Milton, will be the next attraction.

Various Notes.

Thomas Roland is picking over ten tons of Comet tomatoes weekly at his Revere establishment. With warm weather the rest of the month, he thinks his June pick will reach sixty tons. He still has a fine lot of roses from Revere.

R. E. Wadsworth & Co., of Northboro, find the Philadelphia carnation a hard one to sell, and will drop it. They will plant Akehurst, Good Cheer, Alice and Pink Sensation, among last season's novelties, for the coming season.

Martin Wax entertained a large party of friends at his home, 134 Pleasant street, Brookline, June 17. The occasion was the third anniversary of his wedding, and the decorations were the same as on that occasion, Beauty roses and mountain laurel.

William W. Elliott is cutting some splendid summer Beauties at Brighton, in addition to Kaiserin and Miller. The call for asparagus has been good this month.

The Hoffman failure has been the leading topic of discussion in cut flower circles for several days. Some of the growers and salesmen have been hard hit. This failure, following on the heels of others, shows anew the vital need of a credit protective association. In no other line of business are buyers given so much latitude as in cut flower circles, and it is time a halt was made.

Henry S. Rogers, of Penn's publicity staff, attended a meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society June 15 and gave demonstrations of the making up of bouquets and other floral arrangements, which proved most interesting to the audience.

Ralph W. Curtis, formerly of the Arnold Arboretum and now of Cornell University, visited the parks, arboretum and private estates in and near Boston with a party of twelve landscape students last week.

The Boston sweet pea show will be held July 10 and 11. A party of local growers is planning to attend the exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society at Newport, R. I.

Littlefield & Wyman, of North Abington, now have a Skinner watering system for their field carnations, and find it a wonderful aid. They are cutting a splendid lot of peonies.

Edward Winkler, of Wakefield, has been in receipt of many congratulations on the arrival of a 9½-pound girl baby at his home June 16. His countenance now resembles that of his new carnation, Morning Glow.

Frank Edgar, of Waverley, is picking a splendid lot of Pæonia festiva maxima. He has a house of Comet tomatoes, in good crop.

We have had some copious showers since June 17, the first of any moment we have had all summer, and vegetation shows a wonderful improvement.

The death of August Gaedeke, of Nashua, N. H., caused many expressions of regret here, where the deceased was well known. The Gardeners' and Florists' Club a few years ago held a field day at Nashua and visited his establishment with some others, and were kindly entertained.

The Market.

The wholesale market, for the first time in its history, was closed Sunday, June 20. From reports, the trade got along splendidly. Some of the retailers were short of stock, but they were helped out by those who had bought heavily early on Saturday. The local growers brought in large supplies of stock, and the retailers' orders were quite heavy, so as to tide them over from Saturday noon to Monday morning.

There were large cuts of first-class stock coming into the market all last week, especially of roses, sweet peas and carnations. The prices on these remained reasonable. Prices on large lots were made specially attractive for the large retail stores. Gladioli are in large supply. America, Augusta, Francis King and Pink Beauty are much favored by the local buyers. Valley sold well all week. Lilies are dragging, as is also outdoor stock. Early dahlias are coming in from Hauser's Dahlia Farm. The supply of greens is good.

Various Notes.

A special meeting of the County Growers' Association was held June 10, at the Eleven Mile house. This meeting was called to decide what the growers should do with the Sunday cut since the wholesalers have decided to close from Saturday noons to Monday mornings, but all that could be learned of the proceedings was that a committee, consisting of W. and Hugo Gross, was appointed to talk the matter over with the wholesalers and to report at the next meeting of the association.

The Retail Florists' Association held its meeting June 21. The principal discussion was the closing of the retail stores on Sunday during the summer months. The majority seemed to favor the plan, while others say it depends on their nearest competitor. The situation as a whole looks quite favorable. Don't depend on your competitor; he will follow.

The officers of the Missouri Botanical Garden Students' Club, which has met twice a month during the winter and spring, have decided to hold no meetings during the summer months. The next meeting will therefore be held in October.

We read with much regret, in the Boston notes of last week's Review, that Mr. and Mrs. Penn did not include St. Louis in their itinerary, which started June 16 at Buffalo and will end in Chicago August 2. The local trade would enjoy a talk with Mr. Penn on his great advertising features.

John Cannon, head of the Cannon Floral Co., at Webster Groves, Mo., will leave this month for a two months' trip, which will be spent in Idaho. His brother, Charles Cannon, will have charge of the store in his absence.

Some of the members of the County Growers' Association will organize a baseball team and challenge the team composed of the members from the wholesale district. The game will be played the day of the Florists' Club's picnic, at Romona park, July 22.

The new building of the St. Louis Seed Co. has an attractive appearance, with handsomely filled window boxes.

ST. LOUIS
J. J. BENEKE, 1918
Olive Street

August Hummert, vice-president of the concern, says the annual picnic of the employees will take place this year in August. They have installed a fine delivery truck. Martin Moran made a successful trip among the county florists last week.

The recent storms caused great damage to some fine trees throughout the city. City Forester Julius Koenig and Assistant Forester Fred Pape have advised the public to replace the trees with sycamores, for the maples and poplars have heavier foliage and lighter trunks, which cause them to snap off more readily than do the sycamores.

The big social event of the season was the Maffitt-Keiser wedding June 16, the decorations of which were furnished by Vandervoorts' department store and supervised by David Geddis. The house was artistically decorated with Killarney roses. A large centerpiece on the table, which won the admiration of all, was made of fancy ferns and the Shackelford strain of phlox.

The E. G. Sedivec Floral Co. moved into its new quarters, at Thirteenth street and Geyer avenue, where a store and show house, with a large space around it for general display, is a big attraction. The grounds were formerly used by an aerodrome.

Messrs. Rowe, Windler and Ossick, the Florists' Club's trustees, are waiting for any suggestions the trade can make as to new features for this year's outing. Special prizes are also solicited by them.

Gladioli seem to be the principal flower for window decorations at present. Some fine displays were noticed at the establishments of F. C. Weber, Newman, Ayres, Waldbart and F. H.
Weber. These florists had considerable school and social work last week.

This is too good to keep: A certain wholesaler, a dyed-in-the-wool baseball fan, came across an article in The Review recently with the heading, "Trimming Hedges," and had to read the article clear through before he was satisfied that some one was not trying to Ludwig Zimmer, the Biddle Market florist, who usually spends the summer abroad, thinks a trip to the San Francisco fair this year will help to pass the dull summer months. J. J. B.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has quieted down considerably in the last two weeks, owing largely to the fact that most of the bedding, etc., has been finished for the present season. This business was good and the plants were cleaned up nicely, with the exception, possibly, of a few geraniums that failed to be in bloom. Everything in bloom was sold early and there have been few geraniums in bloom since Memorial week. June weddings and commencements made a little stir last week, but the commencements are about over and trade is expected to be somewhat quiet from now on.

Roses are fine, but the quantity has dropped away down, as some of the growers are only cutting from summer stock and it is rather light, though of good quality. Ophelia, Maryland, Kai-serin and Bulgaria are the main varieties at present. Carnations are getting rather small; the demand for them has decreased so that there are enough and to spare, even with many torn out.
Sweet peas are fine and plentiful, as several new crops are just starting.
Valley has been a little scarce lately, and at times was hardly sufficient to go the rounds. Potted ferns are selling well and there is a nice lot in the market.

Various Notes.

Leo Miller reports trade fair, but not rushing.

Sherman Stephens is feeling fairly well after his severe illness. He has had a heavy plant season at the cemetery and also throughout the city.

E. Metzmaier reports a good season in bedding plants, combined with a large share of other work.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports decorations heavy for June weddings.

Underwood Bros. have had some heavy funeral work lately.

The Munk Floral Co. is handling some good Beauties and also a good lot of sweet peas.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Business last week was booming.
Commencement dances called for an enormous amount of corsage work, and several weddings of socially prominent persons created a demand for wedding bouquets and decorations. Funeral work was heavy.

American Beauties, Easter and calla lilies, Spencer sweet peas, Shawyer, Russell and Sunburst roses were the principal flowers used in funeral work. Valley had a heavy demand for weddings, and Ward roses, sweet peas, Spanish iris and chrysanthemum daisies were used for corsages. Roses are of splendid quality, and carnations are holding out longer this year than ever before.
Sweet peas are more than plentiful. Asparagus plumosus is becoming scarce.

Various Notes.

Frank Knecht is cutting a fine lot of Shawyer and Killarney roses and Easter lilies. The greenhouse force is busy planting several houses with the new Russell rose plants. The carnations are unusually good for this season.

The Bradley Flower Shop has had a busy week with corsages for commencements and wedding orders. This firm has had a good season in landscape planting under the management of Miss Marjory Bradley.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey have just received a large shipment of dendrobium plants. S. Hudson, the orchid grower, reports that he is cutting a fine lot of cattleyas at present.

The Flick Floral Co. had a large amount of funeral work last week, which included a handsome blanket of Russell roses and Spencer sweet peas for the funeral of Mrs. A. Wolf. Their decorations for the Bushing-Busch wed-

NEWS OF THE SEED TRADE

W. F. THERKILDSON, advertising manager for W. Atlee Burpee & Co., is attending the ad men's great convention at Chicago this week. He will return to Philadelphia about July 6.

THE leading article in Printers' Ink for June 17 was "The Personality that is Behind the Burpee Business," an interview with W. Atlee Burpee and illustrated with that gentleman's portrait and reproductions of some of his ads.

INFORMATION comes from Antigo, Wis., of more heavy rains. As the peas in that district have had all the rain they can well stand, this excessive precipitation if continued will throw them back for two weeks or more, if it entails no more serious consequences.

GRASS seed to the amount of 20,000 pounds was furnished by the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, to the new Speedway park, Maywood, Ill., where Chicago's first 500-mile international auto derby will be held June 26. The seed was planted one month ago and an excellent stand now covers the ground in spite of the lack of sunny days.

A BRONZE tablet was erected last week on the store front of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, reading: "Site of the residence of Robert Morris, statesman and financier. Born 1734. Died 1806. Founded Bank of North America in 1781. Buried in Christ Church. This tablet is erected to his memory by the Chestnut Street Business Men's Association." The Dreer concern itself dates back to 1838.

WISCONSIN SEED BILL.

The judiciary committee of the Wisconsin senate reported June 16 on a new substitute to bill 650 A. The bill came up in the senate June 18 and was passed. It is expected to go through the assembly in the same form. The important feature is the fact that the seedsmen have prevented the guaranteeing of the crop. As far as that point is concerned, the bill is just where it stood before the hearing. This is a substantial gain, even if a negative one. The substance of the amendment as it now stands is as follows:

For the purposes of sections 1494X-1 to 1494X-16, inclusive, the term "agricultural seeds" shall include seed of the red clover (either medium or mammoth), white clover, alsike clover, alfalfa, timothy, orchard grass, Kentucky bluegrass, red top, Bromus inermis, oat grass, rye grass, the fescues, the millets, other grass and forage plant seeds, flax, rape, buckwheat and cereals.

For the purposes of the same sections, the term "agricultural seeds" shall also include seed peas for canning purposes sold in lots of 100 pounds or more.

In all actions for damages growing out of any violation of this section, if no fraud, bad faith, or want of due care is shown on the part of the vendor, the purchaser shall be limited in his recovery to the amount of the price of the seed.

THE SEED TRADE CONVENTION.

In Session at San Francisco.

The thirty-third annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, which opened June 21 at San Francisco, is notable for the fact that it is the first time in its long, active and useful life that the organization has met in the state whence comes the greater part of the domestic supply of garden and flower seeds its members sell. The distance from the principal seed distributing centers is so great that it was not to be expected the attendance would break records, but, all things considconvenes, but there were so few of its members present that the meeting was canceled.

The Excursion Party.

The main party that left Chicago June 12, conducted by S. F. Leonard, while it was not large enough to justify a special train, as had been hoped, nevertheless followed quite closely the prearranged itinerary and found the trip most enjoyable. They reached San Francisco at 11 p. m. Saturday, nine hours ahead of the original schedule, having been on the road from Chicago exactly seven days. A good many others came scattering in Monday and Tuesday, but it is difficult to check up the attendance, as many are devoting the greater part of their time to seeing the exposition.

On the way out the main party spent a most enjoyable day in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. At Riverside, Cal., a stop was made for a long auto ride. The next day was spent at the San Diego exposition and words of unstinted praise were spoken for the garden and landscape effects. At Los Angeles next morning, April 18, President Morse met the party and the Los Angeles seedsmen, headed by M. L. Germain and the Bodgers, saw to it there was not an idle moment during the stay. The morning was spent in a trip to the seed ranch of John Bodger & Sons Co., followed by luncheon at the Angelus. A part of the afternoon was spent at the store, trial grounds and nursery of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., followed by a visit to Busch Gardens and Pasadena. No stops were made north of Los Angeles.

Local Hospitalities.

The members of the Seed Trade Association many times have been well entertained by seedsmen in the locality of the convention, but never has the preparation for entertainment been so elaborate as this year. Monday, the day before the real opening of the convention, all the visitors who had then arrived were taken by auto for a sight-seeing drive through San Francisco. In the evening a new feature was added through the circumstance that the president this year is a resident of the convention city. Mr. and Mrs. Morse took the opportunity to give a reception in honor of the visiting members of the association at their handsome home, 2505 Green street, which is within a few minutes' walk of the convention headquarters, the Inside Inn. The grounds and residence were handsomely decorated and the affair was highly enjoyable. About ninety-five were present. The Hawaiian quartette, as a feature of the entertainment, was a great success.

In addition to what is being done at San Francisco, the two days following the installation of new officers will be devoted to a tour of the seed growing sections in the Santa Clara and San Juan valleys, special train, automobiles, hotels, barbecue and all being provided

ered, the number of those present is large. There are about 100 men, sixty of whom may be classed as from the east. An almost complete list of those present from east of the Missouri appeared in The Review for June 10 and 17. One effect of the place of meeting apparent in the attendance, but perhaps not anticipated, is that the grass seed interests are not so much to the fore as has been the case since legislation was first directed at them, a few years ago. Ordinarily the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association, of which A. E. Reynolds, of Crawfordsville, Ind., is president, holds its annual meetings the day before the Seed Trade Association

FOR CLEANING AND GRADING ALL KINDS OF

Flower, Garden and Field Seeds

If you are interested in a machine for screening and grading any kind of seeds, grain, beans, peas or bulbs, send for our catalogue giving prices and discounts.

The Clipper Cleaners are used by all the large seed merchants and growers in the United States, also in many foreign countries where fine results in handling seed stocks are desired.

We have a large number of different sizes and styles of power machines, also three sizes of mills for hand work. We have picking and sorting tables in several different styles for handling beans, peas, bulbs and seeds. We have mechanical bean pickers, and also a machine—The Oxford Polisher—for polishing musty or stained beans.

Our machines are well made, nicely finished, light running and guaranteed to give satisfaction.

by subscription among the seed growers whose broad acres lie in that fertile region. The plan is to hold a barbecue at San Juan and spend the night at Hotel Vendome, returning to San Francisco Saturday evening. The start for Gilroy is to be made at 8:05 Friday. Waldo Rohnert is in charge of the barbecue that evening.

Past and Prospect.

There is no burning issue before the convention this year—no specially inimical legislation is threatened, the parcel post has proved in practice not so bad as many expected and, anyway, most of those present have brought their families, so that it is as much a pleasure as a business trip. Under the circumstances the business of the season just closed and the prospect for next season's seed supply are about as vital as any topics discussed between sessions. Taking it by and large, the season of 1915 did not realize the expectations of many of the general catalogue seed houses; the demand petered out disconcertingly early. As to next season's supply, there is of course no assurance of the usual shipments from Germany and France, but in spite of the alarmist reports from certain quarters, the prospect is viewed with more or less equanimity—there is confidence that there will be seeds to sell, if not one kind, then another.

The Association's Year.

Business sessions were held mornings only, to give ample time for sight-seeing. At the opening session, held at the Palace of Horticulture, on the exposition grounds, at 10 a. m. June 22, President Morse, in his address, reviewed the year. His remarks and recommendations are printed on page 64 of this issue.

In his address President Morse reported the death during the year of John M. Griffith, Baltimore, Md.; Jesse E. Northrup, Minneapolis; L. B. Schulte, Houston, Tex., and Wm. H. Grenell, Pierrepont Manor, N. Y. Both Mr. Northrup and Mr. Grenell were ex-presidents of the association. Appropriate resolutions were drafted by a committee and spread on the minutes.

YOUR BUNDLE

Once upon a time all who had troubles were invited to bundle them together and deposit them in a place where all could exchange their bundles for others liked better. But when the signal was given for exchange, each man on second thought picked up his own bundle of miseries, preferring them to his neighbor's when he came to see what they were. So, when you feel like belly-aching, remember the parable of the bundles; that others have troubles too. If you want to gain in the world, work in a way that counts; do things, instead of talking about it; fill up your greenhouses and sell your flowers—and never mind what the other fellow does. In filling your greenhouse don't forget Horseshoe Brand lily bulbs—very profitable to grow.

Seed Growing in Oregon.

E. C. Johnson, president of the Portland Seed Co., of Portland, was unable to be present but sent a paper dealing with seed growing in Oregon. As to red clover, he said buckhorn is not yet wholly eradicated but the crop in the Willamette valley now averages 120 cars a year, nice, plump seed of fine color. Alsike in the same district turns out thirty to forty cars a year, and when free of sorrel the quality cannot be excelled. Some fine alfalfa is grown along the Idaho line and great efforts are being made to rid the fields of dodder. In southeastern Oregon some timothy is raised and Mr. Johnson predicted Oregon and Idaho soon will have to be reckoned with in the timothy market.

"By treating the seed stock with carbon bisulphide, weevils can be kept pretty well under control, and by this method we have for several years been able to raise some fine crops of garden peas, the pods being unusually well filled and the color of the matured stock much superior to eastern peas. About three years ago the aphid made its appearance and practically took the entire crop. Since then few peas have been grown here, though some of the growers begin to show a disposition to give them another trial.

"Generally speaking, the Oregon climate is considered unsuitable for the growing of beans because of the early fall rains, which prevent maturing and ripening of the crop. However, after various experiments in different parts of the state, we believe that in some sections of the valley, at least, beans can be grown successfully and have this year contracted quite extensively.

"When acclimated seed is planted and the ground suitably prepared splendid returns have resulted with corn. Our contracts this year cover not only the principal field varieties, but also sweet corn.

"Cucumber, pumpkin and squash do exceptionally well in this climate. The seed is much plumper and of stronger vitality than what we obtain from other sections. Lately there has been considerable acreage of these items contracted for. That it will materially increase in the near future is expected. Turnip, kale and cabbage are also grown successfully here. During the last five years we have raised our entire requirements of several varieties of turnip and kale, securing much nicer seed than that imported from Europe.

"The seed trade is so well acquainted with the fine quality of the Oregon Yellow Danvers onion seed that it is needless to dwell on it. Suffice it to say, that with our retail as well as wholesale trade, and especially with our market gardeners, it commands a premium in price of about seventy-five per cent over the same variety of seed raised elsewhere.

"Our greatest difficulty has been and still is to get the right parties to go into this seed growing business in earnest. When such parties can be found we are confident they will find that there is no state in the Union that can produce, either as to quantity or quality, better strains of seed, not only of varieties above mentioned, but also a number of others not yet tried."

Flower Seeds in California.

The European war, said L. C. Routzahn, of Arroyo Grande, in a paper entitled "Flower Seed Growing in California," has given a great impetus to the production of stock heretofore obtained from Europe as "a matter of habit." The speaker went on to show that California possesses ideal soil and climate for the production of flower seeds, asserting that the atmosphere contains unusual quantities of carbonic acid [sic], which accounts, he said, for the ability to handle certain crops in ways that are not possible elsewhere. Digressing, he gave his ideas on the origin of new varieties and stated that wonderful possibilities lie in the process of selection from the innumerable natural crosses that are constantly developing.

"Notwithstanding our excellent climatic conditions, good soil and such other qualifications as we may possess, unless those for whom we labor recognize the high cost of production and encourage this industry by willingness to pay fair prices, it will never be brought to the successful development, and become the great industry it otherwise would," concluded Mr. Routzahn. "European conditions have heretofore made it possible to buy and obtain supplies much Value of Technical Training.

H. E. Van Norman, of University Farm, Davis, Cal., delivered an excellent address illustrating "The Value of Technical Training to the Seedsman." He told of the wide variation in results obtained with various crops by the man who knows how compared to the average. In this connection he said: "We are told that Danish seedsmen are gaining a foothold in this country for certain classes of seeds, because of the careful work they do in breeding, and the consequent trueness to name and character of their seeds; and that, unlike the American seedsmen, they guarantee them, whereas the American seedsman usually emphatically refuses to guarantee, and follows the horse trader's principle of 'let the buyer beware.' An eastern experimental station bought supposedly the same variety of cabbage seed from twenty-five different seedsmen, and obtained nearly as many varieties as lots of seed. The yield from 100 plants varied from ninety-one pounds to 201 pounds; the weight of heads varied from fourteen ounces to two pounds and five ounces, with a similar variation in earliness of maturity. What an advantage the grower has whose skill in plant selective breeding and growing enables him to combine the maximum of these desirable qualities!

"Every successful man owes something to himself in the way of self-development in the knowledge of what is going on, what others are thinking of, and the enjoyment of the comforts and luxuries which his share of worldly success makes possible, and every college course seeks not only to develop the student's ability to see clearly, to think accurately, to arrive at right conclusions, to the end that his business may prosper financially, but seeks to broaden the vision, making for larger service to his fellow, and the broader development of the student as a man among men. Step by step the educated, trained man has made himself and his need manifest in engineering, in manufacturing, in live stock growing, in horticulture, in vegetable gardening, and, in fact, in every branch of agriculture. Is there any reason why the seedsmen as a class are set apart, unable to profit by this training?"

Committee on Experiment Stations.

L. L. Olds, of Madison, Wis., chairman of the committee on experiment stations, presented a voluminous report. The committee had asked the station in each state for an account of its work covering matters of special interest to seedsmen. Forty-four replies were received and were summarized or quoted from by Mr. Olds, who concluded:

"We feel like calling attention to the fact that nearly all the state reports touch on seed legislation. Those who

THE SWEET PEA PAR EXCELLENCE FOR WINTER-FLOWERING UNDER GLASS

We were awarded Certificates of Merit for this superb novelty at the International Flower Show in New York, March, 1914, and at the Spring Show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, March, 1915.

YARRAWA is absolutely fixed—and true to color and type.

YARRAWA is an easy and good "doer," invariably giving an excellent account of itself, whether grown in pots, boxes, raised benches or solid beds.

YARRAWA has the heavy foliage and rank, strong growth of the summer-flowering type and is a true winter-blooming Spencer. From seed sown early in October at Fordhook Farms, the plants came into bloom December 20th and flowered profusely until May. The flowers are exquisitely waved and when well grown will average two and one-half inches in diameter, many of them being duplex or double flowered, thus adding greatly to the general effect of the bunch. They are borne usually in fours on extra long, strong stems. The color is a most pleasing shade of bright rose pink, with light wings.

As the supply of seed will be limited, we advise ordering early.

PRINCESS*20—The New Upright Pansy

This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing, and extremely weather-proof, enduring many storms without damage to its flower. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture, on heavy stems carried well above the foliage. Attractive by the brilliancy of its colors.

500 Seeds 20c; 1000 Seeds 35c; 1/4 oz. $1.00; 1/2 oz. $2.00; 1 oz. $7.50.

24—Kenilworth Show—A fine strain.

38—Mme. Perret—Red and wine shades.

40—Zebra—Fine striped mixture.

42—Adonis—Light blue, white center.

44—Black—Almost coal black.

46—Black with bronze center.

48—Lord Beaconsfield—Purple shaded white.

50—Bronze—Beautiful bronze.

52—Bronze with yellow center.

54—Velvet Brown with yellow center.

56—Havana Brown.

58—Havana Brown with yellow center.

60—Cardinal—Curled, bright red, dark blotch.

62—Cecily—Steel blue, margined white.

64—Goliath—Large curled yellow, blotched.

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

22—KENILWORTH STRAIN—The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are from 3 1/2 to 4 inches; it is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.

26—KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE—Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower or for exhibition purposes, for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 inches long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.

28—MASTERPIECE—A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance, large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stems.

30—GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES—A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich velvety colors, reds are particularly conspicuous; the petals being distinctly marked with three or five large dark blotches.

32—GIANT PARISIAN—The flowers are of enormous size, and beautifully marked, mostly five dark blotches on white and yellow ground. An unusually showy mixture.

NEW SEED NOW READY

All sorts and mixtures, except the new Pansy Princess, are $5.00 per oz.; $1.25 per 1/4-oz.; 5000 seeds, $1.00; trade packet of 1000 seeds, 25c; any 5 pkts., $1.00. Please order by number.

have seed laws claim that they are working satisfactorily, but on the other hand the states that have no laws seem to be satisfied also and think that their seedsmen furnish just as good seeds as if they were under stringent regulations. The gratifying thing to your committee in preparing this report has been to note the friendly tone of interest in the work of the seedsmen and our association that seems to run through nearly all the letters and the evident desire for mutual coöperation and helpfulness." Most of the letters, beyond seed legislation, told only of work to test, breed or distribute special strains or varieties of local adaptability.

Other Committee Reports.

Frank C. Woodruff, Orange, Conn., reported the committee on credits had not held a meeting, but, he said, "I am satisfied many of us are too easy in the matter of credits and that our profits are greatly reduced by extending credit to many who are unworthy of it. We should be now especially careful of our credits because of the war and the fact that during such times creditors are likely to take advantage of this."

In addition to the report of the association's counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, of Boston, W. G. Scarlett, of Baltimore, submitted a report for the committee on legislation. Other reports were:

Annual Banquet.

The annual banquet was not so large as on some recent occasions, but was one of unusual enjoyment; 130 were present, including ladies. It was scheduled to be held Tuesday evening, June 22, at the Commercial Club, but was postponed to Wednesday evening. Watson S. Woodruff was toastmaster. The speaking was informal.

Wednesday morning the convention was photographed before the Palace of Horticulture and Mr. Brown, for the exposition, presented a bronze medal. President Morse and Vice-President J. M. Lupton replied.

Thursday's session will be executive and will end the convention.

PRESIDENT MORSE'S ADDRESS.

[In opening the San Francisco convention of the American Seed Trade Association, President Lester L. Morse spoke in part as follows.]

The year of my administration has been uneventful so far as affairs affecting the American seedsmen are concerned. The trade has had a normal season, with no great shortages except on certain kinds of beans, and no great overproduction of any particular line.

When the war broke out, a feeling of fear and distrust filled us with grave doubt as to whether or not seeds from the belligerent countries would be delivered and as to whether or not seeds grown here for delivery abroad could be shipped. Except in a few isolated cases, I understand that practically all contracts were delivered, either in full or pro rata when short, and most of the growers on this side were able to fill their contracts. So the season proved to be one of fair averages all around.

Next Season's Supply.

If there was some reason for doubt as to deliveries last autumn, there is greater cause for fear this year. Any sort of prediction will be idle and all we can do at this time is to hope. In spite of the fact that large areas of such crops as are usually secured from Europe are being grown in America, there are many things that will be greatly affected if they are not secured from Europe, since even with a good crop in this country, there will still be a serious shortage of many varieties. I understand there is a large acreage of turnip and cabbage in the northwest, while here in California there is a liberal acreage of radish and carrot and some table beet. The California flower seed growers have planted a good acreage of standard varieties, which will take care of some lines, but there are many varieties of flowers and vegetables which are only used in limited quantity and which a seedsman needs badly for catalogue and store trade. These items will keep the retail dealer in a dilemma for a good part of the coming months or until he finally learns whether he can or cannot get them. Stocks of all kinds, I understand, are pretty well cleaned up and the trade, generally, is ready for a good harvest.

Seed Legislation.

The principal matters of interest to the association during the year have been those affecting legislation. The legislatures of most of the states were in session last winter and in a number

SILVER PINK SEEDLINGS.

Only a few years ago we had to tell you what they were; had to argue their merits, telling how they would make better plants in less time than would cuttings; how by their rapid, sturdy growth they overcome disease, and how by their prolific nature they would throw five flower shoots to one of any other variety. Now you can read the report of others, and find even better things than we told you.

G. S. RAMSBURG,

G. S. Ramsburg, Somersworth, N. H.

Eau Claire, Wis., June 10, 1915.

Dear Sir:—Inclosed find check for $4.00 for 100 Silver Pink SEE DLING plants. From the 200 seedling plants bought of you in December I had a good crop in February and March and an enormous crop at Memorial day. It was just one mass of bloom and we are still cutting every day, and will be cutting for some days yet. It was the best investment I ever made.

Very respectfully, JOHN MAVES.

See recent ads for other letters.

Don't compare ordinary seedling snaps with Silver Pink Seedlings. Our original Silver Pink Seedlings stand pre-eminently alone for productiveness. We have tried hundreds of varieties and colors but have never found one that would throw near so many branches. Besides, it has a pleasing color and comes practically true from seed. Five blooms to one of any variety in existence is not a dream. It is a fact and a challenge.

Sow seed at once if you would cut blooms from December until July. Price of pure seed of Silver Pink, $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Seed of other varieties: Nelrose, Yellow, Garnet, White, Buxton's, and mixed, 35c per pkt.; 3 for $1.00.

Plants for summer and fall blooms as follows: Silver Pink SEEDLINGS, $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000. Nelrose and Yellow, $5.00 per 100. White and mixed, $4.00 per 100.

of states some attempt was made to pass legislation affecting the seed trade. The details of these matters will be duly considered in the report of our attorney, Curtis Nye Smith. Mr. Smith has done effective work in advising members of the trade in those states where legislation is proposed. He has kept me advised promptly throughout the year, sending me not only personal letters but carbon copies of all his correspondence with members of the seed trade in all parts of the country. I have received from him 179 individual letters represented either by personal letters or carbon copies. On the whole, the proposed legislation was less unjust and unwise than it has been in the past and there is a cheerful evidence of a better understanding between the public, the law-makers and the seed trade.

I realize more clearly than I have before that our association is made up of two distinct classes, viz.: Grass seed men and vegetable and flower seed men. At times I have noted some conflict in the aims of each, but these differences are generally suppressed. Except where dealers combine the two classes in their business, they little understand each other.

Nearly all of the proposed legislation is aimed at the grass seed dealer and I believe it is in the interests of the association as a whole to strive to confine seed laws to the classes of merchandise which are handled by the grass seed people. As a matter of fact they will have to be, since there can be no legislation that can control vegetable or flower seeds in any sane manner.

Except on matters of legislation, the American Seed Trade Association is a harmonious body of men and is an effective organization.

I recommend the reappointment of the seed correspondents for the ensuing year and I certainly recommend the reappointment of Mr. Smith as attorney.

The Disclaimer.

The grower and dealer in vegetable seeds must insist on the protection of the disclaimer, and we must contest all efforts to nullify it. The market gardener and large planter must know as we do that there is a certain element of risk in planting seeds for a marketable crop.

We who know that all varieties of cabbage, turnip, cauliflower, rape, mustard and kindred types of brassica are similar if not identical in appearance; that the seed of thirty colors, types and varieties of onion seed all looks alike; that the seed of mangels, beets and chard in all their multitude of variety is identical in appearance, know that mistakes are going to occur in spite of intelligence and system in handling seed.

If guaranteed seed means surety for the resulting crop, or, in other words, if $10 worth of celery seed means the responsibility for $1,000 worth of crop, with no share in the ultimate anticipated profit, then we are in a hazardous business and too hazardous to warrant credit. The banks would soon put us all in the war risk class if they believed we were in such a business.

The terrible results in loss of business in event of error is sufficient punishment to compel the utmost care and vigilance on the part of the seedsman.

I believe that the market gardener and large planter realize that there is some risk in attempting to grow a crop and many of them are doing what has long been a practice among the modern seed growers; that is, he carries a stock over one year and tests a sample, so that before he plants for crop he has proven stock.

A seed dealer will have difficulty in getting his supplies if the value of the disclaimer should be nullified. The grower is both planter and dealer and you will find the majority of seed growers emphasizing his non-warranty terms.

The public of course demands that the seedsman supply seeds that grow; unadulterated seeds that produce an unmixed product of plants; seeds that produce the variety under which they are sold. This sounds simple and some of our law-makers seem to think that they can compel merchants to sell only such seeds by threatening dire punishment if they do not. I believe that the seed grower and dealer are both trying to produce and sell just such seed, and I believe that threatened punishment will have but little effect, especially so as the greatest reward to the man who has a reputation for handling such seeds is in the advanced prices which large planters are willing to pay him for his goods.

Nomenclature.

Our association has been invited by the American Vegetable Growers' Association to join with them in an attempt to regulate nomenclature. While our association has had a committee on nomenclature at various times, it has never been able to accomplish any definite results. It is well, however, that our association appoint a committee, and a good, strong one, to work with the vegetable growers. Their suggested rules for registration of garden vegetables are excellent, and while I doubt that any rule can be rigidly enforced, it will certainly be well to make some attempt to control the naming of varieties.

Membership.

I recommend that we make some definite effort to enlarge our membership. Though not in the spirit of criticism, I want to suggest that I think we are too exclusive. So far as I know, we not only do not seek new members, but rather discourage the admission of new firms. One of the interesting modern developments of the seed business has been the growth of the number of new seed houses. One finds one or more seed houses in practically every city which has a population of 10,000 or more. It would seem that a larger membership would be more effective, and during convention week there could be an hour set aside for group meeting of the growers, commission men, catalogue men, grass seed men, etc.

HOLLAND'S BULB SHIPMENTS.

Consul D. I. Murphy, at Amsterdam, Holland, reports to the State Department that last year was "an off year in the Holland bulb trade." "While the growing weather was favorable and the crops all that could be desired, prices were not quite up to the mark," he says. "The war practically closed the year's business, exports to all the warring countries having fallen off heavily. The increased shipments to the United States, Sweden, Norway and Denmark were not sufficient to overcome the loss. According to the published trade statistics, exports to the United States in 1914 were 7,649,000 kilos (16,862,985 pounds), against 5,413,900 kilos (11,935,484 pounds) in the previous year. Consular records show the value of shipments to the United States to have been $73,810, against $65,580 in 1913, an increase of $8,230. These records only show the value of shipments over $100, but thousands of small shipments are sent every year, the value of which is not ascertained.

"Sales to the United States mount up yearly to between 200,000,000 and 300,000,000 bulbs, of which the larger number are tulips and daffodils, though hyacinths, crocuses and jonquils find enormous sale. Considerable irritation was apparent in the trade over the prohibition against the entry of bulbs by mail into the United States, leaders in the business declaring that the post-office order excluding them has caused heavy losses to growers and shippers." NOTICE

To all American Nurserymen and Seedsmen desiring to keep in touch with commercial horticulture in England and the continent of Europe: Your best means of doing this is to take in the

Horticultural Advertiser

Our circulation covers the whole trade in Great Britain and the cream of the European firms. Impartial reports of all novelties, etc. Paper free on receipt of 75 cents, covering cost of postage yearly. As the H. A. is a purely trade medium, applicants should, with the subscription, send a copy of their catalogue or other evidence that they belong to the nursery or seed trade.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Although the "merry month of June" has not, so far, produced quite the usual crop of weddings, there have been several good ones, calling for fine decorations. As usual when growers are replanting, there is a distinct shortage in indoor roses and the quality of much of the stock is not of the best. Valley also is on the short side and most of the stock now comes from northern growers. Dahlias are beginning to make a nice show in the windows, but probably no great number of flowers are sold. There has been a big demand for sweet peas, Cecile Brunner roses and other small stock that can be worked up into graduation bouquets, as several important schools are now closing. Gladioli are particularly fine this year, with America still leading in demand. All the wholesalers report good shipping business and appear to be busy all day long.

Various Notes.

Friends of Edwin Lonsdale everywhere will be pleased to hear of considerable improvement in his health since his arrival at the Naturopathic hospital, in this city. On Sunday last he felt sufficiently well to take a nice automobile trip, and, as usual when anything can be done to help a friend, H. W. Turner, of Montebello, was on hand with his Stoddart-Dayton and took Mr. and Mrs. Lonsdale for a two-hour spin along the mountain road through Pasadena, Altadena and Glendale, and back by Griffith park. Mr. Lonsdale seems to be in perfect spirits and said he enjoyed every minute of his trip, nor was he unduly tired at the end of it. Mr. Lonsdale has one of those unusually fine characters and a disposition that makes friends at once, wherever he goes, and the same sprightly good humor and optimism seem to surround him now, though he is far from being a well man. It was fortunate that circumstances allowed Mrs. Lonsdale to be with her husband during his illness. He says he is just "learning how to relax and rest thoroughly," and this ought to bring him around in good shape by convention time, to which he is looking forward with pleasure.

At Bear lake local fishermen have been taking the limit of late and all report a good time. C. Gutting, of the Superior Nursery Co., returned June 15 with the usual bunch of stories of his prowess. Colonel R. M. Teague, of San Dimas, was said to be getting in some effective work with a cork trawler.

John Morley, of San Diego, was a visitor last week.

The California Evergreen Co. reports fair business for the season and I noticed much the best Mexican ivy I have seen this season at the store on Broadway. A. Gonzawa is now looking after the books of the firm here. He has had a good deal of experience in the florists' business, as a bookkeeper and business-getter, and is exceptionally well fitted for the position.

YOU MAY discontinue our ad of Mums, as we are completely sold out. Review ads certainly are business-bringers. First order received within 24 hours after The Review came, and since then orders coming from as far south and east as Texas, Oklahoma, California and about everywhere. They are still coming, and we shall have to return several containing checks and money orders.

BAKER FLORAL & SEED CO.

Baker, Ore., June 7, 1915.

I noticed some extra good Radiance roses in the stores last week—that is, extra good for this season—and inquiries elicited the information that they were from the Sawtelle greenhouses of W. Armacost & Co.

Fred Howard, of Howard & Smith, returned June 13 from a business trip to San Francisco. He is getting to be as elusive as a will-o'-the-wisp and he surely covers the ground. The excellent series of advertisements continues in the principal daily here and brings lots of business to the house.

Wright's Flower Shop seems to be an exceedingly busy place these days, with large numbers of graduation bouquets among the other items of business.

The Angelus Dahlia Gardens is the name that Z. H. Sherart has given his place on Morgan avenue. Mr. Sherart has for several years been growing novelties and standard kinds of dahlias and just at present there are numbers of the flowers, with promise of a richer display later. Mr. Sherart's place is a wonder of neatness and order and will well repay a visit.

H. R. Richards.

Tassano Bros. are planning the erection of another lath house at their Glendale Nursery, 500 feet square. They now grow 65,000 plants of asparagus and contemplate adding 50,000 more; hence the need of the new house. Two glass houses, each 50x220 feet, will be erected for Adiantum cuneatum.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Notwithstanding the advancing season, business is keeping up well. Counter trade is a little above normal for summer, and many substantial house orders, with weddings and frequent special decorations calling for great quantities of stock, keep things moving in good shape. Seasonable outdoor stock continues abundant and sells at rather low prices, but most of the daily offerings find an outlet. Sweet sultan has been extensively used for the last few weeks. Phlox is becoming more plentiful. Ordinary commercial offerings of gladioli are nothing extra in quality and are cheap, though some small lots of fine stock come in. Panama brings a premium. The situation in dahlias is similar to that in gladioli, except that plenty of really good dahlias are expected soon.

Sweet peas seem to be past their prime; there is enough first-class stock, but the market is flooded with short and inferior offerings. Carnations also are cheap. Outdoor roses are getting pretty well cleaned up. There has been a little special demand for roses this week, and indoor stock is expected to pick up in a few weeks. Cecile Brunner is giving great satisfaction, with crop and demand alike heavy. Ophelia is moving well and the call for Sunburst exceeds the supply, as this rose is beginning to show fine color. Hadley and Taft are also doing well. Offerings of Bermuda lilies are larger, with no special demand, and ordinary lots are pressed for sale by the growers. The cut of gardenias, and of orchids in several varieties, continues fine, and practically everything offered finds ready sale at well sustained prices. Of potted stock, hydrangeas in several varieties and at a wide range of prices are plentiful and find an improved demand.

Various Notes.

Notwithstanding the two changes of date of the sweet pea show at the exposition, it was fairly well attended and some fine exhibits were staged. The date decided on was really fortunate as far as flowers were concerned, as the sweet peas were superlatively fine and all who saw them were delighted. The gold cup offered as first prize for the best collection of sweet peas went to C. C. Morse & Co., the second to W. Atlee Burpee & Co. The Francis Floral Co. received first prize for the most original floral design, the piece being an umbrella-shaped bridal canopy of sweet peas, starred with "novagems," or artificial jewels such as are used on the Tower of Jewels at the exposition. It may be mentioned in passing that several recent experiments with these articles seem to indicate that they may become an important adjunct to floral work.

The water lilies in Dreer's collection in the Palace of Horticulture at the exposition are now blossoming nicely. In the garden exhibits outside, the Netherlands begonia exhibit is getting well started. Many fine exhibits of dahlias are coming into bloom, and most beds of gladioli are blossoming. Practically all the rose exhibits are in bloom. Some nice beds of phloxes are coming out and the pelargonium exhibits make a good showing. A bed of Lilium Harrisii from William Bustrin, of Watsonville, is in full bloom. Anton Zvolanek's collections of sweet peas have been particularly fine for the last fortnight.

The local committee working on the souvenir program for the S. A. F. convention is making good progress and expects to have a program to be proud of.

The local Women's Auxiliary of the S. A. F. held a meeting June 16.

One of the largest day's sales of roses ever known of here was made June 15, when the Oregon rose festival was celebrated at the Oregon building at the exposition, and in a parade around town. At the Oregon building great quantities of roses were given away to visitors. The flowers were supposed to come from Oregon, but as a matter of fact two orders are known to have been placed with local houses, amounting to 10,000 each, which cleaned up practically everything in the market for the day.

The new bowling team of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, headed by V. Podesta, is meeting regularly and some of the players are developing a creditable game.

E. James has been sending in some excellent hydrangeas lately. A lot of his Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora that appeared last week were especially attractive.

Frank Pelicano brought in a beautiful cut of dahlias from his place last week. These were about the first really fine dahlias shown here this season.

Lots of gladioli have been shipped in on consignment from as far off as Santa Cruz, and the bulk of the shipments move slowly.

Joseph's has been doing a rushing business lately in special baskets of fruit and flowers for parties sailing for Hawaii and the orient, as travel in that direction is unusually heavy this season. Later on a lot of similar business for people returning east by the Panama canal is expected.

The E. W. McLellan Co. has about finished its new rose planting and greenhouse repairs, and expects to have a much larger cut from new plants in a few weeks. Mr. Axell, of this company, reports a good many rose orders from outside towns and also finds a heavy outside demand for greens.

S. H. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business has settled to normal conditions after the celebration of the rose festival last week. There is a satisfactory demand for flowers. Plenty of first-class stock is coming in. Roses and sweet peas are of excellent quality and bring good prices. Several private schools and academies have held their graduation exercises, and at nearly all flowers were used freely. June weddings are not so numerous as they have been some years. Several large funerals and an average number of smaller ones have helped to move the surplus stock. The cut of carnations is not so heavy as it was. The quality shows the effect of the warm weather. There is an abundance of gaillardias and other outdoor flowers of first-class quality.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Portland Floral Society June 15 was well attended. L. W. Scott, of the entertainment committee, reported that the exclusive use of Schnor's park, at Oregon City, had been obtained for a picnic July 4. Contests, children's games and a general good time will be provided. Instructions are: Take electric car for Oregon City at 9 a. m., get off at suspension bridge and walk to the west bank of the Willamette; park is near by; automobiles go by west side road; cars run every half-hour; fare, 50 cents round trip; bring picnic lunch, families, employees and friends.

ed for the show, which will be held in Portland about September 15. Professionals and amateurs may make exhibits. All sorts of seasonable flowers will be admitted. His request was that the Floral Society assist in entertaining the visitors and carrying on the show, and he was referred to the standing committee on exhibitions.

John F. Carroll, director of the rose festival, who had charge of the floral center, said he had just come from a meeting of the directors, who have passed a resolution expressing their appreciation and thanks to the Floral Society for the staging of the floral center, which they called the crowning feature of the festival. Mr. Carroll expressed his pleasure at having had the opportunity of getting acquainted with so many florists and paid a hearty compliment to the members who took part in arranging the floral center. He said the transforming of two blocks of sidewalks and street into a bower of floral beauty in less than forty-eight hours' time was a seeming miracle possible only to experts in that line. He closed his remarks with the hope that the floral center would become a feature of future rose festivals. President Van Kirk made a fitting reply and suggested that Mr. Carroll be made an honorary member of the Floral Society. Mr. Carroll has the distinction of being the first honorary member of the society.

The election of officers resulted in the following: President, S. W. Walker; vice-president, E. J. Steele; secretary, H. Niklas; treasurer, Jas. Forbes; trustees, A. J. Clarke, R. W. Gill and Julius Dorsche.

A purse containing $60 in gold was presented to the retiring president as a token of appreciation of the work done by him in the interest of the society. The presentation was made by J. B. Pilkington. The president was so taken by surprise that words failed him and he declared lunch ready.

A box of cigars was passed around by Secretary Niklas in celebration of a new arrival in his family.

O. E. Panzer brought sweet peas of a dark color, which he originated, for exhibition. They attracted considerable attention.

A. J. Clarke offered this story: August Zitzewitz, the well-known grower, had a neatly printed sign on his exhibition of double petunias at the floral center. One day this sign became detached from its support and fell down among the plants. A portly lady visitor saw it with interest and was heard to spell it out carefully, "A. Zitzewitz." Then she remarked to her companion, "Lan' sakes! I have seen them kind of flowers often and always wanted to know what their name was." And she passed on, happy in her belief that she had added another name to her list of plants.

Director Carroll, in speaking of Manager Dorsche's strenuous activity in handling the floral center, referred to him as a "human dynamo."

The rumor was heard that the "Society of the Yellow Dog" would hold another meeting at the picnic July 4.

Various Notes.

Geo. Goos says he sold all the plants in his exhibit at the floral center on clean-up day, and could have sold another wagon load if he had brought them.

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade?
Is it moving as it should?
No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.—Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

the plants used in the exhibits at the floral center would be given away on clean-up day. This brought out a large crowd of bargain hunters to the grounds. No plants were given away, but many were sold at prices somewhat less than they usually bring.

Walter Thompson, manager of the Thompson Horticultural Works, expects to be busy with greenhouse construction this season. Besides the Scheier house at Butteville and the Walden addition at Arleta, he has other work in sight.

Otto Lemcke has had a good cut of carnations and asparagus from his range at Lents, Ore.

Prof. A. S. Peck is receiving congratulations on the recent visit of the stork to his family.

Portland rose day was celebrated June 16 at the Panama-Pacific exposition. Roses were scattered from floats parading the principal streets of San Francisco and 50,000 blooms were given away at the Oregon building.

John Willius, who has leased the Pfunder range of glass, at East Fortyninth and Alder streets, has 2,800 tomato plants coming in. In the lot are 800 John Baer, the new variety which he is trying out. He plans to set out a number of chrysanthemum plants when the tomatoes are gone.

C. C. Ruenitz has moved his flower store from the Masonic Temple to 471 Washington street, where he has more room and a better front for display. He decorated the cart of E. M. Sazurus, which took first prize in the floral parade, with gaillardias, chiffon and wild greens.

A. F. Salane has closed his store on Broadway, in the Orpheum theater building.

F. E. West, formerly with the English government as entomologist at Kew Gardens and in the colonies, has opened a laboratory in the Oregonian building for the determination of diseases of plants and the manufacture of sprays and disinfectants. Associated with him are A. G. Riddell and R. W. Blackwood, under the title of the Agricultural Chemical Co. S. W. W.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

CHARLES MOMM & SONS, Irvington, N. J., are enlarging the land under cultivation by ten acres this summer. This ten acres is planted with ornamental stock.

REPORT of the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against the Southern Nut Nursery Co., Kansas City, Mo., will be found under the head of Business Embarrassments in this week's issue.

AN exceptionally heavy spring trade in general nursery stock, which cleaned out some varieties, is reported at Duluth, Minn., by Oliver Brown, nurseryman and landscape architect, at 517 East Eighth avenue. The combination of heavy rains and sharp freezes last autumn and this spring killed large numbers of perennials outright and many shrubs and trees down to the ground. Frosts have continued to this late date.

ELMER RUNYON, manager of the Elizabeth Nurseries, Elizabeth, N. J., started early last week for the Detroit convention, going by automobile by way of Philadelphia, Harrisburg and Pittsburgh. He will return by another route. He is accompanied by his wife. Notwithstanding the general business depression, the spring business of the Elizabeth Nurseries was up to normal. There have not been such large orders from the wealthy, but more from the comfortably well off, who own their own places and are fixing them up. Plans are being made for the rebuilding of the storage and packing house which was burned on March 22.

PETERSON SELLS AND BUYS.

William A. Peterson, proprietor of Peterson Nursery, Chicago, appeared in two real estate transactions recorded this week, in one of which he was a seller and the other a purchaser, in which the combined consideration was $227,000.

One of the transactions was the sale to W. F. Kaiser & Co., subdividers, of a tract of about eighty-two acres bounded by Bryn Mawr avenue on the south, Central Park avenue on the west, Ardmore avenue on the north, and the sanitary district canal on the east, for an indicated consideration of $107,000, as evidenced by the revenue stamps on the document. This has been subdivided by Kaiser & Co. into 578 lots of thirty feet frontage. The contract for this deal was reported in this column some months ago.

Mr. Peterson purchased from W. L. Turner two tracts of forty acres each, the whole being bounded by Peterson avenue, Central Park avenue, Kimball and Ardmore avenues, for a total indicated consideration of $120,000. Mr. Peterson gave back a part purchase money mortgage of $50,000, five years, at six per cent.

Peterson Nursery of 275 acres adjoins this on the north and the property just acquired will be used for nursery purposes. Mr. Peterson has three years in which to remove the trees from the tract which he has sold to Kaiser & Co.

A. A. N. IN ANNUAL SESSION.

Meets This Week at Detroit.

This week the American Association of Nurserymen is celebrating the completion of its second score of years, in annual convention at Detroit, June 23 to 25. At the Cadillac hotel are gathered nurserymen from all sections for what has started out to be the most important convention in those forty years. On the opening day 250 were registered, and many more expected. J. B. Pilkington, of Portland, Ore., was the only member of the executive committee who was absent.

Everybody is saying to everybody else, "Cheer up." The prevailing sentiment is that last year was so bad that next year is bound to be better. And the prevailing spirit is one of optimism and energy. For those in attendance are the "live wires" and the (President American Association of Nurserymen)

"stand-bys," those who have spent money to come to the convention in spite of the shrinkage in profits, to stick to the association through hard times as well as good times, and help it to make the coming good times better and any future hard times not so hard.

When depression removes the press of business, it leaves a man time to think, and particularly to think of other things than the orders on his hands. Some of these thoughts are making their appearance at the Detroit convention, and the result of their appearance promises to be momentous in the trade.

A More Efficient Organization.

Everyone's thoughts are on improvement in general at present, and the thoughts of the nurserymen at Detroit are on improvement in the association in particular. This was apparent from the start. After the opening ceremonies were finished—the address of welcome by Mayor Oscar B. Marx and the response—President Chase began his address with an exhortation to nurserymen to cheer up. He said:

"E. C. Simmons, the hardware king of St. Louis, recently mailed a letter to all his salesmen reading:

"Don't worry. War or no war, freight rates or no freight rates, tariff or no tariff, baseball or no baseball, grape juice or champagne, the farmer is still on the job. Don't forget him."

"There is comfort and encouragement in this for every one of us; the farmer is still on the job, and he is today the best farmer this country has ever known; he is producing bigger crops, selling them for more money, and consequently spending more money than ever before. He will buy our trees, and will have the coin to pay for them. See to it that he gets full 100 cents in value for every dollar he spends with us. Don't worry! Forget your worries in work."

With regard to improvement in the association, President Chase said:

"With last season's troubles behind us let us now cheerfully and buoyantly face the problems of the coming season and of the coming years. What are they? There is just one problem that I shall dwell on, only one, and that is this: Can this association by any change in its methods or organization make of itself a more efficient organization, an organization that will really help to control production and to eliminate price-cutting, an organization that can keep closer watch on legislative and transportation matters than is possible under our present system of working through committees? Can it be done? How shall we go about it?

What Has Been Done.

"This association is now forty years old; it was founded by a few representative nurserymen with the idea of bringing together in an annual convention the reputable nurserymen of the United States, to get acquainted with one another, relax from business, mix and mingle together, to exchange views and ideas, discuss methods of propagation, cultivation and all questions of common interest, and incidentally, or possibly primarily, to exchange, buy and sell nursery stock; the founders of this association had in mind the bringing into its membership all reputable nurserymen of this country, a national association of American nurserymen. They had in mind the greatest good to the greatest number. The dues were nominal, expenses small, their problems far less complicated than those we face today. Up to 1905 the dues were $2 per year; they were then raised to $3 and in 1906 to $5; so, going back ten years, we find we have had an income of $5 per year for nine years and $3 for one year from a membership as follows:

1905—West Baden	472
1906—Dallas	541
1907—Detroit	371
1908—Milwaukee	378
1909—Rochester	384
1910—Denver	356
1911—St. Louis	382
1912—Boston	363
1913—Portland	463
1914—Cleveland	410

Since February, 1900, we have expended $10,504 in tariff, legislation and transportation matters alone. In addition to this we have expended about $1,700 from the special horticultural fund started in Portland two years ago. That this money has been well and wisely expended is beyond question of doubt. The work has been handled by committeemen who are all busy nurserymen, and who have given freely of their time, inconvenienced themselves time and time again to carry on this work, and without one cent of remuneration for their services.

"Note that our largest membership in the last ten years was 541, and that for six years of the ten the membership has been under 400. Now, to get the money necessary to do the work we ought to do, we must either more than double our membership or more than quadruple our dues. I have heard it stated at our conventions many times that we ought to have a membership of at least 1,000. I doubt if we can ever get such a membership, even though we have a secretary whose whole time is devoted to the work of the association. Certainly we have failed by the various methods employed in past years to build up our membership to the desired point. I am greatly pleased to see that in spite of this hard year just past we have secured sixty or seventy new members. This is evidence of the good work done by our membership committee this season. If we advance our dues from $5 to $25 or $30, or $40 or $50 per year, how many members will we lose? Would the few who made up such an association constitute a national association of American nurserymen? If, instead of the 400 to 500 odd members now attending our annual meetings, our conventions consisted of say 100 or 150 members (and I honestly believe there are not to exceed 100 to 125 who will pay $30 to $50 annual dues), would such a convention be a representative gathering of the American nurserymen? Can this association afford to consider any plan that will reduce its membership from 400 or 500 to 100 or 125? All these and dozens of other questions have occurred to me in thinking this matter over.

"With the consent of the program committee, I wish to call for Mr. Mayhew's paper this morning, in order that we may have ample time to consider it, and I bespeak for him your careful and close attention. Following his paper I want a full and free discussion of this question, and let's see if we can get at a practical working plan and then try it out."

In considering the work of the legislative committee, the president suggested that in view of the large amount of work which the members of this committee were called upon to do, they might be relieved of a large amount of detail work by the association's hiring a paid expert. The president's address received much applause.

Letters were read from L. A. Berckmans and W. E. Campbell.

In closing, Mr. Hall stated his satisfaction with the arrangement by which he had held his office during the last year and a willingness to continue in it, should the association desire him to do so.

Peter Youngers read his report as treasurer, which was referred to an auditing committee composed of C. C. Mayhew, O. J. Howard and C. E. Bennett.

Legislative Reports.

In his report as chairman of the committee on legislation east of the Mississippi river, William Pitkin reiterated his statement of a year ago that the federal law was not so beneficial to the trade as some members seemed to think, adducing as evidence the action of the federal horticultural board in quarantining sections of New England on account of the prevalence of the gypsy and brown-tail moths, in forbidding the importation of pines and in threatening, at present, the quarantining of chestnut trees from abroad. In state legislation, the only important action in the last year has been the Ohio case of the taxation of nursery stock and the passage of an inspection law in Indiana, both of which were treated fully in The Review at the time they came up. In closing, Mr. Pitkin recommended to the attention of the convention the employment of a competent attorney such as is retained by the American Seed Trade Association. J. W. Hill suggested the same man might handle tariff and transportation. On J. H. Dayton's motion the matter was made business for Thursday morning.

Within a very few years there has been a great advance in the popularity of antirrhinums, commonly known as snapdragons. Our original Silver Pink came on the scene at the start. We worked it over and over, purifying its "blood," until we gave the world a most wonderfully productive seedling, practically pure. Continuing to experiment, we reached a new ideal, and now announce the debut of

SILVER QUEEN A MOST PLEASING AND BEAUTIFUL... ORCHID-FLOWERED SNAPDRAGON

Its color is that soft, silvery shell pink that has made its parent, Silver Pink, so famous. The upper petals of every bloom have an aristocratic orchid curl; it is from one-third to one-half larger than any known type of antirrhinum, and makes a very heavy, compact head, of marvelous grace and beauty. We doubt if it ever will be equaled as a fancy variety, or exceeded by any variety, other than Silver Pink Seedlings, as a commercial variety. It grows medium tall and is very productive.

We do not have space to propagate in great quantities, so will offer in advance our limited stock, delivered by parcel post, at

$1.00 per plant; six plants for $5.00;
fifteen plants for $10.00.

We could give glowing words of praise from many visiting florists and drummers who have admired this wonderful snapdragon growing on our premises, but we prefer, as with the introduction of Silver Pink, to give you OUR word for it. Our reputation is back of it and you will find it just as represented.

We should like every florist to try this marvelous newcomer. Remember, the stock is limited. See our general ad on page 65.

of the rest of the country that it was deemed advisable to allow the committee members from that section to work independently; after this division, there were added to the committee John H. Dayton, W. P. Stark, Thomas B. Meehan, F. H. Stannard and R. C. Berckmans.

Transportation.

Chas. Sizemore, chairman of the transportation committee, in considering the subject of the responsibility for freight charges, stated that although the ruling of the interstate commerce commission and of various courts has been that if the carrier cannot collect charges from the consignee it may collect them from the shipper, if the carrier indicates, by taking promissory notes, opening an account, or similar action, a purpose to rely upon the personal responsibility of the consignee, it forfeits its right to collect later from the consignor. The mooted question of the prepayment of freight charges was settled by Mr. Sizemore's quotation of a rule stating that only the shipper's guarantee is necessary, not full prepayment. Agitation of the question of dunnage or preservative allowance was considered by Mr. Sizemore as unwise, inasmuch as it might result in the increase of the carload minimum. The committee is preparing to try for a reversal of the change from fifth to fourth class by the official classification committee, even if it is necessary to accept a higher minimum to get the old classification. As the change in classification, which took effect June 1, means an increase of twenty-five per cent or more, it is felt that the fight for a return to the old rating is worth the expenditure of much effort on the part of nurserymen.

E. A. Smith, chairman of the committee on root gall, said that the work of the committee was at present principally confined to gathering information on the subject. Experiments are slow and results, while they will be Publicity and Trade Opportunities.

W. G. Campbell, chairman of the committee on publicity and trade opportunities, stated that the work of the committee for the last year had been confined to an investigation of the work that might be done most profitably by the committee and of the manner in which it might best be done. It therefore sought the opinion of prominent nurserymen, editors and planters on a number of points. The majority seemed to believe that fruit tree planting had reached its height and would be less during the next few years, but that there is untold opportunity for further planting of ornamentals. The question of developing export trade, particularly to South America, was generally answered in the negative in view of the large opportunities at home.

Fault is found with the present advertising of nurserymen. It is ineffective, is the belief, because it presents no definite offer and is lacking in educational tone. General coöperation within the trade is to be sought before a general advertising campaign could be carried on profitably. A more thorough-going organization, a closer knowledge of conditions and needs, and the adoption of modern business methods are felt to be preliminary to a campaign on behalf of the trade.

Following the committee reports, J. Jenkins, of Winona, O., read a paper on "New Wrinkles in the Art of Propagation." After a humorous introduction of some length, Mr. Jenkins presented to the audience various time and labor-saving methods of propagation followed in his nursery.

The first session closed with an interesting question box, of which J. W. Hill, of Des Moines, Ia., was the leader.

FREDERICK, MD.

Botanical Gardens Opened.

With President Woodrow Wilson one of the chief contributors, approximately $2,000 worth of rare flowers and plants have been donated to Frederick's educational botanical gardens, which will be thrown open to the public for educational purposes. After the gardens had been in an embryo state for more than two months, Mayor Lewis H. Fraley made the official announcement June 14. The board of trustees of the garden is as follows: William F. Gude, Washington; Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; George W. Hess, superintendent of the United States Botanical Gardens, Washington, and Mayor Lewis H. Fraley, Frederick.

Frank C. Hargett has been named superintendent of educational and botanical gardens of Frederick. Besides being in charge of the gardens, Mr. Hargett will conduct experiments, observations and returns from which will be filed with the United States Department of Agriculture.

The following donations were made by members of the trade:

John Cook, Baltimore, crate of blooming roses, including his Francis Scott Key rose.
William F. Gude, Washington, gardenias and palms.
W. Atlee Burpee, Philadelphia, 300 imported bulbs.
R. Craig Co., Philadelphia, crotons and other plants.
Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., cannas.
Peter Henderson & Co., New York, palms, ferns and tropical plants.
Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., imported bulbs.
A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., roses.
R. Vincent, Jr. & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., 900 plants, including orchids, dahlias and bedding varieties.
Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, phlox and other plants.

WINTER-FLOWERING ROSES

Specialty Low Prices to Close Out Stocks Remaining Unsold.

We have a particularly fine stock of the newer and leading standard varieties in 3½ and 4-inch pots ready for immediate planting. The prices quoted below for 3½ and 4-inch stock are as low as the prices at which 2½-inch stock is usually sold. The demand for Ophelia is very heavy. If you want to plant this valuable new rose, do not delay placing order. While we have a nice stock of it at present, at the rate it is selling we are likely to become sold out before long.

The Market.

Business seems to be satisfactory to all. There have been many weddings and funerals. Flowers of all kinds are plentiful. Roses and carnations are small.

Few days go by that we do not have rain. During the night of June 20 we had the hardest electrical and wind storm of the year. Some of the florists lost some glass by the wind, but nothing more serious has been reported.

Various Notes.

J. C. Elspermann is about through with spring planting, of which he had much to do. He has one house planted to mums.

Karl Zeidler has part of his mums planted. He cleaned out well the large stock of bedding plants he had early in the spring.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. keeps the store window decorated in nice shape with seasonable plants and cut flowers.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are about done with planting out, and have started on inside work, cleaning out carnations and roses and replanting. They have propagated an immense number of mums and will plant heavily of these.

Miss Nellie Goodge did a fine business all spring. She disposed of large quantities of geraniums, etc.

Theodore Kuebler does a nice business each day at the city market. He reports a big call for rooted mums from all over the country. His new delivery car is on the way at last, and he should get it soon.

Royston & Fenton are cutting plenty of good, salable Ivory roses. They will not grow nearly as many roses next season. They did a big business in coleus cuttings, sultana cuttings and young smilax, and are preparing for a large increase next fall. E. L. F.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Advance Co., Richmond, Ind.—“Advance Ventilating Apparatus and Greenhouse Fittings”; forty pages and cover. “This catalogue,” says the firm, “is not intended as an attractive advertisement; we simply wish to illustrate and give a plain description of our line.” Yet the booklet has the real attractiveness which results from a good quality of paper, typography and illustrations. It is meant to “serve as a net price list to every customer, and as a book of ready reference.”

The Weber Chimney Co., Chicago, Ill.—A neat, well printed, 48-page catalogue of reinforced concrete smokestacks, with illustrations which show some of the details of construction and also show many of the finished stacks, including the “Weber Coniform” chimney which was erected for J. F. Wilcox & Sons, Council Bluffs, Ia., and which “withstood the cyclone of March, 1913, which completely destroyed the boiler house and other buildings.” In the list of users of Weber chimneys are the names of several well known florists. At the end of the book is “Kent’s Table of Chimney Sizes for Steam Boilers.”

NEW NEPHROLEPIS FERN—JOHN WANAMAKER

We will introduce the above new fern on August 1st, 1915. In presenting this fern to the trade, we feel confident that it will make a place for itself.

The John Wanamaker fern is a wonderful advance over all plain or wavy frond varieties. The side pinnae of the fronds are very fully undulated, giving the plants a very wavy appearance. It will make as many fronds as Teddy, Jr., plants in 4-inch pots having over sixty fronds. It is a beautifully formed plant, full and compact.

Orders will be filled strictly in rotation.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

THREE-INCH PIPE FOR STEAM.

Your replies to our inquiries have been so useful to us in the past that I wish again to ask your heating expert a question. We have a lot of 3-inch standard pipe and not enough of smaller sizes. Could we use the 3-inch pipe to advantage for the coils under the benches? We use steam and the houses are 150 feet long.

G. E. Y.—Kan.

In heating with steam, 1½-inch pipe is preferred for the coils, not only on account of the first cost of pipe and fittings, but also because of the efficiency of the heating surface. Yet, if one has the pipe on hand and it cannot be sold or exchanged to advantage, it might be well to use 3-inch pipe rather than buy the smaller size. One linear foot of 3-inch pipe should heat six square feet of glass to a temperature of 60 degrees, or eight feet to 50 degrees, when it is zero or a little below outside.

MORE FLOW PIPES NEEDED.

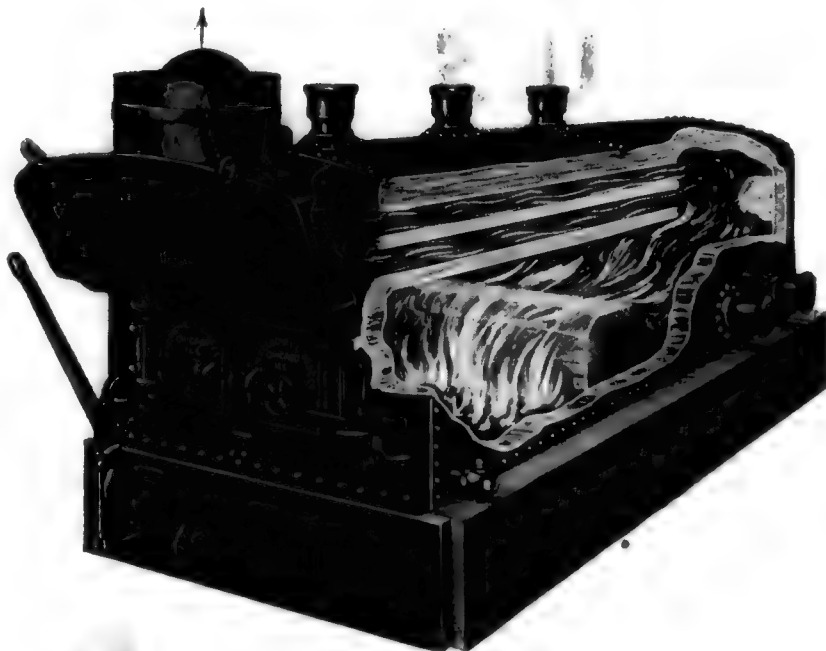

I have a greenhouse 20x50, which I am now extending so it will measure 20x76. The blue print herewith enclosed shows the present plan of heating, which has given good satisfaction, but I should like to have your heating expert give me a little information with reference to extending the one 2½-inch flow pipe. Perhaps it would be advisable to add another flow, running both flows into the house at the same height as the present one, then dropping them and placing one under each purlin. I should like to drop them clear down to the eave plates instead of the purlins, but do not know whether that would be practical.

J. I. H.—Mich.

Although it is stated that the present system, with one 2½-inch overhead flow and with fourteen 2-inch returns, arranged in two coils under the side benches, gives good results, I feel confident that, for the house 20x50, it would have been better to use two or even three flow pipes. There are in the system about 500 square feet of radiating surface, and, although this would be the maximum, it would not be excessive for one 2½-inch flow pipe, were there only six or even eight returns, but it would be preferable to use at least one additional flow pipe when as many as seventeen returns are to be supplied, especially in an open-tank system.

If the house is to be extended twenty-

The immense amount of direct self-cleaning heating surface and the thin vertical waterways cause this type of boiler construction to heat water quicker than any other form of boiler.

Hundreds of Florists' Review readers are using the Kroeschell Boiler and mighty is their praise. The past year has brought an enormous number of new customers who have seen our boiler in operation at other places. We attribute the large sales of the 1914-1915 season to the good work the Kroeschell Boiler is doing everywhere. six feet in length, I would certainly put in one additional flow pipe and would prefer to use two. The higher the flow pipes, the better will be the circulation, and for this reason there will be some advantage in having the flows under the purlins rather than upon the plates, but whether this will be necessary, or advisable, will depend upon the location of the boiler. If it stands so that the top is a foot or more below the returns, two flows on the plates would answer. If raised benches are used in the house, it is often a good plan to have a part of the returns under the middle benches, and for that purpose a third flow pipe under the ridge should be used.

The letter does not state what temperature is desired in the house or the amount of glass, if any, in the side walls, but, if 60 to 62 degrees will answer and if the walls contain no glass, I would consider that there is an excess of radiation in the house, provided it is well built and has about an average exposure. At the outside estimate, two 2½-inch flows and eleven 2-inch returns would answer, and even better results could be obtained from three flows and ten returns. If the side walls have any glass, one additional return will be needed for each two feet of glass. For 50 degrees, use two flows and eight returns.

TWO GREENHOUSES AND OFFICE.

We intend to build two greenhouses, as indicated in the enclosed sketch, and should like to know how to pipe them for the best results. The temperature required will be 55 to 60 degrees in zero weather. House No. 1 contains no benches. House No. 2 has benches, as shown in the drawing. The houses are six and one-half feet high to the eaves and twelve feet high to the ridge. There are four feet of glass in the sides and glass in the gable ends. We also wish to know how to pipe the office.

M. E. J. C.—Ohio.

The sketch which accompanies the letter shows two houses, 20x125 and 25x140, respectively, with one side and one end of each house exposed, and with the boiler room at one end of the longer house and the office at the opposite end of the other house.

For the larger house, I would use four 2½-inch flow pipes, placing one upon each plate and the others under the purlins, with thirteen 2-inch returns. Three returns should be under each of the benches and four on the outside wall.

In the house 20x125, use the same number of flow pipes, extending one into the office to supply the radiation needed there, but since the sketch does not show how much window surface it will contain, I cannot give an estimate, except to state in a general way that an average amount would be 100 square feet of radiation. This may be furnished by two radiators or by means of 165 feet of 2-inch pipe in coils. A 2½-inch return pipe should be run back to the boiler. In addition to the three flows for the greenhouse and the flow and return to the office, nine 2-inch returns will be required in the smaller house. Four of these should be on the outer wall, three on the inner wall and one of the others in each of the middle walks.

Just what should be the size of the main flow and return pipes leading into the house will depend upon the ports in the boiler, but two 3-inch pipes will supply each house, and the returns will be of the same size.

ELIZABETH, N. J.

Mrs. C. M. Hutchinson, 1216 North Broad street, is planning to tear down two of her old greenhouses, in place of which she plans to build a large greenhouse. Spring trade proved to be good, notwithstanding the loss occasioned by the Easter Saturday blizzard, the total business being larger than last year's. Mrs. Hutchinson's place is opposite Evergreen cemetery, and she has much cemetery trade. She has 200 lots on yearly contract to keep supplied with plants and flowers.

J. W. Blakeley, 80 Broad street, who late in the winter moved to his present location, but who for forty-two years has been in business on Broad street, reports that this spring has been the best since he has been in business.

Henry Leahy, 1169 East Jersey street, has had a good spring. There has been considerable funeral and wedding work of late, and transient trade has been fair.

J. E. & A. G. Hutchinson, 227 Broad street, sold a considerable quantity of flowers for the graduation exercises in the private schools, though not so many as heretofore because of the fact that in one of the schools, at least, it was decided for the first time not to permit flowers to be presented to the graduates publicly during the exercises.

The greenhouse trade of the Elizabeth Nursery Co. during the last spring was quite good.

J. J. Brummer, 1155 Elizabeth avenue, has had considerable funeral work of late.

The Violet Flower Shop, 704 Elizabeth avenue, has had much funeral work lately and several weddings to provide flowers for. Transient trade is a little slower, though fair. R. B. M.

DENVER.The Market.

The market has been fairly good during this month. All the stock is of good quality, and there is enough coming in to supply all demands.

Various Notes.

The Boldt-Lundy Flower Shop has moved into larger quarters directly across the street from the old stand.

John A. Jenson, formerly of this city, but now with the Rose Hill Nursery Co., at Minneapolis, Minn., is spending a few weeks in Denver visiting old friends.

The death of Louis Dreher is reported in this week's obituary column.

Robert Alton, formerly rose grower for Fred Hall, has gone to Chicago to work.

Thomas Batten was married June 12 to Miss Maud Gilbert. He is employed at the City Park Greenhouses.

The Speth Floral Co. had the decorations for the annual ball at the University Club.

The Mauff Floral Co. is planting several benches of Mrs. Russell rose. R. S.

PINO-LYPTOL

WEED KILLER

THE VERY NEWEST AND QUICKEST METHOD OF DESTROYING WEEDS, GRASS AND OTHER GROWTH IN GARDEN WALKS, GUTTERS, TENNIS COURTS, DRIVEWAYS, ETC.

This fluid absolutely destroys all weeds and other growths wherever applied, and its effect on the ground prevents the growth of fresh ones for a year and thus saves a great deal of time and labor, as no cutting, hoeing or hauling away of the weeds is required.

WE MANUFACTURE the STRONGEST LINE of DISINFECTANTS on the market.

PITTSBURGH.The Market.

Pittsburgh is laboring under the condition prevalent in the country—too much stock. Although trade has been all that could be expected, it could not possibly use the quantities of stock of all kinds, from inside and outside, but the worst is about over and good stock will begin to shorten in supply, as well as the demand for it. The retailers do not seem to have the usual number of large June weddings, though trade in a smaller way seems up to expectations.

Various Notes.

The wholesale houses from now on will close at 5 p. m. during the summer months.

F. M. Johnson and E. G. Galavan, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, with their wives, have been touring the country in their Overland "six" and calling on the trade in the cities which they pass through.

Chas. H. Koenig, of Millvale, in this city, died June 18, after a two weeks' illness. Further particulars will be found in this week's obituary column.
Clarke.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.The Market.

Business continues brisk in spite of the poor weather, which has been the same as usual, with rain every day, but we are all hoping that summer will soon be here to stay. Graduations and several large funerals have kept the market fairly active all the week. Gladioli are now making their appearance in quantity and all are of fine quality.

Various Notes.

The Crabb & Hunter Floral Co. displayed a wax figure in the window last week, representing the girl graduate wearing a corsage of pink roses.

A visit to Eli Cross's greenhouses found several girls busy packing peonies for cold storage. He is putting up two 300-foot houses for roses. Ophelia and Hoosier Beauty are to have a large space.

Henry Smith's store reports several large funeral orders and a brisk shipping trade, due to graduations.

The Market.

Business is good, except for those who carry bedding stock, the sale of which has been slow on account of the continuous rain. Seedling plants sold well; the only stock left is geraniums.

Roses are surprisingly good for this time of the year. Russell roses are more plentiful than they have ever been. Other varieties are in large supply, with a steady demand. Carnations were somewhat scarce last week. Some nice gladioli are coming in, which bring fair prices. Lilies are plentiful; prices on these range considerably on account of the quality. Sweet peas are plentiful, but are bringing only a small price.

Various Notes.

The Costello Moore Floral Co. is well satisfied with its location, as business has increased considerably since the Hotel Muehlebach has started, with two other good hotels on each side and no competitor near.

The Rosery has plenty of orders for decorations on hand. Mr. Ellsworth has his stock plants of poinsettias in good shape. He expects to propagate a great number of these this summer.

Business across the state line was good last week, especially in funeral work and wedding decorations.

Stevens & Larkin are sending in some good carnations. They are well satisfied with results so far this season. They will begin soon to plant their houses with carnations from the field.

Henry Kusik & Co. are busy at present in their wire work department. Mr. Kusik now receives consignments from Chicago, where heretofore he has relied on stock from this vicinity, Iowa and Nebraska.

E. G. Bunyar has sold practically everything he had in his houses. He has his place all planted and is now planning for this summer's fishing trips. His greenhouses are in excellent shape.

The S. Bryson Ayres Co. is heavily stocked with sweet peas. They will soon have a large supply of gladioli from the field.

August Luther, Jr., is well satisfied with the business he has done this season, which is the first in his present location. He is pretty well cleaned up on all his bedding plants, and reports that he is well satisfied with cut flower trade.

TOLEDO, O.The Market.

Business for the last two weeks has been most gratifying. One rush after another does not indicate the usual rest in this particular trade during the warmer months. With the undertakers' convention for the states of Ohio and Michigan, and the convention of the United Commercial Travelers, florists were kept busy with decorations in the exposition buildings, large decorations at the hotels and countless orders for corsage bouquets for evening entertainments. Besides, this month will be a record-breaker for sales due to graduation exercises in the high schools and universities, and the June weddings. Almost every day some florist in town had at least one large church decoration. On Tuesday, June 15, nine church decorations were noted.

Cut flowers are in great profusion and the demand is excellent. Among the more seasonable flowers on the market are some fine specimens of Francis King and America gladioli. Peonies are still abundant. The carnation crop is becoming poorer, although some good flowers are still to be had. Roses are in good crop, especially Richmond, Killarney, Hillingdon and Ward. Beauties are in the best of bloom, with the prices at a fine scale. There is a good supply of daisies, coreopsis and other miscellaneous stock.

Various Notes.

Miss Ida Schwartz, of the Patten Flower Store, has resumed her duties after several weeks of absence due to illness. Miss Patten had several casket covers to make last week. She is well pleased with business conditions since Memorial day.

Henry Miller, Toledo's largest carnation grower, has finished planting his carnation crop in the field. His carnations look fine and promising.

Mr. Wisner, who has greenhouses on Delaware avenue, intends to remodel his range this summer.

Schramm Bros. have added to their staff James McCleod, an expert landscape gardener and a member of the Royal Horticultural Society of Great Britain. The volume of outside work that has been secured during the last year in this line has compelled the employment of a capable manager for the outside work.

Ralph Cushman has been cutting some fine gladioli, which is finding a good sale. G. B. S.

BUFFALO.The Market.

The weather last week was warm, which had a depressing effect on business. Commencements, graduations and wedding work have made up most of the business, since transient trade has been dull. There is an accumulation of stock on the market, which makes cut flowers cheap in all grades. Roses, sweet peas and carnations are the flowers most in demand for graduations. Peonies have become soft. Roses in all varieties are good, but the short-stemmed stock is sold quite cheaply. Carnations are holding up wonderfully well during the warm weather and bring fair prices. America and baby gladioli are getting better each week. Valley was scarce last week, and the price is high. Orchid sweet peas are poor because of the warm weather, but the common varieties are quite good. Orchids and Sweetheart roses are scarce. Gardenias are good, but there is no demand for them.

Various Notes.

The branch store of W. J. Palmer & Son is showing some early Spanish irises, which are mostly yellow. Their supply of carnations is excellent and large.

The Dale Estate, of Brampton, Ont., is sending some fine orchids, mostly catleyas, and superb valley to this market. The Canadian valley is much finer than any American grown stock, but is more expensive.

W. J. Palmer & Son are going to cut down the store force July 1 because of the dull season. They have had considerable funeral work and large wedding decorations during June.

J. Benson Stafford is going to put in a permanent summer window display this week. It will be a study in green and white, consisting of a landscape setting with fountain and garden seats, etc.

The Colonial Flower Shop reports business good. They are quite busy with funeral work and a few good decorations.

Frank Mahoney is working for his father in Rochester for the summer.

S. A. Anderson has had the entire front of his building painted white, with green trimmings. It makes a clean and cool-looking front. All the signs are done in white on a green background. He had a most seasonable window display last week. It consisted of a pond, edged with logs and cork bark; white pond lilies floated

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

AT THE HEAD OF THE PROCESSION

In the matter of stores—architecture, arrangement and appearance—no line can claim precedence of the florists' trade. So fast are improved stores being erected by members of this profession that no one can be said to lead the rest, but that recently opened by Samuel Murray, at Kansas City, is certainly close to the front.

VERY retailer's pride is his store. Although one man may have advertising as his hobby and the next man a particular service of one kind or another, advertising and service, no matter what kind, are subsidiary to the store.

The successful sellers of flowers are not satisfied with increased sales, larger profits, or the outdistancing of competitors. They are not merely after more money. Their minds are on building up the business, and they have learned that the way to get more out of a business is to put more into it. And the best form of investment for them is an up-to-date store.

Hence the large number of first-class stores that are going up all the time. One does not have to consult building statistics, one has only to read The Review, to know how generally and how constantly the replacing of old stores by improved ones is proceeding.

The New Type.

Although flowers and plants are everyday bread-and-butter to them, florists appreciate their beauty and the fact that it is through their beauty that they appeal to the public at large. They realize, furthermore, that flowers make the strongest impression in the most fitting surroundings. Therefore, the old idea that a counter, an icebox, a supply of wax paper and some folding paper boxes constituted a flower store, no matter where, why or how located and housed, is as dead as the Lawson carnation—and may it rest in peace!

Business for architects has resulted. Florists have turned to them for advice, and found in them a means of carrying out ideas that had occurred in the course of years of business. They have in turn received suggestions, and between florist and architect there have been erected stores that far excel those of any other line of business. The conveniences furnished patrons by the million-dollar department stores do not greatly surpass those of some of the latest florists' establishments. So far as decorations and furnishings are concerned, some of the flower stores are ahead.

A store of particularly excellent appearance is that of Samuel Murray, at 1017 Grand avenue, Kansas City, Mo. Mr. Murray has spent over a quarter of a century in the retail business in Kansas City. His store was located at 1017 Broadway for about twenty years. Then for five years he was at 913 Grand avenue. Now he has a 10-year lease on the property at 1017

Grand avenue, which Mr. Murray says is the best location in town for a florists' shop. In addition to the splendid store, he has the basement under the entire building.

In speaking of the store, Mr. Murray says: "Realizing fully that the greater part of our lives is spent in the shop at work, I am doing all I can to make it beautiful and convenient for those who have been faithful and loyal to me these many years." In this, Mr. Murray has quite succeeded.

The architects began with the idea of an Italian garden, which they considered to be popularly conceded the most charming place in which to see flowers. Their task was, therefore, to put such a garden indoors. An idea of the general result is best gained from the various views of the interior given herewith, as a description of words can only present one detail at a time.

The Walls.

The walls are covered with a 7-foot wainscoting of buff brick. This brick has a rough, rain-washed surface, which, laid with big, gray, rough joints, gives quite the effect of a weather-stained garden wall. Several of the illustrations serve to show how admirably this background sets off the flowers. All around the store, just at the top of the brick wainscoting, was placed a heavy shelf, painted white. How to finish the wall above the wainscoting presented a problem to the architects. After experimenting, they arrived at the present finish, which fits in exceedingly well with the general scheme. The wall was blocked off with wood strips, painted in soft yellows and browns, and sanded with coarse sand while the paint was fresh.

The large show window, which presents a charming view both inside and outside the store, was paved with moss green tiles, laid with $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch joints, and bordered with rough brick. It is flanked by big brick piers, which are capped with ornamental terra-cotta vases. Well placed mirrors enlarge the window in appearance and reflect the flowers in it up and down the street. A good view of the window from the inside appears on this page.

A balcony, with the office below, gave the architects a chance for some Italian detail, which was well carried out. This balcony forms a convenient place for displaying baskets, vases and other material, and creates an effective screen to shut off the working space. The balcony front, overhanging the office, gave opportunity for beamed ceiling and a brick-faced nook.

Effort was made to fit the furniture to the background. As will be seen from the accompanying illustrations, only that is provided which is necessary for convenience and comfort, and each piece is fitted to its place. Even the icebox, which in so many otherwise excellently arranged stores sticks out like a sore thumb, has been brought into harmony with the general scheme. The floor, also in keeping with the surroundings, is mosaic.

The lights are subdued, and spread a soft tone over the room. Everything forms a part of a harmonious whole. As was said at the beginning of this article, the general effect can be better gained through an examination of the several illustrations than through a description of words. It is only to be said in closing that in his search for a fitting home for his flowers, Samuel Murray has been markedly successful.

BEMB'S BRIDAL DECORATION.

A. Pochelon, of the L. Bemb Floral Co., Detroit, was confronted a few days ago with a request from a popular young society couple who were to entertain in honor of friends soon to enter matrimony, to get up a decoration which would be unique.

The members of the party danced until midnight, when they were invited out to tables beautifully set, and decorated in a color scheme of blue and yellow. The tables, which had been made according to Mr. Pochelon's own design, seated 130. In the center was a round table for the bridal party, and encircling were four curved tables for guests, forming a perfect circle and leaving spaces for four entrances, at which palms were arranged.

Benches made for two at all tables were to add a cozy feeling to the festive affair, the benches on the outer four tables being placed so that all the guests faced towards the center, where the bridal party was seated.

A circular bamboo screen, about eight feet high, covered with smilax and Japanese hangers, formed a pretty background. A group of palms and bamboo screens with smilax were gracefully arranged on two sides of the center table.

A cable was laid from the house to supply forty lamps. These lamps each had a Japanese hat for a shade, each shade being held up by a Japanese doll. The bases of the lamps were made into a flower bed of blue and yellow flowers, and there were clusters of the same combinations on the shades.

In the center of the bridal party's table was an opening, out of which arose a gigantic Japanese umbrella covering the whole table, and blue and yellow balloons ready to ascend. On the palms at each side of the bridal table balloons were waving at a height of from ten to thirty feet. A cluster of balloons was held down by a cupid until the time of ascension as a surprise. Japanese baskets were placed on the table, filled with blue and yellow flowers.

The care for details and the accuracy needed for this work placed a heavy demand on both the maker of the plans and those carrying them out.

TWENTY-THREE HAVE SIGNED.

Hugo Mock, president of the National Floral Corporation, New York, states that he has secured representatives in twenty-three cities. The advertising campaign which this concern expects to undertake will not be started until contracts have been signed with retailers in a large number of cities to act as "National Florists," so that the organization for handling mail orders direct may be fairly complete. The twenty-three cities now represented are:

Baltimore, Md.	San Antonio, Tex.
Charleston, S. C.	Pittsfield, Mass.
Anderson, S. C.	New Bedford, Mass.
Brattleboro, Vt.	Fall River, Mass.
Harrisburg, Pa.	Worcester, Mass.
Norfolk, Va.	Newburyport, Mass.
Auburn, N. Y.	Cleveland, O.
Albany, N. Y.	Lima, O.
Fort Dodge, Ia.	Shreveport, La.
Wichita, Kan.	Pueblo, Colo.
Quincy, Ill.	Hartford, Conn.
Waukesha, Wis.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—The trustee in the matter of Ira G. Marvin, bankrupt, has filed a petition to sell at private sale for the sum of $750, to C. C. Garrison, of Pittston, Pa., all the personal property on the premises of the bankrupt, situated at 38 North Main street, Pittston, Pa., and the unexpired term of the lease wherein C. C. Garrison is the lessor; said property consisting of sporting goods, flowers, refrigerator, vases, desk, cash register, fixtures, etc. A hearing on the petition will be held at the office of the referee, 1008 Coal Exchange building, in this city, July 3, at 11 a. m.

PLANS FOR CLEVELAND SHOW.

The trades' exhibit committee of the Cleveland flower show has completed mailing copies of the official floor plan of the Coliseum, where the big fall show is to be held, to the large list of manufacturers and dealers of equipments and supplies, inviting them to participate in the show by becoming trade exhibitors. The plan is a well arranged one, carrying the trade exhibits around the entire four walls of the building and placing the floral display in the center. There being no balconies in the building, it means that all spaces are good locations.

It is interesting to learn how easily the Cleveland Florists' Club raised its half of the $12,000 guarantee fund for this show. The committee set aside one day, June 15, to secure the necessary subscriptions. When the committees reported at the close of the day, the total was nearly $7,000 and since then it has increased to nearly $7,500, which is about $1,500 more than the amount the club set out to obtain. The balance of the guarantee is covered by the Ohio Horticultural Society.

Samuel Murray's Window is an Attraction from Every Point of View.

The Icebox Conforms to the Architectural Plan of Samuel Murray's New Store.

This active, enthusiastic support, representing practically 100 per cent of all the dealers and growers in and around Cleveland, indicates that the show will be a successful one. The Cleveland committee at this early date is figuring on a large attendance of out-of-town visitors.

THEY SHOULD BE REPOTTED.

I have a fine collection of begonias and geraniums that have not been repotted this spring on account of so much rain and cool weather. Will these do as well for winter for house culture if not repotted? Can I use bone meal with advantage? If so, how much should be used in pots from 6-inch up to 8-inch, and how often should it be used to keep the plants in good blooming condition? I have no soil prepared, but could possibly procure enough for my begonias, at least. The plants are in fine condition now.

J. S. F.—Ill.

While it is quite possible to carry both begonias and geraniums over winter without doing any repotting, I would certainly advise you to give them at least a small shift. While these plants, particularly the geraniums, will appreciate some bone meal, I think you should, even now, repot them. I presume you are growing the fibrous-rooted begonias. Some of these are of vigorous habit, and if in pots of considerable size now, could be fed with weak liquid manure once a week. You will also find black soot, secured from soft coal, a good fertilizer, especially for the begonias.

Do not use any bone in the soil for the begonias. Instead get, if you can, some old cow manure or pulverized sheep manure, also some leaf-mold. Two-thirds of the compost should be fibrous loam. For geraniums you can use loam with some bone added, at the rate of a heaping 4-inch potful to a bushel of soil. Bone as a top-dressing for geraniums is good.

TEXAS HAS LIVE WIRE.

Robert C. Kerr, president of the Texas State Florists' Association, certainly is what, in the phrase of the day, is known as a live wire. For months he has been boosting next week's convention at Fort Worth and recently he sent an inquiry to a member in each important city of the state to ascertain what the attendance is likely to be. The following extracts from the replies show how effective this work has been:

After a canvass of the florists of Houston, I find that all but two will be in attendance at Ft. Worth.—Paul M. Carroll.

I have talked to the florists of San Antonio. They are all enthusiastic about the Ft. Worth convention and ninety per cent of them will be on hand.—F. C. Suchy.

I phoned all the florists of Austin; every one, to a single man, says he is planning to go to the convention.—Chas. Alf, Jr.

I hope there will be no big business in Waco during convention week, for every florist and most of the employees are planning big on the convention.—T. J. Wolfe.

Sherman florists and nurserymen will be at the convention with bells on.—A. F. Koehle.

Galveston florists are going to lock up shops July 6 and 7, for they certainly expect to attend the Ft. Worth convention.—Mrs. M. A. Hansen.

Alvin is a small town, but, believe me, we will make a large showing at the Ft. Worth convention. I think every florist is going.—Mrs. J. W. Carlisle.

The florists of Corsicana are anticipating a fine time at Ft. Worth.—Wm. Clowe.

Denison florists will be in Ft. Worth during the convention.—Miss Allie Bird.

The Dallas Florists' Club will go to the convention in a special interurban car. I know of no one who expects to stay at home. I will bring four employees besides myself.—Otto Lang.

It is a long jump from El Paso to Ft. Worth, but we feel the trip and expense worth while. Count on a good delegation from El Paso.—Pat-ten Floral Co.

Everything is in readiness for the convention. I have had notice of shipments of many exhibits. Convention hall is in shape and ready for staging. The Florists' Club has completed all details. The Chamber of Commerce and merchants of the city are going to cooperate to the fullest extent. Everything looks bright for a grand time.—W. J. Baker, Fort Worth.

PESTS ON GARDEN ROSE BUSH.

I enclose herewith a curiosity from one of my garden rose bushes. Upon opening a similar bunch from the same bush, I found a small white worm inside and have burned it. Can you inform me what is the cause and remedy? The affected bush is close to a Boston ivy vine, but some little distance from any other rose. F. G.—Ill.

This abortive growth is certainly a curiosity and is only occasionally seen. As there is no caterpillar or other insect enclosed, I am unable to say what the trouble-maker is. A spraying of arsenate of lead, one pound to ten gallons of water, will effectually clean out these and any similar pests. C. W.

YOUNG PLANTS WHEN RESTING.

I should like to have your advice on how to handle my roses. When is the best time to give them a rest and how long should I let them rest? Would it be best to let them stay in the bench after they have rested, giving them a good top-dressing before starting them again, or to rebench them? I had an unfortunate experience some years ago with roses that I rebenched; nearly all of them died.

The roses I am now speaking about are young plants which I benched last July from 3-inch pots. Last winter they did not seem to make much root growth for some reason; yet I got a considerable number of flowers from them. They averaged from nine to twelve flowers per plant. If you advise me to leave them in the same bench for another season, after they rest, how shall I top-dress them? I shall greatly appreciate your advice. W. J. H.—Kan.

The best way to treat these plants would be to leave them where they are. Keep the water off for two or three weeks, no longer. After giving them several good waterings, to saturate the soil thoroughly, scrape off about two inches of the top soil. Then give them a top-dressing of bone meal, about one pound to five square feet of bench space, and on top of this place a good layer of compost consisting of two parts of good, clayey loam and one part of manure, preferably cattle manure. Next give them another thorough watering, so as to pack the soil well and combine the new compost with the old. After that dampen down the plants on clear days until they have started to make new growth, when they should be treated the same as usual.

As these plants have not done much so far, they will need only a little trimming at the time they are rested. Merely trim out any weak shoots and cut the longer ones back to three or four good eyes.

Plants that are only 1 year old, and have not made a great deal of growth during the year, are often run over the second year without resting, and with good success. In that case take off the top soil, as already directed, and give them a top-dressing of bone meal and fresh soil, but trim out only any weak or dead wood around the bottom of the stems, leaving on all the top growth. In this way you can keep cutting flowers all through the year. W. J. K.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Asters.

From the earliest sowings of Early Wonder and Queen of the Market, buds are well advanced and some flowers will be open by the middle of July. With the passing of carnations, these asters will prove especially valuable and, in order to have them of the best possible quality, the cultivator or hoe should be in almost constant use among them, pulling out all weeds of large size by hand. Recent thunder showers have wonderfully improved asters, but it is astonishing how much drought they will stand if the soil about them is kept frequently stirred.

It is somewhat late to make any additional sowings of asters unless the protection of coldframes can be afforded them, but late asters do not pay, as there are usually early in October numbers of chrysanthemums on sale. Take advantage of cool, cloudy and moist weather to plant out late batches. If such weather conditions do not exist, lift them with a nice ball, water after planting, later stir the soil well about them and they are tolerably certain to do well.

Gladioli.

If there are any left-over gladiolus bulbs they should be planted without delay. Dig out a trench six inches deep and, if the soil is quite dry, pour enough water over them to wet the soil about them. They will then start

WORMS IN ROSE SHOOTS.

Will you please give us some information in regard to a small worm that is working on our roses? The worm is about half an inch long, light in color at each end and dark at the center. It bores into the stems of the soft shoots, then goes down through the center of the shoots and the shoots die. The only plants on which we have found them are Hoosier Beauty and Ophelia, and these are in stock that we bought. We shall greatly appreciate it if you can tell us how to get rid of these worms. W. F. & S.—Ind.

The worms referred to usually attack the young, soft shoots, boring along the center and eating the soft part. The first sign of their presence is the wilting of the affected shoots. They seem to attack Beauties more than any other roses, though I have found them on Killarneys at times. So far as I know, these worms have never done any great damage and therefore we have not heard much about them, but if they should ever become a serious menace they would be difficult to fight, for they attack the plants in a place where neither poison nor fumigation would have much effect on them. The only remedy or preventive that I know of, is to cut off all affected shoots as soon as noticed and burn them. As they probably lay their eggs in the cavities, this would prevent them from multiplying to any great extent. W. J. K.

much earlier. Always cover gladioli five to six inches deep. If planted shallow, the plants are sure to fall over with every wind and heavy rain. The earliest batch set out from pots is now giving some fine spikes. We find it pays well to start a few hundreds in this way. Sometimes these will give spikes fit to cut early in June, and their quality is much superior to those grown under glass.

Sweet Williams.

Sweet williams are rather stiff but easily grown, fragrant and excellent plants for the hardy garden. An old-fashioned garden is not complete without them. Seed sowing must not be put off any longer if strong clumps are desired. When transplanted to the field, place the seedlings a foot apart in the rows. They make most of their growth from August 1 to October 10. The auricula-eyed sweet williams are great favorites in Europe, but are not much seen here. There are some good self-colored varieties, of which Pink Beauty is fine for massing. Even a mixed bed is effective. While sweet williams can be treated as perennials, it is more satisfactory to sow each season and discard after one flower crop.

Marion, Ia.—Mrs. L. W. Alt has a good business in bulbs and perennials in addition to her cut flower trade.

BRITISH BAR BELGIAN PLANTS

Embargo by British authorities, placed on all shipments from German-held Belgium, will prevent the importation of azaleas

OT alone those importers who each year handle Belgian azaleas, palms, bay trees, araucarias, spiræas, rhododendrons, etc., by the thousands, but florists in practically every city in the country, have viewed with concern the attitude assumed by Great Britain toward shipments of plants from the beleaguered nation of Europe. The first stirring of alarm came when Great Britain declared, in following out her "starvation" policy, that she would observe shipments originating in Belgium in the same light as those coming from Germany. The same ban that had been laid upon the German shipments that were making their way to this country through the neutral ports of Europe, notably Rotterdam, was placed upon Belgian products, which had hitherto found unobstructed egress through the Netherland metropolis.

British View.

Great Britain held that the commerce in these articles was of as great benefit to her enemy as was that in distinctively German goods. Although the American money, or credit, that went to pay for the Belgian products was ostensibly for the pockets of the Belgian producer, the fact was, declared British authorities, that it went into German coffers, either directly or indirectly.

The order in council of March 11, which virtually declared the continent of Europe to be in a state of blockade, was, therefore, applicable to Belgian as well as German products. So strong, however, was the protest from the United States to this blockade, that Great Britain wavered in her determination. She allowed goods already paid for by American importers to proceed on their way to the purchasers. A number of exceptions were made to the prohibition of Great Britain, and a number of distinctions drawn. From these, florists of the country drew hope that the embargo was virtually withdrawn on lines they imported from Belgium.

Then Great Britain assumed a stricter position with regard to continental exports. June 15 was set as the last date on which American-owned goods of enemy origin might be shipped from Rotterdam and similar ports.

The question became, what Belgian products are not of enemy origin? This the British answered for United States inquirers by stating that they were those produced by Belgian people in that part of Belgium not occupied by nations at war with Great Britain, and, conversely, that those originating in the part of Belgium occupied by German forces were regarded as of German origin and therefore subject to action is for benefit Belgians to exclusion of German advantage, permission will be granted."

Three days later, however, the consul general at London cabled that "authorities decided to consult cabinet respecting exports from Belgium, and will not decide particular questions until cabinet acts."

Britain Bolts Door.

The daily papers of June 25 gave to the public the memorandum from Great Britain on the blockade, from which the extracts on this page are taken. In this, the British authorities stated their intention of maintaining the blockade and the embargo. Under the circumstances, this means that the door is closed on Belgian plants.

The circumstances are that the plants that the florists of this country want for next Christmas and for next Easter are grown in the vicinity of Ghent, which is well within the German lines. Since this territory is occupied by Germany, it will be difficult, if at all possible, for the trade to procure its annual supply of azaleas next fall. According to British logic, what is of gain to the Belgians in this territory is likewise of gain to Germany, the enemy. Palms, araucarias, bay trees, tuberous-rooted begonias, rhododendrons, spiræas, azaleas, and the other plants imported by the florists of the United States by the thousands each year, will be lacking this coming season if the embargo is not raised.

The leading importers of the country are working diligently through the Department of State at Washington in an endeavor to gain the admission of the plants so much needed by the trade. More than 1,000 dealers in foreign goods and more than 100,000 stores in the United States have petitioned Secretary Lansing and, through him, President Wilson, to obtain release of the embargo. Among the busiest of the number are members of this trade and

FROM BRITISH NOTE OF JUNE 24.

"In deference to the express desire of the United States government, arrangements were made toward the end of March whereby United States citizens who might desire to import goods of German origin via a neutral port were enabled to produce proof of payment to his majesty's embassy at Washington.

"When it became apparent that large quantities of enemy goods were still passing out through neutral countries, his majesty's government felt it necessary to fix a definite date after which such shipments must cease to enjoy the special immunity, theretofore granted, from liability to being placed in the prize court.

"June 1 was accordingly fixed as the date after which the privilege allowed in the case of such shipments should cease; but once more a special favor was granted by extending the date in exceptional cases to June 15.

"His majesty's government regret they cannot continue to deal through the diplomatic channel with individual cases, but they would again point out that special provision is made for the consideration of such cases in the prize court."

the provisions of the order in council of March 11. The state department advises The Review that when the matter was taken up with the American consul general in London, he cabled the department at Washington as follows:

"Goods originating Belgium are presumptively enemy origin, and it lies upon those interested to prove that Germany would not profit from intended operation. In practice this is difficult to prove, as Belgium representatives not in position to ascertain material facts. Am assured each case will be considered upon merits, and whenever it can be demonstrated that trans-of firms supplying this trade. The State Department is now engaged in constant communication informally with British authorities with the object of securing the unhindered transportation of European products to this country, so that the commercial conditions of the nation may not be further upset. What the outcome will be, no one can surely tell, and prophecy is only guesswork. Work and wait, is the motto of the importers and florists.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

ADIANTUMS IN THE SOUTH.

Propagation and General Culture.

The varieties of adiantum most commonly grown in the south are A. Croomianum, A. hybridum and, in certain localities, A. magnificum. The two former varieties are grown both for pot plants and cut fronds. They grow only slowly during the summer months. The best place for the small plants is in a well shaded coldframe. Larger plants that have seen service during the winter do best if placed on a shady table and given just enough water to keep the crowns alive. When the nights get cooler, in August or September, they can be shaken out, repotted and started growing again, using some leaf-mold and some old, pulverized cow manure in the compost. A night temperature of 60 degrees in winter suits these varieties well. When well established they require some extra feeding and I find a good top-dressing of sheep manure suits their requirements better than anything else.

A. magnificum makes a remarkably fine pot specimen and lasts well in a house. It is a shallow rooter and does well in ordinary seed pans. Plants in small pots are useful for fern dishes. The tops seem to flourish, no matter how the roots are cut or maltreated. A few plants set out on a shallow bench will give plenty of crowns to be divided. It is not particular as to temperature, 55 degrees at night suiting it as well as any other.

The best method of propagating A. hybridum seems not to be generally understood in the south. It does not come from seed, and old crowns divided do not make compact plants in small pots. The best way is to take a few old plants, cut off the fronds and punch out the center crowns. Knock out of pots and place the plants on their sides in a sash-covered frame in the greenhouse. Water with a can or a fine spray from the hose. The young plants will appear in quantity all over the ball of each plant and when big enough can be pricked off into boxes and grown on. These make stocky little plants, away ahead of the leggy samples obtained from divisions of old crowns.

Adiantum Farleyense.

Adiantum Farleyense succeeds well in the south when its needs are understood. The right location in the greenhouse is just as important as the right compost for potting. Little top ventilation is needed, but there should be plenty of side ventilation, if possible, below the level of the benches. The doors also can be left open. The walks will have to be kept well dampened down. If the plants show the least tendency to wilt at midday, a gentle dew from the hose will soon straighten them up.

The old Farleyense crowns are divided in late fall or early winter, potted in small pots and plunged to the rim on a lightly shaded table near the glass. A little bottom heat is a great help in starting them off. The night temperature of the house should run about 65 degrees, with the usual rise in the daytime. The best soil mixture at this time is one-half sandy loam and one-half leaf-mold, with a few small pieces of charcoal at the bottom of each pot for drainage. Avoid overwatering, but maintain a nice, moist condition.

The plants may not be ready for a shift for twelve weeks or more, but after being shifted they grow quickly enough. The compost may be increased in strength at each shift, by gradually adding a little rotted cow manure, but see that it is always sifted and made porous by the use of leaf-mold or sand. This variety grows naturally on a lime rock formation, and if any old lime plaster is available, a few pieces at the bottom of each pot seem to give tone to the plants. They require plenty of room when growing, and when in 4-inch pots or over they should be stood on inverted pots to keep the foliage clean.

Each Farleyense plant must be watered according to its individual needs, using a small stream from the hose. Avoid water on the foliage except in case of a midday wilt, as before mentioned. When established finally they can be given a liquid manure watering once a week. This variety, when properly cared for, will make a fine 8-inch pot specimen in one season. L.

HYACINTHS FOR EXHIBITION.

Will you kindly inform me what are the finest and largest flowering hyacinths for exhibition purposes? I want all colors. Do you advise planting three bulbs in a pot?

W. H. Q.—N. Y.

The following are splendid exhibition hyacinths of their respective colors: Single pink—Charles Dickens, Moreno, Queen of the Pinks; single red—Roi des Belges, La Victoire; single white—La Grandesse, Mme. Van der Hoop, Grand Vainquer; single blue—Enchantress, Queen of the Blues, King of the Blues; single yellow—Yellow Hammer. If doubles are wanted, the following are fine: Pink—Lord Wellington; white—Double La Grandesse; blue—Blokberg or Lord Raglan; yellow—Goethe.

Hyacinths do particularly well in deep pans, commonly called half pots. One bulb can be grown in a 5-inch pot or pan, three in a 7-inch pot, six in a 10-inch pot and ten in a 12-inch pot. This is for bulbs of the best exhibition quality. C. W.

EARLY HOUSING OF PLANTS.

Getting the Beds Ready.

You are perhaps not yet ready to start refilling your carnation beds for next year. If you grow roses, mums and a general line of retailers' stock, you will, of course, want to get the roses and mums planted before you commence on the carnation beds, and rightly so. For this reason and because you will have plenty of work to keep all hands busy, it might be well to consider the advisability of eliminating those beds that can be spared from this time on, either on account of unprofitableness or overproduction at a time when business is on the wane. To keep a bed properly watered in June and July requires considerable time, and unless a fair quantity of blooms is cut and disposed of, it might not pay to keep the plants going. If you have any such beds, do not let them dry up, as is sometimes done, but pull out the plants and clean off the beds, even if you cannot take out the soil right away.

There is perhaps nothing that breeds insects and disease as does a bed of old plants that are overgrown with weeds. Red spider and thrips fairly revel in such conditions.

Early Planting Pays.

Many of the carnation specialists begin getting at least a part of the beds ready for replanting soon after Memorial day, with a view to finishing their planting as early in July as possible. Where only a house or two are planted, there is, of course, no need of such hurry to get started, but, specialist or no specialist, in either case early planting pays, and the first part of August should see every plant in its winter quarters. It may not mean a great difference in the number of blooms cut during the season, whether the plants are benched in July or in late August or early September, but there will be a great difference in the quality of the blooms and in the steadiness of the cut during the season and both of these advantages cut a good figure when you count up the returns at the end of the season.

Early benching does not necessarily mean heavy fall cuts. You can, in fact, gauge the fall cuts better on early benched plants than on the late ones, without affecting the winter cuts adversely. We consider it a benefit to the plants if they can be topped for some time after being benched. It helps the plants to get established and, if the topping is done regularly, it will promote a steady winter crop.

The Idea of a Rustic Garden of Italian Design Has Worked Out Admirably in Samuel Murray's New Store.

THE SALT SPRAY FOR SPIDER.

In a recent issue of The Review, Mr. Baur mentioned a method of keeping spider down on carnations by spraying them with salt. I should like to know how strong a solution of salt water to use, also what is the best machine to spray with, when to spray, how many plants a gallon of the solution should cover, and how soon afterward the plants should be sprayed with fresh water. I should like to try this method at once, as I have a fine crop of flowers and some spider.

W. C. P.—N. J.

Salt has been recognized for years as an excellent remedy for red spider, especially for use on carnations. The carnation likes salt and an occasional spraying is appreciated, even if there is no spider to be destroyed. Recognizing these facts, we sought an economical method of application, and after considerable study designed the appliance we are now using. It is now being manufactured and marketed by the John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind.

Instead of using the ordinary barrel salt, as we did formerly, we use rock salt. We find that if we fill the magazine with as large pieces as possible, the water in passing through will take up just enough of the salt to be effective. If the salt is broken into small bits, the dissolution will be more rapid, which is not desirable. We do not wash it off with clear water, but prefer to let it remain on the plants, as it is not harmful to the plants in the least. We spray with this salt solution once each week, throughout the season, and find it quite beneficial in preventing spider. To get rid of a bad attack, it would be advisable to spray at least twice weekly for a time.

THE GARDEN FLEE HOPPER.

I am sending you in separate cover some bugs which look like small black spiders; they are camping on the carnations indoors. Enclosed, also, are a few leaves, to show how the pests ruin them. I have been unable to get them classified in this state and shall be grateful if you can get a "bugologist" to tell me something about them. They generally appear here about September 1, and by November 1 they are gone. This is the first time we have seen them in the spring, but they are here in armies and they beat red spider for destructiveness. Tobacco extracts do not hurt them in the least. As it is near the end of the season, I am going to try them with Paris green. They are pretty lively boys, so watch that they do not escape when you open the bottle. I hope they will be alive on arrival. I shall be glad to have all the information possible about them.

R. L.—N. C.

Our state entomologist has classified the insects submitted and calls them garden flea hoppers. If you will send for the twenty-seventh report of the Illinois State Entomologist, you will find the insects described on pages 113 and 114. The remedy recommended is kerosene emulsion or any of the tobacco extracts, with soap added to make it stick. The nicotine should be applied in somewhat stronger doses than you use ordinarily for spraying your carnations. Inasmuch as they are destroyed by contact, several applications may be required to rid the place of them.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

WE AGREE TO IT ALL.

I want to say that The Review is an extremely handy paper for every florist to have within reach, as it contains offers of practically everything used in the trade, but it would be fine if something could be done to make some of the advertisers give more prompt attention to the orders they receive. I believe it to be the duty of every advertiser, when he receives an order, either to ship at once or to reply, stating when shipment will be made—and then to keep his word. It is extremely exasperating to send an order for stock that is needed at once and to receive no word for days and perhaps weeks. The neglect is still less excusable when a check is enclosed with the order.

H. J. Peterson.

CHANGE OF SOIL FOR PEONIES.

In a recent issue of The Review a correspondent stated that peonies would do well if replanted on the same ground after dividing. My experience is to the contrary. The peony in growing throws off poisonous excreta which make it desirable to change the soil. I think the ground should not be used again for three years. If one has a bed which it is desirable to keep in the same position, the soil can be dug out to the depth of one foot or more and replaced with soil from another part of the garden. In this way a bed can be kept in the same place. In field culture rotation is much better.

Most, if not all, of the root-gall on peonies came out of Lemoine's nursery, at Nancy, France. He had only about two acres of ground, all told, and in it for years he planted, over and over again, peonies and shrubs and gladioli in the most intensive cultivation. It really was a curse to the peony roots. I understand that certain nurserymen have practiced the Lemoine method and planted peonies over and over again for twenty-five years in the same ground. This, if true, is a wonderful exception, provided the roots have been kept free from disease.

The experience of A. Dessert, in France, is the same as mine, and his advice is similar to what I have given here.

AMERICANS FOR AMERICA.

I have just read in The Review for June 17 of the need of basket willow growing in this country. There is a good place near here where a considerable quantity of willow might be grown if the cuttings could be obtained. [The Department of Agriculture, through the forest service, distributes willow cuttings, and has a pamphlet on their culture.—Ed.]

The war in Europe is opening the eyes of our people and showing us scores of new opportunities, both for producers and inventors. I believe in American independence to the utmost, and now that the opportunity is ours, it is clearly the duty of every citizen of this country to see that it is not let slip, and that every gain or advantage made possible by this means shall add to American supremacy.

We doubtless, in the vast extent of our territory, can produce nearly every article that has heretofore been imported, if the matter is only taken up and a proper effort made to produce the goods.

I believe that the opportunity for florists and others who depend on some crop is of especial interest and that we as a body have a large duty before us in producing the final results. Let "Americans for America," first, last and always, be our motto, and let everyone see that no time is lost in grasping every opportunity offered.

E. H. HITCHCOCK IN TROUBLE.

Those who had had business dealings with E. H. Hitchcock, while he was located in Michigan and later, will be interested in the following from a Massachusetts newspaper:

"Captain Philip Perron, of the North Adams police, yesterday morning arrested Edward H. Hitchcock as he stepped from a western train in North Adams with Kate Morgan Dunn, of Clarksburg. Hitchcock is wanted in Cassopolis, Mich., on a charge of misconduct.

"When the man was searched at the police station, it was found that on his person he carried two 32-caliber revolvers and a knife, and in his dress suit case he carried a Winchester magazine rifle fully loaded, a large hatchet and more than 500 rounds of ammunition for rifle and revolvers. There was also a belt filled with 38-caliber bullets. Hitchcock was, up until last December, engaged in the fern business in Clarksburg.

"When being searched at the police station he tried to reach his hip pocket, apparently with the intention of drawing a revolver and shooting Officer Perron, but was prevented by another officer and the 'gun' taken from him."

SPELTER PRICES HIT TRADE.

Did you ever give consideration to the wonderful interrelationship between the flower business and other lines? The way one trade is affected by another is an interesting study.

For instance, can you see how the need for ammunition in Russia affects the cost of posts for greenhouses in America? Or buckets for peonies in cold storage? Well, it does. This is how.

The shrapnel shells that American factories are turning out in such large numbers for the Allies are two-thirds copper and one-third spelter. Spelter, of course, is the metal trade's name for zinc. Zinc is used for galvanizing iron—pipe for posts, sheets in buckets, vases and wire for rose stakes, to mention just a few places where war's demand for shells hits florists.

The price of spelter has gone up nearly 300 per cent in the last three months. Before the Kaiser got busy spelter was 6 cents to 7 cents per pound; today it is 20 cents to 25 cents per pound and the market is such that no man knows what the price will be tomorrow. Of course the advance in the price of the galvanized articles is out of proportion to the advance in the cost of the material for galvanizing—manufacturers always make a widely advertised advance in their costs the excuse for a boost in prices that puts them to the good on the deal.

The market price of lead has practically doubled in the month of June, so it is natural to expect an advance in tinfoil.

PROF. DORNER WEDS.

It is reported at Chicago that H. B. Dorner was married in Kentucky, June 29, his bride being a former student in the University of Illinois, at Champaign. Mr. Dorner is widely known in the trade, as the youngest son of the late Fred Dorner, of La Fayette, Ind., as an ex-secretary of the S. A. F., and as professor of floriculture in the College of Agriculture at the Illinois state university where he also has charge of the greenhouses for floricultural research conducted by the state, under the direction of an advisory committee of the Illinois State Florists' Association.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

George Basler, Black Rock, N. Y., says " 'twas in '49 on a summer night when he first saw the light of day," and one of the strongest impressions in his early career was received in the gardens of a relative of Count Zeppelin, which decided his future career. He has the first house built by the King Construction Co., and others of later design, all upon concrete foundations. He has a snug business and takes pride in being a Review honor-roller.

The Thos. Mansfield Estate, Lockport, N. Y., has had a good season. The double pink geranium that originated here leads the call in bedding stock.

Fred G. Lewis, Lockport, is of the opinion that, had the weather not been so cold, the demand would have been beyond normal. As it was, he has no kick to register.

W. A. Wettlin, Hornell, N. Y., has part of his farm planted to flowering stock for store use. He has given up the growing of cut flowers, devoting the houses to a few specialties such as cyclamens and primroses. Special sales on Saturdays are a success.

A. H. Woepel, Corning, N. Y., says his Ford forded him over the busy season in fine shape and the end is not yet in sight.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

As anticipated, the rush is at an end. Shipments have decreased and prices have improved. For several weeks conditions have seemed hopeless, but there is a bottom to everything and the worst is over. Even in midsummer, we do not anticipate so demoralized a market.

The rose supply last week was ample for the demand, but there was no surplus to be sacrificed. American Beauties were well worth $20 per hundred for the selected, and there is no oversupply of the first quality. A good many short-stemmed and inferior roses of all kinds are in the market. The novelties bring fair prices and are not abundant. Hadley is the best of the new varieties. Ophelia grows in popularity, and the intense coloring of Hoosier Beauty appeals to many. Prices will be steady for some time because of the general scarcity, and there will be few roses sold again under $5 per thousand until the midsummer heat arrives to stay.

The same may be said of carnations. Prices June 26 ranged from 50 cents to $1.50 per hundred. The higher price is only obtainable for the best blooms. The shipments of carnations are rapidly diminishing.

There has been no change in the orchid quotations. A few superior Cattleya gigas touched $25 per hundred June 26, but every wholesaler was offering good flowers in size and quality at $20 per hundred. A few peonies are still arriving, but most of the stock comes from cold storage. Longiflorums are abundant still, but there has been a slight advance in price, selected flowers touching $3 per hundred as the week ended. A good many thousands have been lost in June. There is more valley than the market has been able to absorb, and values are low for the month of weddings and graduations. The sweet pea supply is large and improving, especially the Spencer varieties. There is the usual quantity of gladioli, iris, daisies, calendulas and the regular shipments of outdoor flowers, with plenty of sprays and bunches of Dorothy Perkins and Crimson Rambler. Adiantum is a drug in the market.

Various Notes.

June 26 and 27 the Horticultural Society of New York held an exhibition of outdoor roses, iris, sweet peas, etc. A meeting of the council of the Horticultural Society was held in the Museum building, followed by a meeting of the society and a lecture by Geo. V. Nash on "The Upper Delaware Valley and Its Flora." R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., attended the exhibition and conferred with the society as to the holding of the dahlia show in September at the Museum of Natural History.

J. V. Phillips, of Brooklyn, is at Bay Shore for the summer. The firm had a large wedding, the Chapman-Marsten, at Islip June 26. In the decorations over 10,000 daisies were used, and in the bride's bouquet over 700 valley. M. L. Thorpe, head salesman for Mr. Phillips, whose wife died of diphtheria in April, has just returned to the store after seven weeks' stay in the hospital with scarlet fever.

Burnett Bros. report a large demand for strawberry plants.

Barney Jacobs, salesman for Walter

Siebrecht, was married Sunday, June 27, to Miss Bertha Blackman, of Atlantic City.

President Harry A. Bunyard, of the New York Florists' Club, has appointed the following nominating committee to select candidates for office for 1916: Joseph A. Manda, chairman; John Donaldson, Walter F. Sheridan, Frank H. Traendly, Charles H. Totty, Charles B. Weathered and Charles Weber.

A. L. Young & Co. have incorporated, with a capital stock of $25,000, the members of the firm being A. L. Young, Herman Scomodan and Fred. Lightfoot.

Wm. Plumb will make 53 West Twenty-eighth street his headquarters until September, when he returns to Cuba.

The stork brought another boy to Mr. and Mrs. MacNiff June 27.

The board of the American Dahlia Society, President Vincent, of White Marsh, in the chair, held a meeting here the other day, and later with the council of the Horticultural Society at the Bronx. It was decided to try to secure the Museum of Natural History for the show September 23 to 25, for which a preliminary premium list was approved.

James Scott, of Scott Bros., Elmsford, is in the lecture field and busy instructing the society ladies of the garden clubs.

His New York friends are receiving notices in the papers of Oklahoma City announcing the admission to the bar of S. S. Butterfield. At the age of 56, this is no small achievement and all his old friends wish him great success.

June 29 the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association held its regular meeting at the secretary's office in Long Island City and after the meeting proceeded to Coney Island in automobiles and enjoyed a banquet at Feltman's. The annual outing of this society next month is likely to include a boat trip up the Hudson.

Samuel Stone, of 359 Jay street, Brooklyn, was married June 2.

The outing of the Greek-American florists takes place next Wednesday, July 7, at Witzel's grove, College Point, L. I., by steamer Atlas, leaving the dock at East Twenty-third street at 10:30 a. m.

June 25 the plant auctions closed for the season. The MacNiff Horticultural Co. says it was more than double in volume that of 1914.

The New York Florist Supply Co. is busy in the erection of its new building, on West Twenty-eighth street.

L. J. Kervan is enjoying a week's outing and rest in Connecticut.

Mr. and Mrs. William Kessler have returned from a two weeks' stay in the mountains.

The Brooklyn Wholesale Cut Flower Market sold 100,000 roses and carnations last week in the retail department.

C. Bonnet, of Bonnet & Blake, is making a record as a fisher of black bass on his weekly outings. Mr. Blake, of this firm, will go to Rochester, N. Y., with Mrs. Blake for a month's vacation.

W. H. Kuebler contemplates a trip to San Francisco. The number booked for the trip from New York is now fifteen.

Victor Warendorff has returned with glowing accounts of his western travels and his visit to the Pan-American exposition.

David Clarke's Sons, Young & Nugent and Thorley have announced their Sunday closing. J. Austin Shaw.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The market last week was full of good stock; plenty of peonies in cold storage, greenhouse-grown gladioli, lilies, sweet peas, roses and carnations. Valley was in good supply, but the demand cleaned it up daily. Water lilies are received daily.

Various Notes.

The float of Knoble Bros. took second prize in the West Side Market parade, June 23. It was decorated with pink and white peonies and Beauties and was one of the sensations of the parade.

M. A. Vinson was in Detroit last week, attending the convention of the American Association of Nurserymen. He went there to boost the big Cleveland flower show to be held November 10 to 14.

The Florists' Club's picnic will be held at Willow beach sometime in July. The exact date has not been set. It was decided, at the last meeting of the club, that those who are to participate in the ball game between the wholesalers and retailers must be members of the club. All other events, such as the tug-of-war, foot races, etc., will be open to all. The next meeting of the club, which was to be held July 5, has been postponed to July 12.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. is busy shipping tile from the old greenhouses on Edgely road to the new plant at Newton Falls, O. This tile was made by the Camp Conduit Co. especially for benches and has been in use at the old plant for ten years, but is almost as good as new.

Walter Mott was a recent visitor. F. A. F.

DETROIT.

Various Notes.

Breitmeyer's staff were exceedingly busy last week with the work for the Warren-Sheldon wedding. This was the big event of the season and it is understood that the cost runs well into four figures. The decorations were elaborate in both church and home, and numerous dinners and receptions for the bridal couple, given before the wedding, also called for thousands of flowers. Breitmeyer's had the cream of the orders.

Ground was broken the first part of last week on the new home of Fetter's Flowers, on Woodward avenue just north of the boulevard. Mr. Fetter's hopes to have the store completed before the holidays. The plans for the building are elaborate and when finished it will undoubtedly be one of the show places on the avenue.

Hugo Schroeter acquired the interest of Albert J. Stahelin in the Schroeter-Stahelin Co., June 22, and hereafter the business will be conducted in Hugo Schroeter's name only.

M. A. Vinson, of Cleveland, was a visitor during the week of the nurserymen's convention, his business being the boosting of the Cleveland flower show. Announcements of the show, to be held November 10 to 14, were visible both in the convention hall and in the lobby of the Cadillac hotel. All convention attendants were invited to attend the show. Mr. Vinson also called upon a number of the trade locally and many promised to visit Cleveland next November.

A number of Detroit florists and friends went on a fishing trip June 25 and many are the fish stories, some true and some otherwise, which are now going the rounds.

Among the visitors were C. Winterich, of Defiance, O., and J. L. Schiller, of Toledo, who motored here for the outing. H. S.

IRVINGTON, N. J.

R. Plebarny, grower at 204 Union avenue, reports that the spring business was first-class. He is now cutting beautiful outdoor sweet peas. He has planted 22,000 chrysanthemums for the fall trade. During the summer Mr. Plebarny will build an additional greenhouse, 32x100 feet. The work will be done by Hitchings & Co., of Elizabeth, N. J.

C. W. Stoner, who bought out the business at 143 Union avenue a couple of years ago, is gradually working up the business to larger proportions. The spring trade this year was ahead of last year, though not up to what it probably would have been had general business conditions been better.

William Hass, grower at Chancellor avenue and Fortieth street, reports that business is quiet. He is now planting for the fall and Christmas trade. He has a fine lot of outdoor sweet peas.

Last week William Gahr, on Fortieth street, began planting chrysanthemums and ferns for the fall trade.

Edward Jacobi had a fine spring trade, exceeding that of a year ago. He is now planting for the fall trade. R. B. M.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Local florists have been busy for some time with bedding work. Trade has been exceptionally lively along this line. The cut flower business also has been holding its own. Prices in general are now becoming lower. Good Poitevine geraniums have been scarce and the demand has been strong.

Various Notes.

Peter Murray, of Fairhaven, has added another automobile to his delivery equipment.

The Peckham Floral Co., of Fairhaven, reports an exceedingly busy season, both locally and out of town.

Henry J. Walsh, formerly employed by the Kingston Gardeners, of Kingston, Mass., has entered the employ of S. E. Shaw, on Kempton street, in this city.

Wm. E. Mosher has been doing a big business in the filling of piazza boxes.

Post & Gray are busy, as usual. They report an excellent demand for geraniums. Wm. M. Post recently spent a few days in New York, combining business and pleasure on his trip.

The New Bedford Horticultural Society held its annual peony show in the Public Library building, June 17. It was a beautiful and instructive exhibition. Wonderful collections of peonies were shown by Col. H. E. Converse, of Marion, Mass., and by Wm. F. Turner, of New Bedford. Galen Stone, of Marion, Mass., showed a splendid collection of gloxinias. L. J. Hathaway captured the honors for the best collection of Spanish iris. Frank Tripp had the best twelve peonies. W. M. P.

NORTH MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Having seen in the Milwaukee newsletter in The Review of June 17 the report with reference to N. Zweifel selling out, I wish to add a few more particulars. Grunwaldt Bros., who took over Mr. Zweifel's place, will carry on the business under the name of Greenwood Carnation Co. The members of the firm expect to maintain the high standard set by Mr. Zweifel. To gain this end, they have retained Mr. Zweifel's carnation grower, Leon Thorpe, an efficient grower who had complete charge of the place while Mr. Zweifel was touring Europe. They have also retained John Jacobs, another experienced grower, who was with Mr. Zweifel for some time. They have some excellent young stock to start with, and expect to bench some of it in a few days, providing the weather permits. They will make a specialty of rooted cuttings, setting apart a few thousand stock plants for this purpose. There are at present sixteen varieties on the place, including a few of the newer sorts, such as Matchless, Champion, Alice, Good Cheer and others. O. G. J.

OBITUARY

J. E. Felthousen.

J. E. Felthousen died June 18, after a short illness following a paralytic stroke. He was a native of Schenectady, N. Y., and spent his whole life, of seventy years, in his home town, forty of which were devoted to his profession. He was a pioneer in growing bedding plants, and by judicious advertising and following the principles of the Golden Rule had built up a prosperous business, which he only recently handed over to his successors, intending to take a well earned rest.

Mrs. Pauline Schray.

Mrs. Pauline Schray, widow of the late Wm. Schray, and mother of Emil and Julius Schray, died at her home in St. Louis, Mo., June 26, of heart failure, caused by two years' illness of rheumatism. She was born in St. Louis 75 years ago. Before her illness she was quite active in the business conducted by her two sons, known as Wm. Schray & Sons. The funeral took place from the home of her son, Julius, 4100 Pennsylvania avenue, June 29. Besides her sons, she leaves two grandchildren to mourn her loss. Many beautiful floral designs were sent by friends of the family and members of the trade.

J. J. B.

Lawrence A Casper.

L. A. Casper, founder of the greenhouses now operated by the firm of J. F. Wilcox & Sons, at Council Bluffs, Ia., died June 19 from heart failure, at the age of 71 years.

Mr. Casper retired from active control of the greenhouses over twenty years ago, and had since devoted his attention to his private interests; he owned a great deal of real estate. He had been ailing more or less for five years past, and last winter had been confined almost entirely to his home, at 1002 East Pierce street. He was confined to his bed for two weeks preceding his death.

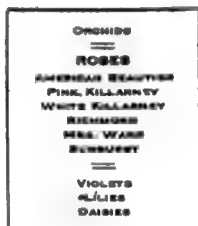

He went to Council Bluffs in 1870, and about 1872 started the first greenhouse in that section. The late J. F. Wilcox became associated with him about nine years later. The two worked together in the growing industry for many years, but about 1892 Mr. Casper retired from active participation in the business, which was still further developed by Mr. Wilcox up to the time of his death, when it was taken in charge by his sons.

Mr. Casper was born in Milwaukee February 29, 1844, but before the Civil war had become a citizen of Galena, Ill., where he was an intimate friend of General U. S. Grant in the days before the war. He went to the war in one of the Galena companies and was sent home from Vicksburg because of sickness.

In seven different years he was a member of the city council and for a number of years a member of the city park board.

He was married in 1872 to Miss Mary Caghey, who survives her husband. The only other close relative still living is George Wilcox, a half-brother, of Council Bluffs. The Wilcox brothers, the present managers of the big green-

Gentlemen:-

It may interest you to know we have furnished flowers, decorations and refreshments for seven nice weddings so far this month.

In this connection we wish to say The Review places us in the larger markets each week and enables us to make prices on anything in the floral line at any time as the quotations you print are always reliable and can be depended on as the quotations in that market.

Very truly yours,

house industry, are nephews of Mr. Casper. He was a member of the local lodge of Elks and of the G. A. R.

He made his home for many years on the site of the present home of Mrs. J. F. Wilcox, on East Pierce street, near the greenhouses, and the funeral was held from Mrs. Wilcox's home June 21. Burial was in Walnut Hill cemetery.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Last week about closed the season of weddings and commencements and probably this was a good thing, for stock of all kinds has decreased in supply, besides getting poorer in quality every day. However, there should be no complaint on that point, as stock has held up wonderfully well. Roses have been good and carnations really fine, but the growers will now empty their houses and all of the old stock of roses will either be cut back or thrown out. The stock planted for summer will take about two weeks to come up to requirements.

Most growers say they have had an unsatisfactory year, but are hoping for better things next year. And really the last month or two would seem to indicate a change for the better, as business has begun to compare more favorably with corresponding months of previous years. The retail shops have dropped right into the regular summer kind of business, which means they are depending almost entirely on funeral work, and the employees are interested principally in their vacations.

Various Notes.

Miss Anna Meuschke, daughter of Henry Meuschke, of Castle Shannon, Pa., was married to Lewis Herbert Walther, June 24.

John Sisley, who has been in the employ of the McCallum Co. for the last seven years, leaves that firm July 1, to enter into partnership with B. W. Spragg, of Washington, Pa. The firm will bear the name of Spragg & Sisley. Mr. Sisley's friends are busy wishing him success in his new venture, and if "ginger" will win it, his success is sure.

Ross Adgate, outside man for the McCallum Co., has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his mother, who died June 24, at her home in Niles, O.

Robert Herron, who has been identified with the retail business for the last twenty-five years, buried his father June 26.

Clarke.

New Orleans, La.—The New Orleans Horticultural Society will hold its annual outing July 7, taking an all-day trip on the steamer Hanover on Lake Ponchartrain. The committee has arranged for a dinner on the boat for members and their friends. The ladies will be along this year. The committee in charge consists of Henry Scheuerman, Paul Abele and Henry Kraack.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1915: President, Patrick Welch, Boston; vice-president, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Thirty-first annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., August 17 to 20, 1915.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

As a rule florists underestimate the importance of July as a business month, and overestimate September.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

It is a matter for regret that the dates announced for the Cleveland and Chicago fall shows conflict. No doubt each show will be a success, but neither will attract either the exhibits or the trade visitors that it would with a clear field its week.

Now comes the report that, in quite a few places, there are geraniums that are not likely to be sold. Year after year it happens that stock is not ready in time; there is a strong call for stock in flower early, and after the bulk of the bedding has been done there is stock on hand that was not in condition to use at the time the demand was best. The sales this year undoubtedly have been the largest ever, and generally the cleanest. There is every encouragement to get a big lot of geraniums ready early for 1916 trade.

SWEET PEA SHOW POSTPONED.

The Newport exhibition and the annual meeting of the American Sweet Pea Society has been postponed to July 15 and 16, on account of the lateness of the season. The final schedule is ready for distribution at the office of the undersigned, 40 West Twenty-eighth street, New York city.

Harry A. Bunyard, Sec'y.

A RADICAL DEPARTURE.

All the trade organizations need more money to carry on their work. The American Association of Nurserymen has undertaken to supply the need by a surtax on its members, in addition to dues, in proportion to the annual business of the member. Dues are $5; the surtax is $5 on each $10,000 of business done, so that the man who does $10,000 of business per year will pay $10 to the association, and the one who does $100,000 will pay $55.

The officers and directors of other trade societies will watch the workings of the nurserymen's plan with great interest and care. How will it work? What will be the effect on the membership? For the purposes of assessment, will the trade care to make record of the private business done per year? Will it raise an adequate sum? Will the association remain national and representative in character?

If it works well in practice, other societies should pause to consider what credit is due to the diplomacy and industry of the men at the head of the organization.

NO AZALEAS THIS YEAR?

According to the State Department at Washington, which has supplied The Review with a chronology of the correspondence between itself and the British government with regard to imports from Germany and Belgium, there is small prospect that the usual shipments of azaleas will be forthcoming this season. England regards the Ghent and Bruges districts as enemy territory. During the spring shipping season it was possible to get considerable stock through by diplomatic correspondence, England passing many plant shipments, as they did not clearly benefit her enemy, but last week the British government gave notice that the restrictions will be more severe in future and that individual cases no longer will be a subject for diplomatic correspondence, adding that shipments that are the gain of Belgians and Americans only will be passed if thrown into a British prize court—but of course this is a possible method only for non-perishable merchandise; it would be useless with the fall shipments of azaleas. Then, too, the steamship companies refuse to load any item of doubtful character, as they do not want their boats delayed while taken into an English port for the discharge of cargo for the prize court.

In these uncertain times, there always is a chance for the modification of any order and the efforts that are being made may result in letting the azaleas through, but the English note of June 24 does not offer much encouragement.

THE LIMITATION OF CREDITS.

To florists there should be special interest in the fact that at both of last week's conventions, those of the seedsmen at San Francisco and the nurserymen at Detroit, the subject of business terms, collections and the limitation of credits were among the subjects most earnestly discussed.

How to grow petunias is no longer the important question—what the trade now needs, and is beginning to realize, is to put the business on a firm financial footing.

The seedsmen and the nurserymen are beginning to appreciate that the older a debt becomes the harder it is to liquidate; they are awakening to the fact that the usual defense against an old bill is an attack on the quality of the merchandise supplied; that the customer who pays promptly seldom makes a complaint; that the one who objects to being asked for money past due is one to be watched; that the departure of the one who quits on that account can be viewed with equanimity.

Few florists today have any recognized terms of sale: their bills are payable at the pleasure of the debtor. Those who deal with the public frequently are afraid to ask for their money; those who deal with the trade seldom feel they can afford to be persistent, to insist.

Great changes in a business seldom come swiftly, but a reform in this respect is on the way in all departments of this trade.

THE NEXT WEEK'S WEATHER.

Weekly weather forecast, issued by the U. S. Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C., for the week beginning Wednesday, June 30, 1915.

For the Region of the Great Lakes—The weather will be unsettled the first three days of the week, culminating in a shower period about Saturday, thereafter fair weather. The tendency will be toward higher temperatures.

For the Upper Mississippi Valley and Plains States—Week of generally fair weather with temperatures somewhat above the seasonal average is probable.

For the Ohio Valley and Tennessee—Showers about Saturday, July 3, with temperatures slightly above the seasonal average, are indicated.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Beginning June 24, the Chicago market conditions have been good for this time of the year. That day and the following, commencement exercises in the various public schools gave an upward impulse to demand that did not altogether subside with the passing of its cause. To be sure, weather conditions have played an important part in creating demand by stopping the usual June exodus to the summer resorts. When society resorts at home, it quite naturally spends a little money for home entertaining, and this, of necessity, gives the florist his bit. This favorable trend in the demand, coupled with an appreciable falling off in receipts, has resulted in a satisfactory balance of supply and demand, as most things cleared nicely and at somewhat better average figures than they did the week before. All terms relative to the satisfactory conditions, however, must be understood as comparative and as being used with reference to the time of the year.

The supply of roses is declining sharply and the quality is proportionally better. Russell, Ophelia and Sunburst still lead, though Hillingdon is close upon their heels. Killarneys, with the exception of the white, are falling to the rear. White Killarney holds its own by virtue of necessity, as it is the only white on the market. Beauties are making a heroic stand

SUMMER BEAUTIES

WE OFFER VERY EXCELLENT STOCK

If you have used our Summer Beauties in other years you know they are splendid sellers. This summer's crop is as fine as any we ever offered—it will bring business to all who handle this stock. A large supply; all lengths.

MRS. RUSSELL

We can furnish this wonderfully popular rose in all lengths from 10-inch to 36-inch stems—any quantity you want, all of the same length, for we handle thousands every day. This is superb and your customers will tell you so when you show it to them. It's a wonderful seller.

We also have large and fine supplies of Ophelia, Milady, Killarney Brilliant, Ward and Sunburst—all good roses. Short Roses.....$15.00 per 1000

EASTER LILIES

The Easter Lily is the utility flower of summer. We have a large supply and recommend them to you as the handiest flower you can carry in stock.

CARNATIONS

There are plenty of Carnations, but not all of them will meet the requirements of critical trade. OUR Carnations are acknowledged second to none. They will give satisfaction.

FINE PEONIES

Our specialty is extra fancy Peonies. They are big, showy flowers. You can figure the supply will last for some weeks yet.

VALLEY

You can get here fine Valley in any quantity every day in the year.

CATTLEYAS

There are no finer Orchids and our supply is large.

EVERYTHING IN GREENS

None of our customers has had any difficulty getting all the good Ferns that were needed—we always have them. Also headquarters for Plumosus Sprays, Sprengeri, Smilax, Galax, Adiantum, etc., etc.

and find a fairly active demand. With practically no exceptions, roses of all kinds cleared well.

Carnations, though slow when compared with roses, enjoyed a fair demand. Fortunately, the supply was not out of proportion, and as a result, sales balanced receipts in most houses. The quality is keeping up remarkably well, owing to the cool weather.

The supply of peonies is, of course, altogether automatic now, as it is regulated by the demand. This is good, but not at all unusual. The quantity in storage July 1 is without doubt the largest ever, as no important part of the stored stock has yet been taken out. Valley is in supply equal to the demand. Easter lilies and greens must be classed together as forming an exception. Neither cleared well, however. Snapdragon is practically done for this season. Sweet peas are no longer top liners. The supply is falling off and the quality is generally poor. The little really first-class stock that reaches the market, however, finds a ready welcome. Indoor gladioli, too, are working their way to the background, but local outdoor stock has arrived. Coreopsis is reaching out tentatively, but as yet there is no rush for it.

During July and August the wholesale houses in this market will close at 5 p. m. The effort to get them to remain closed on the Sabbath seems to have been blocked by the houses that do considerable shipping on Sunday. But it should be remembered that the postoffice now delivers nothing but special delivery letters between Saturday noon and Monday morning.

Club Picnic.

There was a meeting of the officers of the Chicago Florists' Club and the members of the sports and the good-of-the-club committees June 30 at the Hotel Bismarck. Arrangements have been completed for the use of St. Paul park, at Morton Grove, and July 25 has been chosen by the joint committee as the date of the picnic. Tony Gabel secured the attendance of Mr. Clem, owner of the park, with whom the matter of concessions was discussed. Those in charge of affairs promise a good program and a most enjoyable day.

Various Notes.

William Bufe, 2924 South Canal street, who has been in the employ of A. Lange for several years, was stricken with heart disease at Randolph and Dearborn streets June 24, and died in an ambulance while being taken to the Iroquois Memorial hospital. He is survived by his wife and seven children. The funeral, June 27, was in charge of Mr. Lange. Interment was in Mount Greenwood cemetery. Mr. Bufe was 40 years of age and was at one time engaged in the florists' business in this city on his own account.

Not to be outdone by his fellow craftsmen, George Weiland, of Evanston, is buying an Overland touring car.

Mrs. J. A. Budlong, A. H. Budlong and family, and Philip Schupp and family have opened their summer cottages at Lake Geneva, Wis. The ladies will remain there during the hot months, but Mr. Budlong and Mr. Schupp are under the necessity of being on the job, the one at Bowmanville, the other in the city office, except for the week ends.

August Jurgens is at Calumet, Mich., to superintend cutting and shipping the peony crop on the plantation established there three years ago by himself

Mrs. Mathilda Klengenmeyer were married at Crown Point, Ind., June 28, without notifying their friends.

Fritz Demond, an employee of Nicholas Meyers, at Evanston, was drowned while swimming in the drainage canal June 27.

The Prince d'Arenberg rose is singing its swan song in the greenhouses of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove. The objection urged is that it is too single and opens too quickly to make really good shipping stock. Hadley, on the contrary, is gaining favor at this establishment and the space devoted to it has been enlarged by half a house. Among the visitors to Morton Grove last week were Philip J. Foley, of the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co.; W. J. Keimel and George Schuman, of Elmhurst; William Currie, of Milwaukee; Roy F. Millis, of the Alpha Floral Co., Kansas City, Mo., and Samuel Pearce.

Having an extra icebox on their hands, and having formed an attachment for it that precludes any desire to sell it, Sullivan Bros., 863 East Sixty-third street, see only one way out of the dilemma—that is, to open a branch store. With this object in view, they are busily scanning the likely spots in Hyde Park.

Frank M. Johnson and Edward Galavan are again at their places in the store of the A. L. Randall Co., after an automobile trip to New York, Philadelphia and Washington with their wives, during which they made a number of trade calls. They were gone twenty-two days and drove 2,500 miles without the slightest mishap.

W. A. Peterson, of the Peterson Nursery, says he has cut more peonies this year than ever before. What is much more, he has made more money out of them than ever before.

Ernst Amling, at Maywood, has been cutting a large crop of Mrs. Russell with stems two to three feet long and flowers large in proportion. They have sold well when the price obtainable for other roses is considered.

Among the excursionists on the Florists' Special train to San Francisco, leaving August 12, will be Miss Marguerite K. McNulty, who will employ her annual vacation from duty in Peter Reinberg's office to visit a sister on the Pacific coast. It is reported A. Lange and wife will attend the convention.

Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., recently has returned from Excelsior Springs, Mo., where he was in company with Samuel Murray, of Kansas City.

George Reinberg is putting new benches in nineteen of his houses. The benches are of pecky cypress with cement posts. As the houses are 26x265 feet each, this will take a little time.

Fancy-leaved caladiums are well liked by George Wienhoeber, for window decoration and for basket work. His window display of late has made a striking showing of baskets of hardy perennial flowers, combinations of yellow and blue.

It fell to G. Swenson, at Elmhurst, to close the local peony season last week with a large cut of fine Humei. His plants are perhaps 20 years old and are later in blooming than is the case with young plants.

Thirteen houses had been filled with carnations as early as June 26 at the Peter Reinberg establishment, according to Emil Reichling.

P. J. Foley and wife celebrated their twenty-third wedding anniversary June 29.

John Kruchten and C. L. Sherer paid a business visit to Milwaukee last week.

Frank McCabe, of the A. L. Randall Co., and C. E. Pruner, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., will represent Chicago at the meeting of the Texas State Florists' Association at Fort Worth July 6 and 7.

Local outdoor gladioli and Michigan candidum lilies arrived the same day, June 25, according to Erne & Klingel.

A. Henderson and A. Miller, of Henderson & Co., went to Lincoln, Ill., June 28, spending the following day in Springfield. Mr. Henderson returned to the city the night of June 29.

W. J. La Grotta, proprietor of the A. McAdams establishment, Fifty-third street and Kimbark avenue, says he is enjoying the best plant trade in years.

Miss Thelma Vaughan, daughter of A. L. Vaughan, left June 28 for Long Lake, where she will enjoy a week's outing.

The porch and window box season is just at its best, according to Oscar Metz, 5525 Harper avenue, who has his hands full filling orders for them.

The West End Floral Co., 4035 West Madison street, has been quite busy with funeral work the last two weeks.

Heim Bros., Blue Island, have begun planting new stock of roses.

Miss Fanny C. Murphy, 4248 West Madison street, reports a good business in planting and funeral work.

Finding that there is a ready sale for something different, Schiller the Florist has had M. J. Tillmann's Sons make up a quantity of specially designed hanging baskets.

Michael Fink, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, spends his spare time running about Jefferson Park in his new automobile.

Harry Manheim, of Hoerber Bros., is taking his vacation.

Gale Fanning is the first of the Zech & Mann crew to go on a vacation. He left June 28 for a two weeks' visit in Jacksonville, Ill., his old home.

The Market.

Business is still good, owing to the cool weather that has prevailed all through the spring season. Of course, prices are lower, but the big factor is that stock is being moved. The demand is exceptionally good for this time of year and any occasional surplus is being taken up readily at low prices. Roses have maintained their quality wonderfully and buyers of this stock are getting great value for their money. Carnations are also in extra fine condition and are moving well. Though both carnations and roses are plentiful, they are cleaned up fairly well each day. Peonies are in extremely large supply, but are selling well. The crop has been with us much longer than last year and will probably be on for another week. Sweet peas are about gone, although they are still to be had. The quality is deteriorating fast and one or two hot days will see the last of them.

There is no complaint on the spring season, as business has been good, but it is to be expected that hot weather will soon put a quietus on the sales and then the florists can take a much needed vacation.

Various Notes.

tion decorations, the force have been on the jump continually. This firm had the decorations both for the North Division High school, in the school auditorium, and for the West Division High school, whose exercises took place at the Grand Avenue Congregational church. Both decorations were most artistically arranged. Miss E. Perstein celebrated her twenty-fourth birthday June 13, when she was agreeably surprised by a party of her friends. As the party did not break up until the "wee, sma'" hours, there is no need of saying anything about the time they had.

The Heitman-Oestreicher Co. states that its carnation plants are in exceptionally fine condition for this time of year. This firm will be cutting its first outdoor sweet peas within a few days.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

Trade dropped off somewhat last week. There has been some work for funerals and the like, but the usual summer dull spell has begun. With June weddings, graduations and dances at an end, the more refined work for fancy bouquets and the like has ceased. Roses are plentiful and the stock is fine. The florists throughout the city are having special sales and great quantities of roses are handled each day. Carnations are poor and are about done with. There are still some cold storage peonies on the market and the demand for these is satisfactory. Sweet peas are in their last stage. Coreopsis and sweet william are in good crop and these seem to meet with the approval of the trade. The leading flowers of the day are Francis King and America gladioli. Though the price of these is steep as yet, they find a ready sale.

Various Notes.

The annual club picnic will be held July 7, at Ottawa park. The arrangements have been completed by the committee in charge. Among the leading features for the day will be the auto parade of florists' delivery and touring cars through the principal streets of the city; later will come the baseball game and races. Luncheon will be at 12 o'clock. The picnic has always been regarded as a great event, bringing the florists of the city together to have a jolly time, and in that way creating a more friendly feeling among the various competitors. Those in charge of the picnic are as follows: Publicity, Arthur C. Kneisle; luncheon, Frank M. Schramm; games, races and prizes, Miss Helen Patten and Max Spanner; finance, Wm. Krueger, S. N. Peck and G. B. Schramm. All florists of north-western Ohio are extended a cordial invitation to attend, and large numbers are expected to turn out. Speeches will be made by George Bayer and Harry Heintz, and by Max Spanner, president of the club.

The White-June Co., of this city, closed its doors last week, due to business reverses. The business was organized in the spring of 1913, by H. C. White, of Massillon, O., and Mrs. P. J. June, a society woman of this city. They did a flourishing business for some time, but soon they found things slipping away from them. Advertising to some extent, but not enough for a new firm, seemed to be the principal factor in their failing to attain the desired goal. About six months ago Mrs. June disposed of her half interest to Mr. White, who was still confident a change for the better would begin at Easter and Memorial day, but in this he was disappointed. The fixtures and supplies were sold last week and the final business transactions took place.

Max Spanner has purchased a new Overland delivery car. His old car was destroyed by fire some months ago.

John Barrow has purchased a new Mitchell touring car. He says that is the way to bank Memorial day profits and enjoy them the best. G. B. S.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business conditions generally have been poor during the week. Funeral work has formed the bulk of the business. Wedding orders have been few and commencement orders are about past. There is plenty of stock, but it is only of fair quality. A few asters are coming in, but, while the flowers are of fair size, the stems are short. Hydrangea arborescens, phlox and other outdoor cut flowers are moving slowly. About the only scarcity is in good white roses. The quality of the carnations is rapidly deteriorating and until good asters arrive there will be an unsupplied want. As one person puts it, carnations show "a bud today, a flower tomorrow, and are asleep the day after." This well describes their keeping qualities.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the club was held June 28 at the club rooms. The evening was cool and a good crowd was present. Prof. T. B. Symons, of the Maryland Agricultural College, was present and extended an invitation on behalf of the fruit growers of western Maryland to the members to attend the summer meeting of the Maryland Horticultural Society at Pen Mar July 30.

been expected. Thomas Woodfall's range, also at Glenburnie, was damaged in much the same manner. Charles Fox, at Jones station, lost heavily in both glass and stock. At Annapolis, R. Kaiser's place was damaged to the extent of about $600. E. A. Seidewitz's houses were also damaged. Hambruch Bros. suffered some loss, but seemed to escape the most severe storm. Around Ellicott City, Edw. Yates' glass was completely shattered. In his vicinity the hail was especially large. In and around Catonsville, Peter Eberhart lost most heavily; the damage to glass alone amounted to about $100. Chas. H. Cook lost about fifty lights, and Walter Gray also lost some glass, but on the latter two places no damage was done to the stock. The storm was not accompanied by much wind and was in many respects freakish.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

A much better condition prevailed in the cut flower market for the last week in June. There was a moderate amount of business, some good judges thought a little more than a week before, with just about half the quantity of flowers. This gave a much better tone to the trading, for the actual sales in dollars and cents are generally believed to have been greater than when that vast avalanche of stock was upon us. No true farmer can ever be satisfied, nor can a true wholesale commission florist, so a little better quality is the wish of the day. Still there are some pretty good flowers, notably the gladioli from indoors; Augusta, America, Hollandia and Mrs. Francis King are all excellent. These are reinforced by early arrivals of southern outdoor-grown gladioli in pretty much the same variety. Beauties are good, a few local and a few fine eastern-grown flowers; also several varieties of the smaller hybrid tea roses. Easter lilies are excellent and there are lots of good lilies of the valley. Cattleyas, too, are to be had, both gigas and Gaskelliana, and the white Dendrobium formosum. Carnations are still of fair quality and sweet peas of the Spencer type from outdoors are excellent. These are the better flowers; the poorer ones are disappearing slowly. Peonies are almost over, as are gardenias. Asters have come.

A Swell Wedding.

St. Mark's church was the scene of a beautifully decorated wedding June 28. The altar, banked with Cibotium Schiedei, was handsomely adorned with white flowers; gladioli, lilies and roses. The columns were festooned with smilax and white sweet peas. The wedding reception and breakfast, held at Lindenhurst, Jenkintown, was also made beautiful by handsome floral arrangements. Here, as at St. Mark's everything was new, handsome, yet perfectly simple. The bower where the bridal couple stood was a work of art made of cibotiums, white hydrangeas and white spray orchids. The bridal table, laid for twenty-four persons, was garnished by a wondrous cake of huge size, dome-capped. Around the cake were arranged a dozen baskets of lilies of the vale and white orchids; a horse-shoe basket at each end, five smaller baskets on either side. There were over 100 little tables, indoors and out, for the guests. These were brightened by sprays of Dorothy Perkins roses. This variety also was used to cover a great pergola, a triumph of the decorator's handiwork. The decorations were planned and executed by J. J. Habermehl's Sons and their corps of artists from the Bellevue-Stratford and the other flower shops loyal to the Habermehl banner.

Various Notes.

Edward Murray, who was well and favorably known in retail flower circles, died after an operation in the Presbyterian hospital June 26. Ed. Murray, as he was familiarly known, worked for three or four years with the late Balthasar Stahl, on Eleventh street above Chestnut. For the last twelve years he was with William H. Wyatt, at 236 North Eleventh street. He was not married, about 36 years of age. His sad loss is deeply mourned by his employer and his friends.

Leo Niessen is taking a few days' vacation with his family at Wildwood, N. J.

Clarence W. Moore is pleased with the activity in flower seeds and clover.

Charles E. Meehan has moved his family to Ocean City, N. J., for the summer.

R. C. Hayden received many expressions of good will on his retirement from the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., June 30.

H. H. Battles supplied some beautiful bouquets for an ultra-fashionable wedding this week.

Arthur A. Niessen has recovered from his accident and he can give a hearty grip once more.

B. Eschner and Mrs. Eschner left for the Pacific coast July 1. Phil.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., has secured permission from the bureau of city real estate to improve one of the large plots in front of Convention hall and has a force of workmen preparing the ground and making attractive flower beds. These it will care for during the summer and fall; and it is the intention to make a suitable display on this plot during the national flower show to be held in Convention hall next March. This, of course, is in addition to the display which the company will make in the building during the flower show.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

With the weddings and commencements and a considerable number of funerals, most of the retail florists did a good business during June, though the volume was probably not up to what it is in some years. The commencement trade has shown a great falling off in the aggregate from what it has been in the past, owing to the fact that the school authorities are discouraging the public presentation of flowers at commencement exercises. The spring season for the growers has practically ended. So many now have flowers in their gardens that they no longer depend on florists for their supplies. The growers are now turning their attention to planting their stock for next fall's trade. Not only are flowers plentiful, but they are extremely cheap. Some roses are being sold as low as 75 cents a dozen, and carnations in some stores as low as 40 cents a dozen, though they average somewhat higher than this. Sweet peas that a short time ago were selling for 20 cents a bunch are now selling for 10 cents. Peonies are plentiful and cheap, but are deteriorating in quality and will soon be gone. Hanging baskets for porch use have sold well.

Various Notes.

The active season is now over with A. B. Brunner, at 150 Chancellor avenue, and he is now planting for the fall trade. He reports that the spring trade was excellent.

Trauth, the Florist, reports business considerably ahead of last year. He has had a good deal of commencement work and several weddings. His store is "papered" with birch bark, the seams of which are covered with cork bark.

McLaughlin & Murphy have had good orders for funerals and weddings recently.

Louis Perlman has moved from his quarters on Market street, near the Pennsylvania railroad station, to 65 June street.

The Market.

Great quantities of cut flowers of all kinds were pressed into service for the commencements last week. Carnations were first, because they were least expensive and more lasting. The quality of the flowers was excellent and the prices were firm. Only a few peonies were used; they were poor and small. Sweet peas were not great favorites and fewer of these were sold than in previous years. Roses were much in demand and brought fair prices. All varieties sold well. Orchids and valley also sold well. Spanish iris is coming into this market in large quantities. Sweet peas are only fair and are short-stemmed. There was a good supply of all seasonable flowers last week, except that there was a slight shortage of roses and hardy ferns. Enormous quantities of these were used in graduation bouquets. Beauties have been plentiful and of good quality.

The Lenox Flower Shop had the decorations for the Jewett-Lyle wedding last week, which was a big affair. They also report a good commencement trade.

W. J. Palmer & Son were showing some clever corsages during the graduation season. Among the many different styles, one of the most fetching was a combination of Irish Fireflame roses, yellow daisies and sweet peas, tied with burnt-orange ribbon. Another pleasing combination consisted of Cecile Brunner roses with white sweet peas and valley, tied with shell-pink ribbon. The store force was kept hustling last week.

Peter Hoffman is still selling bedding plants, owing to the late season. He has some excellent pansy plants, salvias, petunias, begonias, verbenas, geraniums and calendulas, all in bloom.

J. H. Ranny was in an auto collision last week, but escaped severe injury.

Business at Stroh's Quality Flower Shop last week was the best ever. They are showing some columbine in exquisite shades.

S. A. Anderson had a busy week with commencement work and numerous small weddings. At the Elmwood store, Miss Susan Streit booked a large order for American Beauties, which were used at one of the school commencements.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Butz have returned from their honeymoon. They will reside in Tonawanda, where they are building an attractive bungalow. The store and greenhouse forces presented to them a chest of silver spoons.

Beautiful Spanish iris in various colors and handsome sprays of digitalis are being shown at the branch store of W. J. Palmer & Son. Graduation work there was good. Their summer schedule takes effect July 1. E. C. A.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Members of the trade in this city and vicinity experienced some activity last week, numerous calls for graduations, weddings and other social functions, together with a number of funerals, materially increasing the demand for bouquets, baskets and decorative plants. This spring the downtown stores, for almost the first time, have been carrying large supplies of wild azalea and rhododendron blossoms to ready sales. Prices are slightly above normal for this time of the year. Roses were decidedly short in quantity during the week.

Various Notes.

The greenhouses of Samuel Kinder, Giles S. Congdon, William L. McKee, Le Baron Bradford, Frederick A. Geisler and Edward Edgar, all at Bristol, and a number of smaller greenhouses in that vicinity, suffered damage in a hail storm June 26, many hundreds of panes being broken in the roofs and much damage done to plants inside the houses. The greenhouse on the estate of Frederick A. Ballou, at Nyatt, was wrecked by the storm and one of the houses in Charles H. Hunt's range on Burnside street, this city, lost many panes.

The largest June flower exhibition by the Rhode Island Horticultural Society in several years was held last week in the ballroom of the Narragansett hotel. The sweet peas, roses and peonies shown were in splendid condition, while an unusual display of orchids was in evidence. The committee in charge consisted of Eugene A. Appleton, Joshua Vose, Cornelius Hartstra and two laymen.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Stillman, of Westerly, left last week for California.

Charles Smith attended the Zionist convention at Boston last week.

CYSTER BAY, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society was held June 23, in Fireman's hall, with President Jos. Robinson in the chair. Three new members were admitted.

Fifty-eight vases of flowers, five dishes of vegetables and three dishes of fruit were on the exhibition tables. Messrs. Woolson, Robinson and Humphreys were appointed judges and reported as follows:

Society's prize for six sprays of roses—Jas. Duckham.

Society's prize for twelve pods peas—Frank Petroccia.

Society's prize for twelve strawberries—Arthur Patten.

Howard C. Smith's prize of $5 for twelve vases of sweet peas—First, Jas. Duthie; second, Jas. Duckham.

James Duthie's prize of $3 for six vases sweet peas—First, Frank Kyle; second, C. E. Moyses.

Vase of climbing roses, by John Sorosick, honorable mention.

Vase of orchids in variety, by John Ingram, honorable mention.

Vase of iris, by John Ingram, honorable mention.

Vase of delphinium, by Frank Kyle, honorable mention.

H. Gibson made an interesting report on the visit of a delegation of gardeners from Oyster Bay to the Ward estate at New Rochelle, to see Mr. Butterback's new fruit gardens. Mr. Woolson and Mr. Duthie also gave humorous talks.

THE GENUS IRIS

By WILLIAM RICKATSON DYKES

With 48 colored plates and 30 line drawings in the text

This magnificent work brings together the available information on all known species of Iris. The most striking feature of the book is the life-size colored plates, reproduced from originals drawn from living plants—making it a volume of remarkable beauty as well as of great scientific importance.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Florists' Review,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.25 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received-----	$513.25
Less 20% allowed senders-----	102.60
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.65

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florist's business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,

F. H. Weber

The Market.

Stock of all kinds is exceedingly plentiful and the movement of even fifty per cent of that received would be satisfactory to the dealers. There is a fair demand for gardenias, which continue to arrive in pretty good shape, but it is absolutely impossible to move the surplus stock, regardless of low prices. Indoor sweet peas are still to be had, and sell well for use in wedding decorations at about 50 cents per hundred. Gladioli have been plentiful at from $4 to $6 per hundred. Some fine French hydrangeas, at from $9 to $18 per dozen, meet with a fair sale.

Business during June was quite satisfactory, according to all reports. Wedding work was heavier than a year ago, and the business from schools and seminaries was good. The city school authorities, however, discouraged the giving of flowers to grammar school graduates and so cut down the volume of commencement business.

Various Notes.

George W. Hess, superintendent of the United States Botanical Gardens, will leave shortly for New York city, where he will take passage for New Orleans to become the guest in that city of Senator Robert F. Broussard. Mr. Hess will be absent from the city for a month or more.

closed for the season, for Lompoc, Cal., to take up work on the sweet pea ranch of A. C. Zvolanek. He expects to see considerable of that section of the Pacific coast, and during the several months that he will be there, will put in considerable time at the Panama-Pacific exposition. He is the son of Adolph Gude, of the firm of Gude Bros. Co.

D. T. Connor, representing Lord & Burnham Co., of Philadelphia, was a visitor here last week.

The Marine Corps reservation in this city will soon have a new greenhouse to replace the present structure. The cost of the new house is estimated to be between $250 and $300.

Beds of foliage plants are already being arranged in the Capitol grounds in preparation for the festivities incident to the fiftieth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, to be held here the latter part of September. Two beds, approximately 30x100 feet, representing G. A. R. badges in colors, are being set out on the west slope of the grounds.

Gude Bros. Co. last week took advantage of the large amount of publicity given to Miss Ruth M. Purcel, a Washington girl, who was recently voted to be the handsomest girl in the United States, to attract attention to their American Beauty roses. As Miss Purcel stepped from the train on her return from the Panama-Pacific exposition, Charles E. Scarborough, on behalf of Gude Bros. Co., presented to her a bunch of American Beauties, to which was attached a card which bore the following inscription: "These American Beauties, grown in the District of Columbia, are the best the national capital has to offer the American Beauty of the United States." The presentation was witnessed by several hundred people who had gone to the Union station to get a glimpse of the girl.

It has been decided to hold the annual outing of the Florists' Club of Washington at Great Falls, Va., July 21. The outing committee, of which O. A. C. Oehmler is chairman, is busily

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Last week was a gala week for Fort Wayne and the florists had a goodly share in the benefits. On Monday, June 21, the dedication of the Lincoln highway took place. Nearly 1,000 decorated automobiles appeared in the parade, which was routed through this city, on the Lincoln highway, to New Haven. Vice-President Marshall was the principal speaker. The black cavalry troops of Culver formed an escort for the Vice-President. Aside from the demand for this affair, there were numerous weddings and large social functions which called for flowers.

Indoor stock is in fairly good condition, on account of the continued cool weather. Within the last few days, however, the mercury has been rising and outdoor stock is much preferred. The bedding season is over at last. Never before has it been known to extend over so long a period. Lilies have a good sale. Sweet peas are past their best. Valley is still in good demand. Miniature gladioli are gone, but some fine blooms of the large variety are in. Snapdragons are about gone. The local vegetable market spoils the sale of outdoor stock at this season.

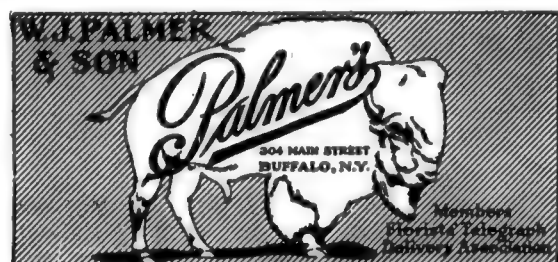

Various Notes.

Herman Leitz, of the New Haven Floral Co., New Haven, Ind., has been on the sick list for three weeks, but is able to be about again.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Shive, of the Flick Floral Co., and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Blossom have returned from a motor trip to the lakes in northern Indiana.

A. J. Lanternier is cutting some good lilies. His greenhouse force is busy planting the young stock. His rose and chrysanthemum plants are looking fine.

the Country Club last week upwards of 100 corsages of roses and sweet peas were furnished by the Flick Floral Co. The decorations of the club house were of snapdragons, irises and Shawyer roses.

Among the handsomely decorated autos in the parade at the dedication of the Lincoln highway was the touring car of Frank Knecht, which was elaborately done in roses and Easter lilies. At New Haven, Ind., the residence and grounds of Herman Leitz, of the New Haven Floral Co., were tastefully decorated with some of the best stock from the firm's greenhouses, which are close to the Lincoln highway. Mr. Leitz gave thousands of carnations away to autoists in the parade. R. F.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business is excessively dull and prices low, with probabilities that things will remain in a semi-comatose condition until September. The commencements last week made little difference to business. A few years ago the supplying of graduation bouquets was quite an industry and its loss to the cut flower trade is serious. Roses were the only flowers which cleaned up tolerably well right through last week. The most popular price was $4 to $6 per hundred. The call for really fancy stock was limited. White varieties still sell well and there is a fair call for other sorts. As all growers have practically completed replanting, supplies are somewhat reduced.

Carnations are ruinously low and it hardly pays to ship them to market for $1.50 to $5 per thousand. A few select flowers bring as high as $1 per hundred. Good sweet peas, cornflowers and yellow marguerites sell fairly well and cattleyas have enjoyed a moderate popularity. Other flowers are little called for. Sweet sultans, gladioli and hunnemannias are used a good deal in window displays. Peonies are over, as are Spanish irises. Snapdragons are of poor quality. Few gardenias are arriving at present.

Various Notes.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will soon hold a field day at Newport, R. I. Special cars are being arranged for to leave the South station at 8:43, arriving in Newport at 10:58 a. m., returning from Newport at 5:05 p. m. Some of the leading estates and other

Harry Quint's store, on Boylston street, always presents an attractive appearance. He has the advantage of a nice plot of lawn and curbing on which to make an effective outdoor display, and sells everything at popular prices.

While I hear almost daily of some who are going to San Francisco and San Diego from this section, I have not yet found anyone except President Welch who will attend the S. A. F. convention, but some will, no doubt, make up their minds later.

the cool weather we have experienced during practically the whole of June.

Mr. Hurst, of Little Rock, Ark., was among the visitors last week.

Miss Helen Goddard, only daughter of S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, was operated on for appendicitis at the Framingham hospital June 25. I am glad to report her as convalescing satisfactorily.

One of Galvin's large windows in his Park street store had a pleasing arrangement June 26. A large tank of nymphæas was dotted thinly with fancy caladiums, with a background of palms and ferns. Wedding orders have been quite numerous during June.

The W. W. Edgar Co. reports that May business was the heaviest in its history and that June trade is also good. The force is busy building and painting.

Prof. A. H. Nehrling, of the floricultural department, Amherst, Mass., will visit San Francisco at the time of the S. A. F. convention and will later visit the San Diego exposition. Prof. J. H.
Fairley, of Durham College, Durham, N. H., will also make a trip to the Pacific coast, but in advance of the convention.

Sweet peas locally are doing finely outdoors, thanks to cool weather and recent rains, and a fine display is assured at the annual sweet pea show in Horticultural hall July 10 and 11.

mencing July 3. W. N. C.

The Market.

The wholesale market was in splendid condition last week, as far as supply was concerned, but the demand for stock was light. Prices were low. In all the select grades the quality ran high. Roses were most plentiful, especially the Killarneys, Kaiserin, Richmond and Milady. Beauties, too, were equal to all demands. Clean sales on carnations were out of the question; extra fancy never went above $2 per hundred at any time. Indoor-grown gladioli are in heavy supply and now that the field-grown stock is coming in, the wholesalers are having a hard time of it. Consignments of these from local growers promise to be the largest on record. Prices average about $3 per hundred and thousand lots go at $20. Sweet peas are still in over-supply. Valley was in good demand last week. Outdoor stock is suffering greatly from the continuous rains.

From the reports of the leading retailers, June was a busy month, but little trade is expected during the next two months.

Various Notes.

At the meeting of the Retail Florists' Association, held June 21, at the Mission Inn Garden, it was decided to appoint a committee, which, together with a committee from the County Growers' Association and the heads of the wholesale houses, will meet to discuss the opening of the wholesale markets until 5 p. m. Saturdays. Considerable headway was made regarding the closing of retail stores on Sundays during the next two months. Six new members were elected. The next meeting of the association will be held July 18.

An important meeting of the County Growers' Association will be held July 7, at the Eleven Mile House. Secretary Joseph Deutschmann says the importance of this meeting, of which the members all know, should bring out a record attendance.

President Bourdet, of the St. Louis Florists' Club, says the notices of the club's meeting, July 8, sent out by the secretary to all the members, should be read carefully. Nine questions will come up for discussion. The nomination of officers will take place at this meeting.

J. P. Shaad has moved his flower store from Cherokee street and California avenue to 2610 Cherokee street.
This is the store recently vacated by the E. G. Sedivec Floral Co. Mr. Shaad says the new location gives him much needed room.

W. S. Wells, who has charge of the Washington University grounds, has closed his place of business, known as the W. S. Wells Floral Co., 4056
Chateau avenue. June 18, he invited all his local creditors to his home on Flad avenue for a lunch and presented to each a check for the amount due.
What a grand world this would be if there were more of his kind!

Joseph Haemmerl, the Marcus avenue florist, says this has been one of his best plant seasons. Everything is cleaned up. All of his spare time during the next two months will be taken up with alterations, repairing and painting.

Vincent Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, writes that he and Mrs. Gorly are having a splendid time in California.

Henry G. Berning, well known local wholesale florist, was married June 29, his bride being Miss Emma Bruenig, sister of his first wife. This was the wish of Mrs. Berning before she died, and both had promised that they would carry out her request. They left the same day for Detroit and the east.
They will be away for six weeks.

Miss Betty Carlson, buyer for the downtown store of Mullanphy, seldom fails to visit all of the wholesale houses each morning. She is well qualified to buy.

Paddy Patton, of W. C. Smith
Wholesale Floral Co., says he has accepted an offer by the management of Romona park, to be host in Bartwurst-gloecklein the day of the Florists' Club's picnic, July 22.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Present conditions point to a successful month, and if June finishes as it commenced, we shall have little to complain of. The weather is moderate and we have had some good rains, which have helped considerably, but we would still welcome more. Outdoor stock is coming along rapidly and the quality is good. Most of the peonies are over, but there is an awful glut of carnations. Flower day cleared the market splendidly; 33,550 were supplied to the committee. The carnations are good for this time of year, but are getting smaller. Sweet peas, though good, are scarce. There have been large quantities of roses on the market, with a greater percentage of darker colors.
Reds and yellows are plentiful, but pink and white are extremely scarce.
Beauties of all grades have been plentiful and rather cheap. Gladioli, chiefly Americas, have also been abundant and they sell fast. There is a large supply of candytuft and it moves well. Valley is meeting about all demands. Easter and calla lilies are moving rather slowly. Single and double daisies sell well. Gaillardias, coreopsis, bachelor's buttons and campanulas sell freely.
Snapdragons in pink, white and laven-der sell well. Practically nothing is seen in blossoming plants. The supply of greens meets all demands.

Various Notes.

H. E. Wilson's force were remarkably busy with graduation bouquets and weddings in the first half of the week.
Business with this firm is first-class.

His outdoor stock was never in better condition; the rains have helped wonderfully.

John Dunbar, assistant superintendent of parks, addressed the mass meeting held at West High school, June 24.
It was the Flower City rally, held to promote further interest in the city beautiful campaign. Many additional window boxes have been noticed during the week, and the committees are highly gratified at the results. Mr.
Dunbar is preparing a list of suitable plants and shrubs for home gardens;
the list will be distributed to all who desire it.

Flower day, an annual event, was observed June 25, when 250 pretty girls, all dressed in white, carried baskets of carnations and sold them on the streets, in aid of the Children's Free Dispensary. The florists' committee, under George B. Hart, had been hard at work collecting over 33,000 carnations, which were all sold. It was a record year and upwards of $2,600 was handed in.
Among the florists who gave their services in arranging the baskets were George B. Hart, E. P. Wilson, A. H.
Salter, George Cramer, Mike Keller,
Charles Vick, Fred Schlegel, William Peartree, etc. The baskets were novel, being made of pasteboard, colored pink and green, and had a wire handle suitable for carrying. George Hart's wire-worker was responsible for this light, novel and attractive device.

J. W. Langenbach, manager of the Bert Olney greenhouses, of Albion, N.
Y., was in town recently.

George B. Hart and his son, Dick;
Tom Burke and George Cramer spent two days on a fishing trip at Conesus lake. They made good catches. Young Dick, 9 years old, caught two bass weighing five and one-quarter pounds.

NEWS OF THE SEED TRADE

THE first of the season's Harrisii bulbs are due to reach New York July 3, but no considerable quantity will arrive until the boat due July 14.

HENRY J. BARROW is on his way from Meriden, Conn., to Montana, where he will represent the firm of Mandeville & King, of Rochester, N. Y., during the summer.

S. F. LEONARD, president of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, sends word that he is having a great time. After visiting both expositions he will make a tour of the seed growing districts of the Pacific coast.

CORN is suffering heavily in the north central states as a result of the continued cold and the superabundance of rain. As it is not advisable to replant later than June 25, there is every indication of a shortage.

A. J. BROWN, of the Brown Seed Co., went to the Idaho pea district after inspecting the concern's crops in California before and after the convention. At Grand Rapids it is reported the company has 1,000 acres of peas under contract in Idaho this year.

SAN FRANCISCO CONVENTION.

[For a full report of the first two days of the convention, see this department of The Review for June 24.]

Officers Elected.

At the closing session of the thirty-third annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, at San Francisco, June 24, the following officers were elected:

President—John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.

First Vice-president—Kirby B. White, Detroit.

Second Vice-president—F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.

Secretary-treasurer—C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

Assistant Secretary—S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O.

Executive Committee—Lester L. Morse, San Francisco; C. C. Massie, Minneapolis; Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; Herman Simmers, Toronto; J. Charles McCullough, Cincinnati.

The membership committee remains as before: Albert McCullough, Cincinnati; Ben. P. Corneli, St. Louis; H. G. Hastings, Atlanta, Ga.

Thursday's Meeting.

The principal business of the convention was done Thursday morning, June 24, when the members met in executive session. One feature of this final meeting was the report of the obituary committee, which brought to mind the deaths of Jesse E. Northrup, John M. Griffith, Louis B. Schulte and Wm. H. Grenell. The report included a special tribute to ex-Presidents Northrup and Grenell, by ex-President S. F. Willard.

Another feature of the meeting was the report rendered by the committee on the president's address. The committee reported favorably on the recommendations of the president, and the report was concurred in by the association.

John M. Lupton.

(President-elect American Seed Trade Association.)

Cincinnati was recommended to the executive committee as the next meeting place.

With the seating of President Lupton, and the voting and rendering of three cheers for retiring President Morse, the convention came to an end.

The Seed Farms Tour.

"To me the seed trade is more than a business," said President Morse in welcoming the association to San Francisco; "to me the seed trade is a fraternity, and some of the pleasantest associations of my life are those I have formed with men in the seed business."

Rarely if ever have the members of the American Seed Trade Association been so delightfully entertained, while at the same time keeping close to business, as was the case June 25 and 26, when they were the guests of the seed growers operating in the Santa Clara and San Juan valleys. The start was made from San Francisco at 8 a. m., with 180 people in the party. At San Jose hand baggage was put off in charge of porters from Hotel Vendome. Arrived at Gilroy, Louis Kimberlin, of San Jose, took command and with a line of thirty-three automobiles took the guests to the seed farms, following a prearranged itinerary. Only brief stops were possible, so many places were to be visited, but refreshments were served at several farms. At noon the party reached the old San Juan mission, where Waldo Rohnert was in charge of a barbecue. Good food was served under canvas on the piazza of the old General Castro home, General Fremont's old headquarters, a beautiful, picturesque place. Four hours of the afternoon were devoted to further seed farm inspection via the motors. The party arrived at Hotel Vendome shortly after 7 o'clock, in time for dinner and bed. A fresh start was made in the automobiles at 9 a. m. Saturday and a number of farms visited before luncheon at the County Club at San Jose, where Dr. E. O. Pieper was in charge. Returning to Hotel Vendome in the afternoon, the party broke up, many returning to San Francisco while others scattered, east, south or as business or other interests called. The itinerary of the auto trip was as follows:

Yarrowa

THE SWEET PEA PAR EXCELLENCE for WINTER-FLOWERING UNDER GLASS

We were awarded Certificates of Merit for this superb novelty at the International Flower Show in New York, March, 1914, and at the Spring Show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, March, 1915.

Yarrowa is absolutely fixed, and true to color and type.

Yarrowa is an easy and good "doer," invariably giving an excellent account of itself, whether grown in pots, boxes, raised benches or solid beds.

Yarrowa has the heavy foliage and rank, strong growth of the summer-flowering type and is a true winter-blooming Spencer. From seed sown early in October at Fordhook Farms, the plants came into bloom December 20 and flowered profusely until May. The flowers are exquisitely waved and when well grown will average two and one-half inches in diameter, many of them being duplex, or double-flowered, thus adding greatly to the general effect of the bunch. They are borne usually in fours on extra long, strong stems. The color is a most pleasing shade of bright rose-pink, with light wings.

The trip was full of interest for the ladies and a wonderful opportunity for the seedsmen to get a bird's-eye view of the seed crops. Of course all of the farms were in apple-pie order, although there were places where the ill effect of the heavy spring rains was apparent in the appearance of the crops.

The Banquet.

One of the happiest of the many enjoyable occasions of the convention was the banquet Wednesday evening, June 23. Including the ladies, there were about 130 present. The affair was held in the rooms of the Commercial Club, on the top floor of the 13-story Merchants' Exchange building, in the heart of San Francisco's financial district. The clubrooms were beautifully fitted up a short time before the exposition opened and the numerous features in the decorations, etc., significant of the life and history of San Francisco, were matters of no little interest to visitors from other parts of the country. The menu, also, was typically Californian and the food, prepared and served in the manner for which the Commercial Club has become famous, was greatly enjoyed by all present. The menu was as follows:

California Oyster Cocktail
Salted Nonpareil Almonds Ripe California Olives Cream of Half-Moon-Bay Green Peas
Sand Dabs Saute Meuniere
Larded Tenderloin of Beef au Jus
Blue Lake String Beans
Creme de Menthe Punch
Roast Stuffed Petaluma Squab Chicken
Hearts of Los Angeles Lettuce, Roquefort Dressing
Meringue Chantilly Petits Fours
Cafe Noir

Watson S. Woodruff, toastmaster, kept up a steady flow of wit, and between courses amused the diners by reading fake telegrams, take-offs on public characters and members of the association. Another entertainment feature greatly enjoyed was a series of monologues and songs given by Mr. Aguirre and friends, of the Olympic Club. There were no formal addresses, for more business is—a little energy, mixed with a few fresh ideas, a moderate amount of concentrated newspaper advertising; stir well, and add enough courage to season, and a full measure of honesty to leaven—serve to yourself regularly, before breakfast in the morning. Business is done on enthusiasm, on hope, animation and good cheer. Utilize every bit of greenhouse space you have. Nothing is more valueless than an unused greenhouse. Fill up your benches—business will steadily increase—and next winter you will have something to dispose of worth while. And in order to have a complete line, you must have lilies—in which case Horseshoe Brand bulbs should be secured, inasmuch as they will net a better average than any other brand known.

A GOOD RECEIPT

but extemporaneous talks were given by quite a number of members, including the retiring president, L. L. Morse, F. W. Bolgiano, S. F. Leonard, E. L. Page, M. L. Germain, Frank Leckenby, J. Charles McCullough, E. O. Pieper, W. C. Langbridge, H. Simmers, L. S. Payn, L. C. Routzahn and K. B. White.

The function closed with the presentation of a handsome watch to Mr. Morse, on behalf of the association, in appreciation of his services as president, in a felicitous speech by Waldo Rohnert, fittingly responded to by Mr. Morse.

President Lupton.

John M. Lupton, the newly elected president, was born at Mattituck, Long Island, where he still lives. He received his education in the public schools of his town, supplemented by the course at Franklinville Academy. His occupation was that of a farmer until 1882. He organized a seed growing business at that time, making a specialty of producing cabbage seed and giving attention to the improvement of the varieties by selection. In 1910 his son Robert was admitted to partnership. The firm name then became J. M. Lupton & Son. Mr. Lupton has been a regular attendant at seed trade conventions ever since he was elected to membership, in 1893, and in 1913 was chosen as first vice-president, to which office he was reelected in 1914.

CREDITS AND COLLECTIONS.

[Summary of a paper by M. L. Germain, of Los Angeles, read before the American Seed Trade Association at San Francisco June 23, 1915.]

I am strongly opposed to long credits. Have you ever noticed that the almost invariable defense to a collection suit is an attack on the quality of your merchandise? Down-to-date seedsmen spend large sums of money every year to insure against just such attacks and yet many of them, in order to make a few additional sales, are willing to run the risk of the very thing which they are attempting to eliminate. One suit with the attendant publicity will more than offset thousands of dollars' worth of advertising. We have few complaints on the quality of our seeds from the people who have paid and it would stand to reason, therefore, that if you can get in your money before there is any possibility of their attacking the quality of your goods you are going to have less poor advertising and less expense.

If we but figure the net profit on our sales, we will find that it will not justify long credits, as the interest that we pay on borrowed money is just that much taken out of our net profits, our dividends at the end of the year. At the same time we are standing the risk that naturally goes with every credit transaction. The older the debt the harder it is to pay and thus, often, the debt, through no fault of ours, becomes a matter of paying for "a dead horse."

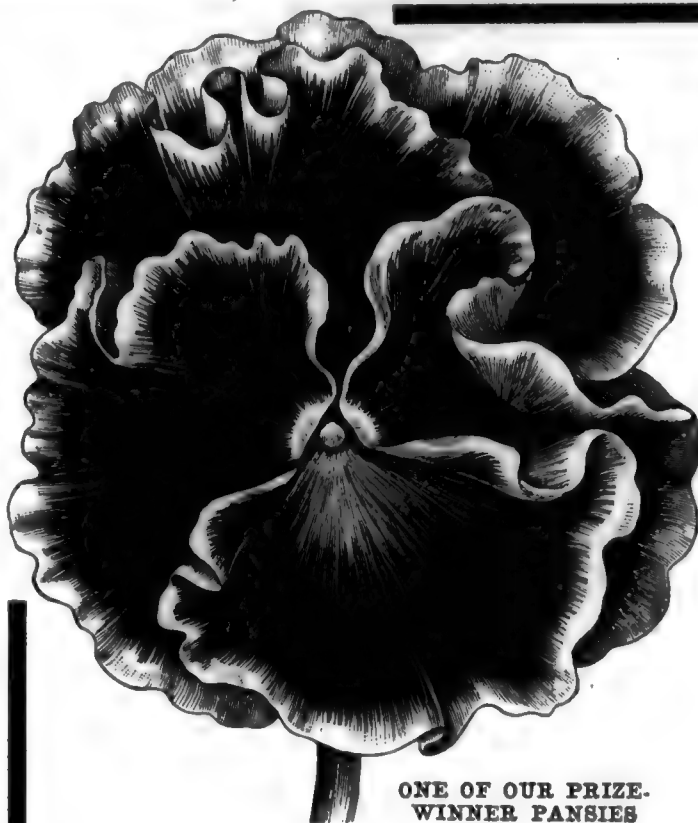

If a customer has no credit standing at the bank he expects you to carry him without any additional compensation. You make him a present of the interest that he should be paying, and you take an excessive risk.

Terms of Sale Essential.

In making collections the first essential is to have "terms of sale"; the second is to never forget them, or, rather, to never let the other fellow forget them; and the other fellow is prone to forget. It is here that the danger point arises, as many a man approaches his customer with an unwarranted fear in asking that which is legitimately due him. You will invariably find that the man who objects to being asked for a legitimate debt which is due is a man to be watched.

At the beginning of our present fiscal year the directors of my company, realizing the hard times to come, decided to pursue a strict policy of collecting; if necessary, at the cost of losing some business. We hardly expected the increase of business, which, nevertheless, we have had.

First, we made it a point to have our credit man and our salesmen inform every new customer of our terms of sale and to ascertain if these were satisfactory. Then we worked out a series of collection notices and letters at a time when our digestion was good and our disposition the friendliest. This insured a uniform method of collecting

This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing, and extremely weather-proof, enduring many storms without damage to its flower. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture, on heavy stems carried well above the foliage. Attractive by the brilliancy of its colors.

500 Seeds 20c; 1000 Seeds 35c; 1/4 oz. $1.00; 1/2 oz. $2.00; 1 oz. $7.50.

- 24—Kenilworth Show—A fine strain.
- 38—Mme. Perret—Red and wine shades.
- 40—Zebra—Fine striped mixture.
- 42—Adonis—Light blue, white center.
- 44—Black—Almost coal black.
- 46—Black with bronze center.
- 48—Lord Beaconsfield—Purple shaded white.
- 50—Bronze—Beautiful bronze.
- 52—Bronze with yellow center.
- 54—Velvet Brown with yellow center.
- 56—Havana Brown.
- 58—Havana Brown with yellow center.
- 60—Cardinal—Curled, bright red, dark blotch.
- 62—Cecily—Steel blue, margined white.
- 64—Goliath—Large curled yellow, blotched.

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

22—KENILWORTH STRAIN—The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are from 3 1/2 to 4 inches; it is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.

26—KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE—Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower or for exhibition purposes, for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 inches long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.

28—MASTERPIECE—A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance, large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stems.

30—GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES—A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich velvety colors, reds are particularly conspicuous; the petals being distinctly marked with three or five large dark blotches.

32—GIANT PARISIAN—The flowers are of enormous size, and beautifully marked, mostly five dark blotches on white and yellow ground. An unusually showy mixture.

NEW SEED NOW READY

All sorts and mixtures, except the new Pansy Princess, are $5.00 per oz.; $1.25 per 1/4-oz.; 5000 seeds, $1.00; trade packet of 1000 seeds, 25c; any 5 pkts., $1.00. Please order by number.

and eliminated the possibility of the credit man writing letters which would be dictated more by his heart than his head. The notices and letters are all intended to get the money without offense and are gotten up with considerable care, a feature which we are not always in a position to give each individual letter as it is dictated. These notices and letters are either printed or multigraphed, allowing accounts to be handled by an assistant without coming to the attention of the credit man until such time as they should have personal attention.

Eliminating the Personal.

Printing the notices has as its main object the elimination of the personal element. Your customer must realize that the printed notice which he has received was not printed for his special benefit, but that it is a part of a system which all overdue customers receive, and that it casts no reflections. The first notice is sent out within five days after the account becomes due and is worded as follows:

This notice is sent you as a reminder that your May (for instance) account was due on the tenth of this month. We will appreciate a prompt remittance to cover.

Now, it has been our experience that there is something wrong with a man who will take offense at this notice. This notice will allow the man who has overlooked making a remittance to immediately send the same to you and you would be surprised at the returns that result. Or it leaves open to him the opportunity to communicate with you.

Approximately fifteen days after the first notice has been sent out a second notice, also printed, is sent out. This notice states at the top: "Second notice; reply wanted," and outlines that the account as shown by our statement of a certain date still remains unpaid; calls his attention to increased cost of doing business as making it essential that collections be made promptly; again calls his attention to our terms of sale and requests an immediate remittance unless he desires to pay interest on the account.

Our third notice is a multigraphed letter calling the customer's attention to the fact that we have received neither a remittance nor a reply to two communications and, in the case of a retail customer, notifies him that we do not desire to believe that he has ignored them, and requests a remittance. In the case of a wholesale customer it calls his attention to the fact that we have received neither a remittance nor a reply and then continues in a frank manner as follows: "We ask you to bear in mind that our net profit on wholesale business is about two per cent on our sales, that interest and carrying charges on accounts cost us three-quarters of one per cent a month. Your account being past due has already reduced our

Porterville, Cal.—Lucien E. Rohlick, now with the Mission Garage, is opening a florists' business and plans to erect a greenhouse next fall. He has grown flowers as an amateur for fifteen years. The field seems good here, as the nearest place one can obtain flowers is thirty-five miles distant, and train service is poor.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Registration.

Frank D. Pelicano, 119 Gutenberg street, San Francisco, Cal., submits for registration the following new violets:

Anne Evans—This is a double violet and is a sport from Swanley White, with flowers much larger than the old variety. The color is porcelain blue shaded with lavender, about the shade of a Czar Peter hyacinth. The plant is strong and healthy, making quantities of fine foliage.

Quaker Lady—This is a seedling from a cross between a single white and California violet. The flowers are single and about the same size as Giant violet. A fine, strong, healthy grower. The color is lavender shaded with delft blue, a shade darker than the Palma violet.

Any person objecting to the registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

SWEET PEAS AT SAN FRANCISCO.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a panoramic photograph made in front of the Palace of Horticulture in the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco on the opening day of the exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society, reported in the Pacific Coast Department last week. The picture shows President Morse with the bronze medal in his hand, just presented to the society by the exposition authorities. At his right stands G. A. Dennison, the exposition's chief of horticulture. The rest of the group includes exhibitors and managers of the show. F. G. Cuthbertson, assistant secretary of the Sweet Pea Society, was manager. The judges were Fred H. Howard, of Howard & Smith, Los Angeles; John McLaren, and E. H. Smith, of San Francisco.

The sweet pea show was one of the most successful of the many special exhibitions thus far held at the exposition and served to put additional emphasis on the wonderful advance in public favor made by the sweet pea since the people have come to know the Spencer type. Large as was this show, it was principally made up of entries by private gardeners and amateur growers. There were only two competitive trade exhibits other than the class for designs. C. C. Morse & Co. put up a splendid display, including 200 varieties of the Spencer type. The exhibit was awarded the gold medal offered by the British National Sweet Pea Society and the medal of honor of the exposition company. In addition, the new variety, Scintillator, a cream ground Aurora, was given an award of merit. W. Atlee Burpee & Co. were the other exhibitor in this class and were awarded the British society's silver medal, the gold medal of the exposition and an award of merit for the new variety, Fiery Cross, which attracts universal attention because of its brilliant color.

Lynch Nursery Co., Menlo Park, Cal., had a fine table, awarded first prize in its class. There were four entries for the cup for best design, awarded to the Francis Floral Co. The other exhibitors were Pelicano, Rossi & Co., Frank R. Clark, of the Blossom Shop, and Mrs. R. E. Darbee. L. D. Waller Seed Co., Guadalupe; Waldo Rohnert, Gilroy, and A. C. Zvolanek, Lompoc, each of whom is a seed grower, put up interesting displays for advertising purposes.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

While graduations and school commencements have naturally helped some, it is the general opinion that each year sees a greater movement in favor of no flowers for these occasions. Sweet peas and carnations have been the most popular flowers this season and, as both are plentiful and cheap, a good profit has been made. Indoor roses are still on the scarce side and the quality is only fair. There is a good supply of both indoor and outdoor carnations and the prices remain low. A scarcity of local valley has been noted, but there is still plenty coming from the north. Gladioli are extra fine and meet with a fair demand. Practically all classes of outdoor flowers are in good supply and help out with window decorations rather than sales. Greens are plentiful and meet with an excellent demand.

Various Notes.

The annual picnic of the Pasadena Horticultural Society was held at Eagle Rock, June 20. There was a splendid attendance. About midday all sat down to an elegant lunch, comprising all the good things of solid and liquid order. After lunch, President Shields called upon various speakers, including Dr. Houghton, who was witty as usual, and H. R. Richards, who thanked the Pasadena brethren, as president of the Los Angeles Horticultural Society, for the invitation to join them; also J. Dieterich, Ernest Branton, W. Felgate and others. Mr. Branton exhibited a nice collection of his seedling gladioli, a race he has raised by crossing the old G. primulinus of South Africa with various species and hybrids. The coloring of these flowers is magnificent and Mr. Branton is now working toward size and a more open bloom—to do away with the hooded sepal of G. primulinus, in short. The Pasadena band of forty pieces was engaged for the dance music and a most enjoyable afternoon was spent, with a ball game and various athletic contests on the cards.

Everyone in the trade deeply regretted the death of Mrs. J. B. Menasco, wife of the prominent Covina rose grower. Mrs. Menasco was a richly talented woman, a splendid musician and a worthy helpmeet, and everyone's sympathy is with "Jim," as he is affectionately known. Mrs. Menasco died in childbirth, the baby being alive and thriving.

M. L. Germain, of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., took good care of those attending the convention of the American Seed Trade Association, when they called at Los Angeles. Meeting at the company's store at 10 o'clock, they were taken to various points of interest in the locality, including Busch's gardens, at Pasadena, the Gardena ranches of John Bodger & Sons Co. and the Johansen Seed Co., and others. Among the visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Leonard and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Watson Woodruff and two sons, Mr. and Mrs. Langbridge, Mr. and Mrs. Will Woodruff, C. C. Massie and son, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Bolgiano, and Messrs. Mangelsdorf, Kurtzweil, Simmers, Holtenbach, Keneo, Lupton, Berry, Donald Belt, Payn, Madson, Boller, Oscar Will, Parmelee, Hunter, Pommer, Lester Morse, McCullough, Howard Earl, Coy, Knudsen and others. A large contingent of the local men was also present and an enjoyable time was spent.

Mrs. Garrett, of Eagle Rock, has been seriously ill in a Glendale hospital and for a time her life was despaired of. The last reports, however, indicated that she was much improved.

Albert Morris, son of L. Morris, of the Morris & Snow Seed Co., was married last week.

Albert V. Amet, of the Mountain View Nurseries, Santa Monica, is a hustler. He recently enlarged his business by opening a branch at Ocean Park and a cut flower department at Venice, on Zephyr avenue. He is still working on his new carnation, Amalya Schoene, which is said to be a grand thing. Mr. Amet has now entire control of the business.

Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson report big business in graduation bouquets.

There is an excellent display of choice water lilies at Wright's Flower Shop.
H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Conditions among the retailers begin to show the usual vacation-season appearance, though there is really nothing to complain of in comparison with other years. The market continues well supplied with outdoor stock, mostly of acceptable quality. The varieties offered are about the same as for several weeks. The supplies of statice are rather large, and straw daisies, marguerites and Shasta daisies are all used in large quantities. Offerings of sweet peas are less attractive, but clean up fairly well, with moderate supplies. The supply of carnations is somewhat excessive, though anything really fine brings a fair price. Gladioli continue plentiful; they are perhaps a little better in average quality, but are still cheap. Panama is scarce; America is abundant. Some varieties of dahlias are coming in freely, among them some Minnie Burple and Delice of attractive quality.

Roses of practically all kinds are fine, though some outdoor stock is suffering from mildew. Offerings of short

Mr. Braunton exhibited a nice collection of his seedling gladioli, a race he has raised by crossing the old G. primulinus of South Africa with various species and hybrids. The coloring of these flowers is magnificent and Mr. Braunton is now working toward size and a more open bloom—to do away with the hooded sepal of G. primulinus, in short. The Pasadena band of forty pieces was engaged for the dance music and a most enjoyable afternoon was spent, with a ball game and various athletic contests on the cards.

Everyone in the trade deeply regretted the death of Mrs. J. B. Menasco, wife of the prominent Covina rose grower. Mrs. Menasco was a richly talented woman, a splendid musician and a worthy helpmeet, and everyone's sympathy is with "Jim," as he is affectionately known. Mrs. Menasco died in childbirth, the baby being alive and thriving.

M. L. Germain, of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., took good care of those attending the convention of the American Seed Trade Association, when they called at Los Angeles. Meeting at the company's store at 10 o'clock, they were taken to various points of interest in the locality, including Busch's gardens, at Pasadena, the Gardena ranches of John Bodger & Sons Co. and the Johansen Seed Co., and others. Among the visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Leonard and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Watson Woodruff and two sons, Mr. and Mrs. Langbridge, Mr. and Mrs. Will Woodruff, C. C. Massie and son, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Bolgiano, and Messrs. Mangelsdorf, Kurtzweil, Simmers, Holtenbach, Keneo, Lupton, Berry, Donald Belt, Payn, Madson, Boller, Oscar Will, Parmelee, Hunter, Pommer, Lester Morse, McCullough, Howard Earl, Coy, Knudsen and others. A large contingent of the local men was also present and an enjoyable time was spent.

Mrs. Garrett, of Eagle Rock, has been seriously ill in a Glendale hospital and for a time her life was despaired of. The last reports, however, indicated that she was much improved.

Albert Morris, son of L. Morris, of the Morris & Snow Seed Co., was married last week.

Albert V. Amet, of the Mountain View Nurseries, Santa Monica, is a hustler. He recently enlarged his business by opening a branch at Ocean Park and a cut flower department at Venice, on Zephyr avenue. He is still working on his new carnation, Amalya Schoene, which is said to be a grand thing. Mr. Amet has now entire control of the business.

Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson report big business in graduation bouquets.

There is an excellent display of choice water lilies at Wright's Flower Shop. H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Conditions among the retailers begin to show the usual vacation-season appearance, though there is really nothing to complain of in comparison with other years. The market continues well supplied with outdoor stock, mostly of acceptable quality. The varieties offered are about the same as for several weeks. The supplies of statice are rather large, and straw daisies, marguerites and Shasta daisies are all used in large quantities. Offerings of sweet peas are less attractive, but clean up fairly well, with moderate supplies. The supply of carnations is somewhat excessive, though anything really fine brings a fair price. Gladioli continue plentiful; they are perhaps a little better in average quality, but are still cheap. Panama is scarce; America is abundant. Some varieties of dahlias are coming in freely, among them some Minnie Burgle and Delice of attractive quality.

Roses of practically all kinds are fine, though some outdoor stock is suffering from mildew. Offerings of short stock by the smaller growers are extremely heavy, and only long or extra fine roses show any firmness in the market. Cecile Brunner and Sunburst still do well.

A big crop of Lilium giganteum is appearing, much of it trashy and slow to move. Several other kinds of lilies are also appearing and take fairly well. Valley is scarce. Gardenias are nothing extra in size, but are still good and a large cut sells readily. Orchids are hardly so plentiful, but as good as ever in quality; the demand is good. Hydrangeas continue the most prominent of potted plants. Boston ferns and other potted greens find ready sale. There is a large shipping business in Asparagus plumosus.

Various Notes.

B. M. Joseph has the sympathy of the San Francisco trade on account of the death of his wife, who passed away June 21, after an illness of several months. Many of the florists sent floral offerings to the funeral, which took place Wednesday, June 23. Joseph's establishment was closed Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mark Ebel, of Sacramento, made a visit to the San Francisco trade last week.

Frank Pelicano is bringing in a lot of potted yellow callas from his own garden. They find some demand as a novelty, though no effort is made to sell them in a large way. Mr. Pelicano has a second crop of Panama gladioli that will be ready in a few weeks, the first crop being off. He reports considerable success with Teddy, Jr., ferns, having disposed of a large lot from his houses.

Mr. Kooyman, of the Hogan-Kooyman Co., reports the booking of many substantial orders for Purity freesia bulbs during the last few weeks.

J. W. Wolters, of Los Angeles, made a short visit in San Francisco last week on his way home from Honolulu.

Joseph's shop is making a handsome showing of Lilium auratum, believed to be the first of the season.

Ferrari Bros., of the Ocean View district, have a fine crop of Lilium giganteum, about the best ever brought in here at this time of year.

J. Edward Johnson, of the Pikes Peak Floral Co., Colorado Springs, Colo., is visiting San Francisco and the exposition.

R. E. Dunleavy, who recently took a partnership in the flower shop of Witt & Dunleavy, in Alameda, has filed suit for dissolution of the partnership. He charges that he was induced to invest $500, and on investigating found the business in bad shape, and that his partner absconded, leaving him with an undesirable business on his hands.

C. W. Ward, the nurseryman of New York and Eureka, Cal., is stopping in San Francisco this week.

F. J. Elder, assistant manager for Lord & Burnham Co., Irvington, N. Y., is calling on the San Francisco trade.

The lawn of the convention garden in Golden Gate park is now coming up nicely. Many of the exhibits have already been installed and the plants are in good shape.

The Gill Nursery Co., of West Berkeley, has been sending a lot of Irish Elegance roses into the market this year and the buds are proving quite popular, though the crop has been too small to supply many shops.

The Market.

Cool, showery weather has held back the approach of summer conditions. Inside-grown stock continues to come in showing good quality, better than usual at this season. The supply of carnations about equals the demand; they have good color and stems, and are nearly prime in size. Valley is scarce. Orchids are in full supply. Roses are still abundant. Excellent sweet peas, grown outdoors, are seen everywhere. Inside-grown gladioli come in nearly in oversupply. Perennials, such as coreopsis, gaillardias, Shasta daisies, delphiniums, calendulas and gypsophilas, are plentiful and are used a great deal in decorations and bouquets.

Many eastern people are stopping a few days on their way to and from the exposition, and a large number of orders for Portland roses to be shipped to eastern friends have come from them.

The public schools held their graduating exercises last week, and the high school girl graduates carried arm bouquets. The orders for these have in most cases been given to the lowest bidder for the lot, an arrangement which is not advocated by the florists. The school authorities frown on the use of flowers at the exercises in the grade schools, and but few are used. They try also to prevent the use of flowers other than arm bouquets in the high schools. These rules are to some extent disregarded, but the florists lose a great deal of business by them. The quantity of flowers used at social events and funerals has been no more than normal.

In potted plants, a few hydrangeas are still seen. Gloxinias and fancy bedding varieties are offered.

Various Notes.

Theodore Weddell is planting about 6,000 mums. He is a successful grower of Bonnaffon, Maud Dean, Eaton and Chadwick. He says the carnation, The Herald, has proved the best producer he has ever grown. He wants to put in some new varieties of white and pink carnations, but is in doubt as to the varieties best suited to his conditions.

Clarke Bros. have grown some excellent gloxinias, which add a pleasing variety to their window display.

At the Peninsula public park are 3,000 Mt. Hood lilies, L. Washingtonianum, in bloom. It is strange that this beautiful native lily is not more commonly grown, as it is of easy culture.

The Oregon Sweet Pea Society will hold its annual show July 9 and 10, on the fourth floor of the new Meier & Frank building. Capt. Geo. Pope, founder of the society, is a well known originator of new varieties. He has thoroughly established four and is developing eight more. He says his experience tends to prove the reliability of the Mendelian law relating to plant heredity.

Wallace G. Garside, who was with R. C. Cook for six years, has taken a position in Clarke Bros.' store.

Martin & Forbes are showing some good auratum lilies.

F. S. Mulford, landscape gardener of the bureau of plant industry, is here examining Oregon native trees and shrubs to ascertain their desirability for general use in his work. He is also taking note of climatic conditions to determine what imported materials are best suited for local use.

R. M. Bodley is cutting some good gladioli.

RETAILERS' PROTECTIVE.

The American Retail Nurserymen's Association held its annual love feast Thursday evening, June 24, at Detroit, in connection with the A. A. N. convention. The affairs of the organization run along so smoothly that there is never anything much to do more than reelect the old officers, which was duly done last week. They are:

President—H. M. Marshall, Arlington, Neb.

Vice-president—B. J. Greening, Monroe, Mich.

Secretary-treasurer—Guy A. Bryant, Princeton, Ill.

NURSERYMEN'S PROTECTIVE.

The American Nurserymen's Protective Association held its annual meeting Wednesday evening, June 23, in connection with the A. A. N. convention at Detroit, and reelected last year's officers. They are:

President—Irving Rouse, Rochester, N. Y.

Vice-president—H. Simpson, Vincennes, Ind.

Secretary—Thos. B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa., reelected.

THE DETROIT CONVENTION.

Officers Elected.

At its convention in Detroit last week, the American Association of Nurserymen elected the following officers to serve for the coming year:

President—E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.

Vice-president—John Watson, Newark, N. Y.

Secretary—John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.

Treasurer—Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

New Constitution.

As stated in last week's Review, this year's meeting proved to be the most important in many years. Revision of the constitution amounting almost to reorganization was made in accordance with the suggestions of J. R. Mayhew in his paper on "A Better National Association."

The new plan provides for six directors to be appointed, each one representing a different section of the country. Only two of the six retire in one year, thus preserving the stability and continuity of the board's program. The four officers of the association are members of the board of directors, making its total membership ten. According to Mr. Mayhew's plan, one director is to be selected from the eastern states, one from the north central states, one from the western states east of the Rocky mountains, one from the southern states east of the Mississippi river, one from the southern states west of the Mississippi river and one from the Pacific coast. In the hands of this directorate, according to the Mayhew plan, will be placed full power to do anything necessary for the maintenance of the association along such lines as it may elect.

For Further Funds.

To provide more money for the administration of the affairs of the association, Mr. Mayhew's plan of assessment was adopted. By this each member will be required to pay, in addition to his annual membership fee of $5, an assessment proportionate to the volume of his annual business. The rate will be $5 upon each $10,000 business, so that each member's fees will hereafter be at least $10 a year; if he does $20,000 worth of business annually, they will be $15; if he does $100,000 worth, they will be $55. This phase of reorganization, however, still awaits development at the hands of the directors.

The Legal Phase.

William Pitkin's formal report as chairman of the committee on legislation east of the Mississippi river was supplemented by a verbal report of a conference with Curtis Nye Smith, of Boston, attorney for the American Seed Trade Association, and the executive and legislative committees.

The result of this conference was a recommendation to the association that Mr. Smith be employed as general counsel of the association. His duties, in substance, would be to keep informed of proposed legislation at Washington and in the various states, and advise and direct the handling of such legislative matters, to give frequent information to members as to the requirements of state laws, and to give from time to time to the individual members of the association such legal advice as they might need in connection with their business. Under the reorganization plan of the association, this matter was referred to the executive committee, which decided that it would be wise to make such an arrangement with Mr. Smith, and the details are now under consideration and will undoubtedly be carried out within a short time.

Mr. Pitkin also reported a conference of the committee on uniform state legislation with Professors Sanders, Warsham and Washburn, representing the American Society of Horticultural Inspectors, and Orlando Harrison and E. R. Lake, representing the American Pomological Society. At this conference the three interests came to an agreement on the draft of the bill for uniform state legislation. This was reported to the association, which passed a resolution approving the action of its committee and authorizing it to continue its labors and secure as rapidly as possible the enactment of the law in the various states.

THE PLAN OF REORGANIZATION.

Presented by J. R. Mayhew.

The most important paper on the program of the Detroit convention was that of J. R. Mayhew, on "A Better National Organization." In it he gave the ideas on which the reorganization of the association was based. He said in part:

"The first thing that comes to my mind when I think of our association's needs is money, for I am thoroughly convinced that no matter what policies we may adopt, our need for carrying out those policies will be money. The American Association of Nurserymen represents the nursery interests of the United States, and when we consider these interests as an aggregate, we have before us an investment of a vast amount of money. We have been able, during the past, to accommodate the administration of our affairs to a small expenditure, and while we have with a little money accomplished much good, none of us doubt that with more money we could have done many things that should have been done and that have been left undone.

"In considering the question of finance, doubtless because we have heretofore depended entirely on membership fees for our resources, I was led to believe that it would be possible to raise the membership fee from $5 to $25 or maybe $50 per annum, but after due thought on this phase of the question, and after consultation with several friends in the matter, I was forced to believe that so large a membership fee would reduce our membership, a thing that none of us want to do. If raising the membership fee would have a tendency to drive out from us any considerable number of nurserymen who at present are members of the association, I would not want to suggest it. The question, therefore, which confronts us at this hour is how to provide finances for our larger needs among 400 to 500 members so that the best results will accrue to the association at large, and at the same time will not prove a burden on the individual member.

"Another question that will at once suggest itself to you is, how much money can this association afford to spend in the administration of its affairs? I believe that we can afford to spend all that it is possible for us to raise, and that no matter how well our plans may be worked out, we will not have spent the money that could have been spent advantageously. I am unable to say with any degree of accuracy how much money the plan that I shall present would bring into the treasury of the association, but I believe that it would be good business, provided such an amount can be raised, to place in the hands of the executive committee an amount of not less than $10,000 per annum, and to double that amount if it is possible.

Why We Need Money.

"Why does this association need additional funds? First, beyond any sort of question, we need the services of at least one man for his entire time. We need a paid secretary-treasurer who will be capable of earning a handsome salary. To procure the services of such a man you must pay him a salary in keeping with the services he is expected to render.

"Second, I believe that you will agree with me when I say that it is an imposition to ask any body of men to serve as committeemen without remuneration, and to pay their own expenses while discharging the duties incumbent upon them. Your executive committee, therefore, needs money with which to pay the expenses of the different committeemen as they go from place to place in the discharge of their arduous duties, which costs the association not one cent.

"Third, we need money, and lots of it, for publicity. We have lost and will continue to lose until provided for, a great opportunity to keep our interests before the world by a properly financed, well organized campaign for publicity. I do not know how much money should be spent in keeping our interests before the people, but when I consider the dense ignorance of the people regarding the nursery interests of America, it is little wonder to me that our profits go up each year in the brush pile. No money, I take it, that we could spend would be better spent than a liberal allowance to a thoroughly capable committee on publicity.

Concentration of Efforts.

"But money alone will not build an organization. However desirable it is that we have money enough to finance

WINTER-FLOWERING ROSES

Specially Low Prices to Close Out Stocks Remaining Unsold.

We have a particularly fine stock of the newer and leading standard varieties in 3½ and 4-inch pots ready for immediate planting. The prices quoted below for 3½ and 4-inch stock are as low as the prices at which 2½-inch stock is usually sold. The demand for Ophelia is very heavy. If you want to plant this valuable new rose, do not delay placing order. While we have a nice stock of it at present, at the rate it is selling we are likely to become sold out before long.

Ophelia, Francis Scott Key, Mme. Edmond Rostand and Crimson Queen.....$20.00 per 100

Mrs. George Sawyer, Killarney Brilliant, Sunburst, Prince E. C. d'Arenberg, Lady Hillingdon, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Killarney Queen, Richmond and White Killarney.....$15.00 per 100

All of the above are strong grafted plants, with exception of Francis Scott Key, Mme. Edmond Rostand and Sunburst, which are own-root stock.

THE LATEST

Within a very few years there has been a great advance in the popularity of antirrhinums, commonly known as snapdragons. Our original Silver Pink came on the scene at the start. We worked it over and over, purifying its "blood," until we gave the world a most wonderfully productive seedling, practically pure. Continuing to experiment, we reached a new ideal, and now announce the debut of

SILVER QUEEN A MOST PLEASING AND BEAUTIFUL... ORCHID-FLOWERED SNAPDRAGON

Its color is that soft, silvery shell pink that has made its parent, Silver Pink, so famous. The upper petals of every bloom have an aristocratic orchid curl; it is from one-third to one-half larger than any known type of antirrhinum, and makes a very heavy, compact head, of marvelous grace and beauty. We doubt if it ever will be equaled as a fancy variety, or exceeded by any variety, other than Silver Pink Seedlings, as a commercial variety. It grows medium tall and is very productive.

We do not have space to propagate in great quantities,

so will offer in advance our limited stock, delivered by parcel post, at

$1.00 per plant; six plants for $5.00;
fifteen plants for $10.00.

We could give glowing words of praise from many visiting florists and drummers who have admired this wonderful snapdragon growing on our premises, but we prefer, as with the introduction of Silver Pink, to give you OUR word for it. Our reputation is back of it and you will find it just as represented.

We should like every florist to try this marvelous newcomer. Remember, the stock is limited. See our general ad on page 53.

NEW NEPHROLEPIS FERN—JOHN WANAMAKER

We will introduce the above new fern on August 1st, 1915. In presenting this fern to the trade, we feel confident that it will make a place for itself.

The John Wanamaker fern is a wonderful advance over all plain or wavy frond varieties. The side pinnae of the fronds are very fully undulated, giving the plants a very wavy appearance. It will make as many fronds as Teddy, Jr., plants in 4-inch pots having over sixty fronds. It is a beautifully formed plant, full and compact.

Orders will be filled strictly in rotation.

ROSE HILL NURSERIES
New Rochelle, New York

our affairs along larger and more intelligent lines, we need to concentrate our efforts; we need a more intensive, a more intelligent, a more effective organization, a concentration of efforts of the American nurserymen. I made this statement once before and was criticised for it severely, but, believing with all my heart that I am right, I am going to say it again: We have too many organizations. Our energies are divided, and as long as this is true we are not going to accomplish the best anywhere. Besides a great number of state organizations, all of which tax the energies and finances of the nurserymen, we are supporting a number of district organizations, southern, western, Pacific coast, etc.

"For sentimental reasons, perhaps, many of us will be opposed to any plan that will weaken or eliminate any of these associations, but for my part I have reached the place where above all else I want efficiency, and I believe with all my heart that efficiency will come with concentration of our efforts, our money, and our talents in one big central organization that will do the work of all. Many of us are members of all these organizations. We contribute our time and money to them all and are, in fact, loyal to all, but in the division of our energies and our money little is accomplished anywhere. I do not know how it is with you in your state organizations, but in my own state the organization is maintained by a mere handful of nurserymen. We never have any money to do anything with, and when a question arises which demands the attention of the association, a half-dozen of the nurserymen of the state must do the work and finance it. These half-dozen nurserymen that I refer to are members of the American Association of Nurserymen, hence the nursery interests would lose nothing if my state organization should go out of business today. I want to again say that, in my opinion, no work is being done by either the state or district organizations that could not be accomplished just as well, in fact, better, through one central organization, the American Association of Nurserymen. This being true, I do not believe you can accuse me of disloyalty to my state or to my section when I say to you that the best interests of the nurserymen could be served through concentration of our efforts within the lines of our national association.

The Executive Committee.

"In the hands of the executive committee I would place the entire management of the affairs of the association. I would make them, in other words, a board of management, and after providing them with funds sufficient to meet the needs of this association, I would give them power to do all things necessary for the upbuilding of this association, even to the power of choosing the man who should serve them as secretary-treasurer. I would have them to be to the association what a well organized directory is to a business corporation.

"I would make it obligatory upon this committee to cause to be gathered statistics showing the amount of stock in surplus, and endeavor by every known means to bring together on an equitable basis the man who has stock to buy and the man who has stock to sell. I would suggest to this committee the desirability of recommending to the members of this association the necessity of curtailing plantings whenever its investigations suggested that there was an overproduction along any given line. I would ask that they go further in the discharge of their duties, and at a certain season during the year, at that particular time when the best results would accrue, that they, through the secretary-treasurer, issue an address to every member of this association, the aim being to stimulate prices and eliminate cut-throat methods which have been too true of the past. And then, gentlemen, I have the hardihood to stand before you and plead that the recommendations of your executive committee be the basis upon which your wholesale trade lists shall be issued, and I would plead, further, that after you have issued said trade lists you stand or fall by the prices printed therein. I believe that when our wholesale trade lists are printed there should be at least a semblance of uniformity in prices, and that said prices as printed should represent, in a measure at least, the price at which our stock should be sold. I do not want to be misunderstood as suggesting a combination of interests that would be in restraint of trade, of suggesting combination in prices that would subject you to a revision by the courts of the land. The printing of individual price lists is an individual matter, and should continue to be so, but what I am endeavoring to say is that there should be some uniformity of prices on the same commodity, whether your trade list is issued in Texas or in New York."

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

WILL READERS PLEASE ANSWER?

In connection with a proposed central heating plant, we desire to know if other florists have metered their condensation of steam so that they could tell the proportion of pounds of steam for a carnation house per square foot of glass, as we are considering buying heat in this way and wish to compare with present cost of heating. We sometimes have a temperature of 25 degrees below zero.

M. F. C.—Colo.

GREENHOUSE AND RESIDENCE.

Can I heat a greenhouse, about 15x30 or 15x40, from a furnace under the dwelling house? Could the furnace be used for heating both the dwelling and the greenhouse? We have a large cellar under the residence and it is damp; so I want furnace heat and thought I might use it for both purposes. The greenhouse would be near the dwelling, say about ten feet away.

M. J. E. T.—Mo.

The letter does not state what kind of furnace it is proposed to use. Although not as satisfactory as a hot water or steam boiler, a coil could be placed in a hot air furnace and connected with heating pipes to be carried to the greenhouse.

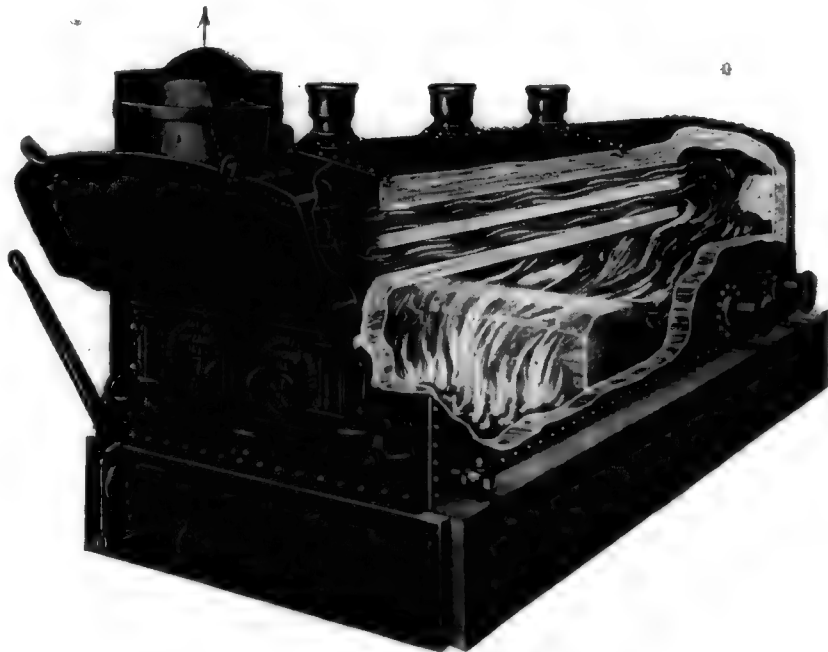

I would prefer to install a hot water boiler for heating both the dwelling and the conservatory. The connecting pipes could be carried in sewer pipes under the ground and, if these were properly insulated, only a little heat would be lost. It will require about two-thirds as many feet of 1½-inch pipe to heat the house as there are square feet of glass.

PIPING A PARTITIONED HOUSE.

Please advise me about the piping of a greenhouse, 28¾x175, fourteen feet high to the ridge and six feet high to the plate, with four feet of side glass and glass in both gables. The boiler is at the center of the north side of the greenhouse, which runs east and west. I wish to maintain a temperature of 56 to 60 degrees in one half of the house and 48 to 50 degrees in the other half, in zero weather. A hot water system is to be used, with the boiler top two feet below the return pipes.

I should like to have the outlet pipe from the boiler large enough for future extension, and I should also like.

The immense amount of direct self-cleaning heating surface and the thin vertical waterways cause this type of boiler construction to heat water quicker than any other form of boiler.

Hundreds of Florists' Review readers are using the Kroeschell Boiler and mighty is their praise. The past year has brought an enormous number of new customers who have seen our boiler in operation at other places. We attribute the large sales of the 1914-1915 season to the good work the Kroeschell Boiler is doing everywhere. With our policy—"the customer's interest first"—perfection of construction—factory-to-user prices—honest and "true blue" boiler ratings—you simply cannot lose.

if practicable, to use 2½-inch flow pipes in the greenhouse. The house is under construction now and will have wooden walls. There will be four benches, each five feet wide. There will be a partition in the center. Would you recommend valves on the flows or on the returns? I should prefer the latter, as being less expensive.

a foot or so under the purlin. Connect each of the flow pipes with four 2-inch returns, placing one coil on each side wall and distributing the remaining pipes under the two middle benches.

To heat the other end of the house to 50 degrees, I would use 5-inch pipe for the main flow and return, but only three 2½-inch flow pipes and twelve 2-inch returns will be required. The arrangement would be about the same as in the warm part of the house, except that the odd flow pipe should be three or four feet under the ridge. The flow pipes should be run with a slight fall, thus making it unnecessary to use air valves.

The gate valves may be placed either on the flows or the returns, but I would prefer to use three or four 2½-inch valves to three or four times that number of 2-inch valves. In case they are placed on the returns, one pipe in each coil need not have a valve.

FOR 2,000 FEET OF GLASS.

I intend to erect a greenhouse 25x50, running east and west, with the west end against a shed. The walls will be six feet high and will consist of two and one-half feet of concrete and three and one-half feet of glass. The boiler will be in a 5-foot cellar. How much pipe, and of what size, would you advise to use to heat this house to a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather? I shall use a hot water boiler and there will be returns under three 5½-foot raised benches.

J. E. S.—N. Y.

Although the height of the ridge is not stated, if the roof has about an average pitch there will be about 2,000 square feet of glass in the house, including the sides and exposed end. For this amount of glass something over 600 square feet of radiating surface will be required for a temperature of 60 degrees.

I would advise using three 2½-inch flow pipes, one on each plate and the other under the ridge. If the house is in a location where it is somewhat sheltered from high winds, sixteen 2-inch returns will answer for the coils, of which five may be on each side wall and the others under the benches. In case the house is much exposed, or if it is hard to heat from other causes, it may be well to place another return on the exposed side, but I should expect good results without this additional radiation.

The Market.

Business was good last week, with June weddings and much funeral work. Gladioli are plentiful and of good quality. Thus far the demand has kept them cleaned up. Lilies are plentiful. Roses are of good quality and plentiful. Carnations are not coming in so fast as they have been, as the season is about over with them. The only ones now on the market are shipped in from Colorado and the north. Outdoor cut flowers of different kinds have commenced to come in a little more heavily.

Various Notes.

Mr. Stevens is now the sole owner of the greenhouses of Stevens & Larkin, having bought out Patrick Larkin last week. The place will be devoted to carnations entirely. The ground beds in the greenhouses are being changed to tables. The cut will be consigned to T. J. Noll & Co.

A. H. Barbe has finished planting his houses of mums and is getting the carnation houses in shape for planting as soon as possible.

Miss Mamie Klein, the affable saleslady at Arthur Newell's, is spending her vacation at the San Francisco exposition.

George Brackenberg, of the George M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co., has returned to the greenhouses for the summer.

The Rosery has about 30,000 poinsettia cuttings ready to pot up. For the last four years a specialty has been made of them during the summer months, wholesaling a great many.

Patrick Larkin has closed his store for two months for a general remodeling.

Wm. Foith has purchased the Belinder greenhouses, where he has been for eight years. He has 20,000 carnation plants in the field that are exceptionally fine. The mums are all planted.

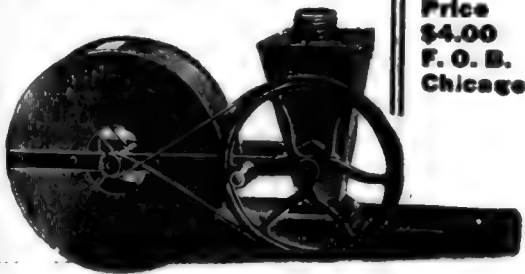

The Owl Floral Co. stores are closed for the summer. W. J. B.

The Market.

The usual early summer dullness has hit the market. This year it happened about a fortnight earlier than usual. The general supply continues large, with a demand far too small to take up enough of the receipts to give the market a firm tone. The best offerings in roses are American Beauties, Radiance, Russell, Taft, some of the yellows and Cochet and Kaiserin in outdoor stock. Carnations are no longer a great factor in the market and it takes a great deal of selection to pick out the good ones. Lilies and gladioli are both excellent and may be had in quantities. Sweet pea receipts, too, are good. Other offerings include orchids, valley, water lilies, Shasta daisies, snapdragon and cornflowers.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Critchell motored to Richmond, Ind., June 27.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Ohmer and son, of West Palm Beach, Fla., arrived in the city June 28 after a fortnight's auto trip through the south. They will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Gillett.

Miss Margaret Weiland, of Evanston, Ill., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Olinger.

Visitors include D. H. Dux, Jacksonville, Fla.; Mr. Gutman, with Atlanta Floral Co., Atlanta, Ga., and S. A. Gregg, Charleston, W. Va. C. H. H.

Before a large gathering of relatives and friends the marriage of Frank H. Kyrk to Miss Edna Ganzmiller was solemnized at the Poplar street Presbyterian church June 22, Rev. G. S. Brown officiating. Tall and graceful palms were banked on the pulpit and Easter lilies in white wicker vases were artistically arranged among them. Clusters of white roses tied with chiffon decorated the pews. The attendants carried pink roses. The bride's flowers were lilies of the valley and white roses. After the ceremony the guests repaired to the Palace hotel, where the wedding feast was served. The decorations here also were pretty, the color scheme, pink, being carried out in roses and chiffon. The groom is a son of Louis H. Kyrk, the wholesale florist, and a nephew of

SEE HERE!

When we tell you that Magic Manures are causing a lot of excitement among brother florists we are expressing it mildly. A big grower told us the other day that we "have succeeded in producing what he found to be the most satisfactory and most economical manure that was ever placed before the trade."

GROWERS!

"Magic" combines all the elements of barnyard manure in scientific proportions without a single objectionable feature. IT gives you what YOU NEED NOW in preparing your soil and does away with weeds, insects and the unpleasant odors. Cheapness of application and the absolute certainty and definiteness of its Plant Food Contents is always known. It's not only safe, but improves the quality of the flowers as well as increases the number of crops.

BE the master of your own business. Don't gamble on the soil. It's bad business. Learn now to use commercial manures. Buy where you can Buy Best.

Magic Manure is the best for greenhouse soils. You will agree with us if you give "Magic" a trial, and thank us for bringing this advertisement to YOUR ATTENTION.

ST. PAUL, MINN.

The Market.

Conditions continue quiet, with an occasional spurt of business. Stock of all kinds is arriving in the best of condition. Peonies are in their prime. Of sweet peas, only the earlier varieties are blooming. Campanulas, delphiniums and Pyrethrum roseum are ready sellers.

Various Notes.

The opening of the Merchants National bank in its new building, at Fourth and Robert streets, called for a great many Beauties; perhaps several thousand were sent by well wishing friends.

The St. Paul Floral Co. has again changed hands. Chris. Hansen sold the property and greenhouses to J. Christensen. Mr. Christensen recently sold his Randolph street place, and has taken charge of his newly acquired houses. This is one of the largest places in the city, and has always been successful.

E. P. Holm, N. C. Hanson and A. Lauritzen returned from a fishing trip among some of the northern Wisconsin lakes. They were well supplied with black bass.

Holm & Olson have a summer window display that is attracting considerable attention; a rustic effect is produced with running water, a millwheel, etc.

A. Currie, of Milwaukee, was a visitor last week. C. R. F.

G. E. Fink reports a fine spring business in bedding and vegetable plants, practically the entire stock being sold out. The benching of carnations and other plants for the fall trade will begin soon. Mr. Fink is supplying some fine roses to the New York market.

Charles Frost, grower of the Kenilworth strain of giant pansy seed, is now gathering the seed, keeping several men constantly engaged in the work. He has many orders that are waiting for the gathering of the crop.

Fred Frost is supplying the New York market with cut flowers of various kinds. He will soon plant for the fall trade. R. B. M.

You can Teach a Parrot to say "Just as Good," but—he won't know what he's talking about.

YESTERDAY, when I was riding down in the street car, these words in an advertisement caught my eye.

At once it popped into my mind that they exactly fitted some men who always buy on price alone; and are always telling you that what they buy is "just as good."

But you and I know different.

Take the question of commercial houses, for example. It's a well understood fact that the leading greenhouse manufacturers make mighty little on such building.

The margin of profit is so small, in fact, that if one of our competitors quotes you a much lower price, it's pretty safe to infer that the corners are going to be cut somewhere.

When a man claims that such a house is "just as good," won't it, after this, make you think of the parrot?

Sit down a minute while I tell you a secret.

We do not claim to make a house "just as good" as anybody's.

But we do build a house that nobody has yet built "as good." That house is our Reconstructed Construction. If you want us to prove to you its superior goodness—we are prepared to do exactly that thing. We are looking for just such a chance.

Shall we come and see you; or would you prefer to come and see us?

You know "we go anywhere for business."

The Net Result.

We have, of course, had some complaints on this method of collecting, but they have been few and the net result has been that we have seventy-five per cent less overdue accounts on our books than we had a year ago, that our collection expenses have been reduced materially, that we have had to borrow considerably less money from the bank than in former years and that today the number of notices that we are called upon to send out is comparatively small. In other words, our customers have become educated to the fact that if they do not pay we are going to get after them and stay after them until they do. On the other hand, we have found that many of our customers have requested that we give them a set of our collection notices and letters to use on their customers and are doing a better and cleaner business as a result; that lots of them are actually thanking us for the benefit we have done them rather than censuring us.

TEXANS TELL TRADE TRUTHS

Second annual convention of the Texas State Florists' Association notable for heart-to-heart talks. Speakers diagnose trade ills and prescribe remedies. Better business management the principal theme. Fort Worth practically suspends its ordinary daily routine to give the visiting florists a welcome and a demonstration of the quality of its hospitality.

PERHAPS it was because so prodigious an amount of work was done at the Waco convention in May a year ago, and in the fourteen months that since have elapsed, that the Texas State Florists' Association, at Fort Worth, July 6 and 7, found itself in position to take a holiday—the business of the meeting amounted to little more than the adoption of the necessary resolutions to keep going along the lines laid down at last year's meeting.

But because no radical changes were made it must not be considered that the convention was lacking in interest—far from it. The fact is that so much hard work had to be done last year, in the way of starting the ball rolling, that there was little time for anything else. This year, with the machinery working smoothly, there was opportunity for talk, for the discussion of the special problems that confront the trade in the southwest—and there was time to get acquainted, for the Lone Star state is so big the florists in the Panhandle heretofore have been almost strangers to those along the Rio Grande.

Large Attendance.

Fort Worth proved a splendid meeting place. The florists there are men of standing in the community and when they announced that they were to entertain the members of the trade from all over the state, the public largely laid aside its daily duties to assist in extending a welcome. Probably no other gathering of florists in this country ever has been so hospitably received.

So widely had the meeting been heralded that the attendance proved to be considerably larger than last year, although the S. A. F. officers who had been invited found it impossible to attend. The headquarters were the Westbrook hotel, but the meetings were held at the Chamber of Commerce. The convention was opened by Vice-president W. J. Baker and Mayor Tyra, L. J. Tackett speaking for the Fort Worth Florists' Club. H. B. Beck, of Austin, responded and then President Kerr took the chair. Reports showed the association to be doing extremely well for a yearling and it was unanimously voted to keep right on along the same lines.

The first two sessions were devoted principally to the reading of essays, which are printed in this issue. Most of them dealt in straight-from-the-shoulder fashion with the uses and abuses of trade customs in Texas and the free airing of views was of special interest because of its novelty.

Want the S. A. F.

There was spirited discussion over President Kerr's recommendation regarding affiliation with the S. A. F. and the hope expressed by many that Texas may shortly entertain the national organization. No action was taken beyond going on record in favor of every florist in Texas joining both the state and national bodies.

The morning session of July 7 marked the closing of the convention with the conclusion of routine business and the election of officers. Dallas was chosen for the 1916 convention. It was the unanimous opinion that President Kerr was deserving of a second term. Other officers elected were:

TEXANS TELL TRADE TRUTHS

Second annual convention of the Texas State Florists' Association notable for heart-to-heart talks. Speakers diagnose trade ills and prescribe remedies. Better business management the principal theme. Fort Worth practically suspends its ordinary daily routine to give the visiting florists a welcome and a demonstration of the quality of its hospitality.

PERHAPS it was because so prodigious an amount of work was done at the Waco convention in May a year ago, and in the fourteen months that since have elapsed, that the Texas State Florists' Association, at Fort Worth, July 6 and 7, found itself in position to take a holiday—the business of the meeting amounted to little more than the adoption of the necessary resolutions to keep going along the lines laid down at last year's meeting.

But because no radical changes were made it must not be considered that the convention was lacking in interest—far from it. The fact is that so much hard work had to be done last year, in the way of starting the ball rolling, that there was little time for anything else. This year, with the machinery working smoothly, there was opportunity for talk, for the discussion of the special problems that confront the trade in the southwest—and there was time to get acquainted, for the Lone Star state is so big the florists in the Panhandle heretofore have been almost strangers to those along the Rio Grande.

Large Attendance.

Fort Worth proved a splendid meeting place. The florists there are men of standing in the community and when they announced that they were to entertain the members of the trade from all over the state, the public largely laid aside its daily duties to assist in extending a welcome. Probably no other gathering of florists in this country ever has been so hospitably received.

So widely had the meeting been heralded that the attendance proved to be considerably larger than last year, although the S. A. F. officers who had been invited found it impossible to attend. The headquarters were the Westbrook hotel, but the meetings were held at the Chamber of Commerce. The convention was opened by Vice-president W. J. Baker and Mayor Tyra, L. J. Tackett speaking for the Fort Worth Florists' Club. H. B. Beck, of Austin, responded and then President Kerr took the chair. Reports showed the association to be doing extremely well for a yearling and it was unanimously voted to keep right on along the same lines.

The first two sessions were devoted principally to the reading of essays, which are printed in this issue. Most of them dealt in straight-from-the-shoulder fashion with the uses and abuses of trade customs in Texas and the free airing of views was of special interest because of its novelty.

Want the S. A. F.

There was spirited discussion over President Kerr's recommendation regarding affiliation with the S. A. F. and the hope expressed by many that Texas may shortly entertain the national organization. No action was taken beyond going on record in favor of every florist in Texas joining both the state and national bodies.

The morning session of July 7 marked the closing of the convention with the conclusion of routine business and the election of officers. Dallas was chosen for the 1916 convention. It was the unanimous opinion that President Kerr was deserving of a second term. Other officers elected were:

Vice-president

Robert C. Kerr, of Houston, President Texas State Florists' Association.

Harry Greve, Dallas.

Secretary-treasurer—L. J. Tackett, Fort Worth.

Press representative—Louis Oesch, Dallas.

Educational director—Fritz Hensel, College Station.

Directors—H. O. Hannah, of Sherman; Tom Wolfe, of Waco; J. E. McAdam, of Fort Worth; Bird Forrest, of Waxahachie; Chris Hauser, of San Antonio; E. E. Stone, of Dickinson.

Local Hospitalities.

The Westbrook hotel was headquarters and the office of the entertainment committee.

The whole of the first day, morning and afternoon, was devoted to long business sessions, but the evening was given to a dinner in honor of President Kerr.

On the afternoon of the first day a reception for the ladies was given in the elaborately decorated parlors of the Westbrook.

The outing to which the afternoon of the second day was devoted had as a special feature entertainment of typical southwestern character, pony races, cattle roping contests, riding bucking bronchos, steers, etc., in which the visitors were invited to take part. Another feature was the baseball game between picked nines of the trade visitors, with Frank Stuppy, of St. Joseph, Mo., as umpire.

Possibly the most interesting feature of the entertainment was the automobile ride over the city and suburbs, including visits at nearly all the florists' establishments in the vicinity. At the greenhouses of J. E. McAdam, Baker Bros. Co. and the Drum Seed & Floral Co. refreshments were served.

The Trade Display.

The trade exhibits were not so numerous as had been expected, but the display nevertheless was a large, attractive and interesting one. The following were the exhibitors:

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, a general line of florists' supplies.

A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, a line of store requisites, including wedding accessories, and a collection of cut flowers that arrived in fine condition.

J. A. Peterson & Sons, Cincinnati, begonias, adiantums, pandanus, cyclamens, etc.

Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia., a large line of willow baskets.

Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, sent a display of roses of excellent quality that came through in such shape as to attract much favorable comment.

Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago, a complete greenhouse model.

Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, a line of florists' supplies and a display representing the plant department at Morton Grove, Ill.

A. A. Arnold Paper Box Co., Chicago, a large line of cut flower, corsage and design boxes in a full range of sizes.

Raedlein Basket Co., Chicago, a handsome display of cut flower and plant baskets.

Pikes Peak Floral Co., Colorado Springs, Colo., a handsome showing of carnations of the standard varieties.

E. Farley, Denison, Tex., an excellent table of ferns of the Boston type.

Hans Schroeder, Temple, Tex., a fine display of begonias.

Weatherford Pottery Co., Weatherford, Tex., flower pots.

Paducah Pottery Co., Paducah, Ky., flower pots.

PRESIDENT KERR'S ADDRESS.

[A synopsis of the remarks of President R. C. Kerr in opening the convention of the Texas State Florists' Association at Fort Worth July 6, 1915.]

The twelve months since we last met have been busy ones for those entrusted with the affairs of our organization. We have progressed and increased our influence to such a degree that a review of the year might well be devoted to laudations rather than to suggestions or criticisms. The large gathering here today is testimony of the fact that the florists of Texas are awake to the importance of organization. One of our most valuable assets is to get together and get acquainted. This alone is worth our time and the expense of this organization. Let us keep up this good work and enthusiasm.

Texas as a Flower Market.

This organization is only a year old, and in that short time we have done wonders toward making this a better flower market. There were more flowers shipped to the outside markets this year than the last five years combined. We have grown more and bought less this year than any one year previous; and at the same time business has been normal—which goes to show what real good can be accomplished by real co-operation.

That Experimental Range.

Prof. Kyle will tell us today what the possibilities are for our experiment station. I believe that it is the consensus of opinion that the florists of Texas are entitled to some means of carrying on practical experiments with commercial cut flowers. The amount of money spent each year for flowers is amazing, and the fact that about ninety percent of this is going out of the state is certainly something that needs remedy. Every florist in the state of Texas should be vitally interested in this movement and avail himself of every opportunity to help the good work along. I believe our best means of securing this experiment range will be through the Horticultural Department at College Station. I would like to see a strong committee appointed to work on this matter, and keep hammering away until we accomplish what we want.

The Annual Flower Show.

We consider our first annual flower show a grand success. It demonstrated to us that this is the best means of educating the public in the proper use of flowers; also for creating a greater demand. It is also a great education for florists. I believe the members will agree that this is really the most important work of our association. I sincerely trust that the committee appointed for the ensuing year will work vigorously to see that this year's show will be larger and even better than last year's.

The Official Organ.

Every florist in the south should rally to the support of our official organ; it is filling a long-felt want. I want to state here that we could not be without the other trade papers, as they cover a field that we cannot cover, and the official organ is not considered a competitor by the other papers. Every florist should contribute articles and send in news items from their respective towns. If you are interested in the welfare of the southern florists, you will rally to the support of this organ. It is not my intention to criticize the other papers, but up to the last few months how many articles pertaining to southern florists or southern floriculture have you noted in these papers, and why? It is not because they are not interested in us, for they are vitally interested in every section of the United States; but the real reason is that they are experiencing the same trouble we are having right now, and that is in getting the florists of the southern cities to report and coöperate. They stand ready at all times to publish the news and any other articles submitted to them. Let me say that neither the association nor any of its members except Mr. Tackett is financially interested in our organ. It is only moral support that we pledge.

Business on a Higher Plane.

The florists' business as a rule is considered about a third-class business, and in about three cases out of four it is true. This is our own fault. We fail to conduct our business in a way that makes an impression on the business world. We are busy doing the work that a $2 man can do, instead of work at the desk, figuring profit and loss, store management, keeping a large and seasonable stock, discounting our bills, stimulating a demand for flowers, etc.

It is my frank opinion that if the florists will use their heads more and muscles less, their greenhouses will show a gain instead of a loss. It is high time we are waking up to these things and I believe this organization will bring about an improved condition.

Our Local Clubs.

When we first began our organization work the plan was to organize clubs in each city and centralize these with the state organization. While the local clubs have not been as active as they should, the reports show that we have accomplished a great deal. Remember the local club is no place to get together to discuss prices or control trade; nor is it the place to settle personal grievances. The florists should come together at the local clubs to work along lines to stimulate a greater demand for flowers and plants, such as pretty yard contests, coöperative advertising, stirring up interest in civic beautification, etc. The clubs that are working along these lines are accomplishing results. If your local club is lifeless, diagnose the case and see if the above-mentioned does not apply.

Affiliation with the S. A. F.

One of the most important matters for this organization to consider is the best means of working with the S. A. F., the parent of all floricultural bodies of the United States. We are all vitally interested in the welfare of that organization and we should take some steps toward stimulating more interest among the florists in Texas.

If it is possible, I would like to see our dues raised so as to include S. A. F. membership. If we have 100 such members we are entitled to a member on the S. A. F. board of directors. Let us show the florists of the United States that we mean business; that when we start to do a thing, we do it right.

An All-Southern Organization.

Before my trip to attend the meeting of the board of directors of the S. A. F. at Chicago, March 1, I made a pretty thorough canvass of the south to sound out the florists on the advisability of an all-southern organization. The florists throughout the south are in favor of such an organization as soon as business conditions are improved. I believe that in the course of a few years the time will be ripe.

When we strike we want to make sure of success, just as our Texas organization has done. Until that time we await developments.

LOCAL AND NATIONAL BODIES.

question of the greatest importance to all state and national horticultural and floricultural societies; that is, affiliation with the Society of American Florists.

I believe thoroughly in local organization in our profession, but my experience of thirty years of membership in the Society of American Florists convinces me that membership in these should be supplemented by membership in the national organization.

The state organization is limited in the scope of its usefulness, and at best can only accomplish limited results. The Massachusetts Horticultural Society, one of the oldest societies in our country, having been founded in 1829, has greatly encouraged and developed floriculture and horticulture in New England, and its example has been followed by many organizations all over the country. Yet many of its leading members are members of our national organization, and are continually testifying to the benefits derived from the national society. Our society, with its national charter and its membership from nearly every state and territory of this great United States, knowing the advantages and realizing the deficiencies of their respective state organizations, makes a mighty gathering, whose interests and influence reflect the impressions of our profession all over our country.

The National Society.

The objects of the Society of American Florists are "to advance the love of floriculture and horticulture in America; to promote and encourage the development of their industries; to classify their products; to hold meetings and exhibitions, and to coöperate with national and state governments and horticultural bodies in disseminating horticultural knowledge."

All persons interested in horticulture, professional or amateur, and manufacturers of and dealers in horticultural supplies are eligible to membership individually, and on payment of $5, other things being satisfactory, are admitted to membership. The annual dues thereafter are $3 a year, and any annual member in good standing may become a life member on the payment of $25 and be exempt from all future assessments. This society has handled questions of tariff, transportation, shipments, nation-wide publicity for our business, national flower shows, and other questions, to the advantage of all, during recent years especially, and will continue to do so more effectively in the future. The society feels, however, that every florist and horticulturist should obtain membership, and we therefore solicit the aid, assistance and coöperation of the Texas State Florists' Association and of other organizations. In order to encourage membership in our national organization, and at the same time to insure representation on our national board of directors, it is now one of our by-laws that whenever 100 members of any society have become members of our organization its president shall have a seat in our board of directors, thus, we feel, assuring coöperation.

Coöperation.

The dangers to coöperation come from within, and not from without, and the coöperative movement is no weaker and no stronger than the intelligent determination of those who engage in it; therefore, let us have in the national organization your assistance in bringing it about. As John Stuart Mill has said, "All advantages that a man may possess arise from the power of acting in combination with his fellows, and of accomplishing by the united effort of members what could not be accomplished by the individual effort of individuals." I believe that you will carry home from this convention a practical conception of the difficulties which beset our business, and the reward that awaits their solution, and I feel that we in the national society can help in this solution. I extend to every member of the Texas State Florists' Association a most sincere invitation to enroll as a member of the Society of American Florists. We look to the great state of Texas to send us some of its giant intellect to help in this society, and I feel that we will not be disappointed.

WOMAN'S VALUE IN THE TRADE.

[A paper by Mrs. Annie Wolfe Brigrance, of Waco, Tex., read at the convention of the Texas State Florists' Association, at Fort Worth, July 6, 1915.]

It is with the greatest pleasure that I offer an answer to the question, "Why Is Woman Indispensable in the Florists' Business?" There are more answers than one to be given to this question, and each alone could be reasonable and correct.

The major portion of the florist's purchasers are men, who prefer to have women serve them, for the reason that when a man is sending flowers to his mother, his wife or his sweetheart, or to someone else's wife or sweetheart, or some "real friendly" female acquaintance, if the florist does not happen to have just exactly what he wants, nine times out of ten a woman can suggest something that suits the purpose admirably. If you do not believe what I say, we will call on our honorable brother, Henry Greve, of Dallas, Tex., to answer in this cause. He saw that he could not get along without woman, and so had to marry a woman florist to run his business.

The Limitations of Mere Man.

I will give an instance: Many times I have asked my own brother to stay in the store for me five minutes in my stead, but on my return he has always been absent and I have always said to him, "Tom, where did you go?" His answer always was, "I was afraid some customer might come in and I do not like to wait on the women trade." And he gave me as an illustration our brother, J. E. McAdam, of Fort Worth, whom he never has caught in his place of business, but always finds a woman there, with a man as her aide.

In my honest judgment, the foregoing one solitary reason is sufficient proof that woman is indispensable in the florists' business.

Women are given credit, as a rule, for their artistic taste in designing, but their ability along this line is often equaled and frequently surpassed by men.

Woman's Taste and Tact.

A woman in a florist's place of business can generally give satisfaction to the women patrons of the establishment, as well as to the men. Some women, of course, have pronounced ideas as to what is the correct and proper thing in flowers, but they are, in the main, willing to be shown. If a woman florist, whose time and attention are given over to the work, can present arguments to show that flowers of an entirely different species are in reality just what the woman customer is looking for, the result is that the buyer leaves the shop perfectly content, and grateful for the suggestions made.

There are beauties in flowers that perhaps a man might be prone to overlook were it not for the wakefulness of woman, who can point out the delicate tints and shadings, and who, if the patron be a woman, can give many valuable pointers on the harmonizing of flowers with the surroundings, and on other decorative features.

I believe woman to be a most valuable adjunct to the florists' business, if she cultivates a love for flowers and studies, in earnest, the tastes and desires of her patrons.

Fort Worth, Tex.—R. Drumm is contemplating a number of additions and repairs at the ranges of the Drumm Seed & Floral Co. There are seventeen acres at the Riverside establishment and ten at the range west of town. A large number of carnations and chrysanthemums are growing for fall cut flowers.

HOW TO TREAT COMPETITORS.

[A paper by H. O. Hannah, of Sherman, Tex., read at the convention of the Texas State Florists' Association, at Fort Worth, July 6, 1915.]

Your competitor is your best friend. You may call him a friend in disguise. He keeps you from being sordid, arrogant, selfish and perhaps unaccommodating. Hence, treat him fairly, squarely, honorably, justly, truthfully and considerately. Remember that the success of his business may often add to your success. No firm is going to sell all the flowers; each has his friends and there is a place for him. Do your best; grow the best flowers and plants; keep the most attractive store; arrange your flowers most artistically; excel in all your decorations. Be original; be inventive, but never be a "copy cat," using your competitor's brain. Set the pace and let him follow.

Competition has given us such men as Smith, of Adrian, Mich., in chrysanthemums; Hill, of Richmond, Ind., in roses, and Fisher in carnations. Strive to excel. It is the same in all business; competition has given us the Cadillac, the Pierce-Arrow and the Ford. Make your own price and be sure you make it so it will leave you a profit. You owe this to your business and to your competitor, and if he is a man he will do likewise. Be on good terms; visit him and his store, and never do anything that would cause you to avoid his presence or his confidence. Honor and truthfulness should govern your acts toward him. Sell all the stock you can, but do it in the right way. Never, no never, let the thought occur to you, "I will cut the price or quality to keep my competitor from making the sale." That is dishonorable.

Figuring on Contracts.

If you are making prices on a large job of decorating, for a wedding, party or hall, and you find out his price and take the job for almost half his price, making no money for yourself but robbing him, this is almost grand larceny. In furnishing figures for such an occasion, state, as we do, that you are not figuring against your competitors, but will make the job complete and guarantee satisfaction. This is what we do, and if the other fellow wants it for glory, we do not. We are in business for money, but will seek glory and honor on other fields. We often cheapen work until the other fellow gets it, the customer knowing cheap price often means cheap work.

Never treat your competitor in such a way that he will censure you either to your face or to your back. Truth prevails and lasts. Special sales of surplus stock are legitimate and honorable, but to make floral wreaths for 50 cents, or to sell carnations continuously for 25 cents or 35 cents per dozen, is disastrous, cheapens the goods, and can bring little or no profit. It costs in Texas to grow flowers, and in buying we all know there is a cost and expense. The trade wants good stock and is willing to pay for it, as is done in other lines.

Acts That Dishonor the Trade.

Never "pull crepe" against your competitor, nor allow your agents to do so. That is dishonorable and unworthy of your profession. Remember, you sell God's most gracious gift to man in all its sweetness and beauty;

FLORISTS AS ADVERTISERS AND BOOKKEEPERS

WHAT is the use of growing a splendid lot of stock unless one has a means in view of letting the trade, be it wholesale or retail, know what he has? Then, what is the use of selling if one hasn't a system of bookkeeping to keep proper record of the sales, not only to know where he stands financially, but for future reference, to know what quantity to grow the coming year? We can thereby eliminate that awful pest of both retailer and wholesaler, gluts, and not have to run to some department store to unload stock. A preventive of gluts, which means a preventive of antagonism among brother florists, can be had through these two means.

How to Advertise.

Advertise judiciously and insistently. There are poor ways of advertising as well as good ones, and best results cannot be obtained without careful study. Select a medium which you know reaches the most desirable customers, make your advertisement brief and to the point, and above all make your opening display interesting and attractive. Put yourself in the public's place. How many advertisements do you read that are not started with some catchy phrase, unless you are looking for that particular line of stock? And there are few people who pick up a paper to find out who is selling flowers the cheapest, or what the most seasonable flower is. It is up to us to catch their eye and make them see who is who in the flower and plant line.

Last St. Valentine's day I decided to use a slide in all the picture shows in town. One can obtain these slides at the office of our daily paper. I am well acquainted with the advertising manager of this paper, and he asked me why I didn't use his paper for an advertisement. I told him I thought the shows would reach more people. His only reply was, "Then why do the picture shows in this town use one whole page of my paper to advertise their shows if your theory works out?" I told him those visiting the shows might near had to read the advertisements when thrown on the screen, while they would never look at them in a paper. He told me if my advertisements were overlooked, it was my fault and not the paper's, and I guess he was about right. However, we have found the following: Picture shows good, leading papers better, and direct advertising best. The last named we have worked down to a fine point. We have tried some of the various folders that are now on the market, but find our own letters pay best, and attribute the enormous growth of our business to this means.

Circular Letters.

In sending out these circular letters for any special day, we prepare one to be addressed to the married men, one to the single men and one to the ladies who entertain. Each letter is carefully filled in with typewriter, signed with pen and mailed under 2-cent postage. Of course, we endeavor at all times to make these letters attractive and brief. For our mailing list locally, we use the city directory carefully marked by some one who is well acquainted in the city. In fact, we have as many as three different clerks check over this list, all of whom are well acquainted in the city, so as to get a complete list of those persons most likely to purchase flowers. We also use these same letters for our out-of-town customers, using lists of names furnished us by our local agents in the different towns.

Now, as to out-of-town advertising. All advertising of this kind should, of course, be keyed, and all inquiries carefully recorded and followed up. For keeping record of the number of inquiries and of sales through our different advertising mediums, we use a monthly card for each paper. When an inquiry is received the name is recorded on a 3x5 card, marked at the top with numbers from one to thirty-one and a clip placed on the number corresponding to the date on which the inquiry should be followed up. When a sale is made, it is duly recorded on this card, and the card then placed in "sold" file, for future reference and for future advertising. Repeat orders bring our profits; the first order frequently is not of sufficient importance to reimburse us for what it cost to secure it. But a satisfied customer is the best advertisement, and we endeavor at all times to please, for we know if we "sell satisfaction, our goods will sell themselves." Advertising is worth little if you do not back it up with A-No. 1 quality, the best of service and the most pleasing courtesy.

One might think it takes considerable capital and time to

A. F. Koehle.

Cooperation.

The dangers to cooperation come from within, and not from without, and the cooperative movement is no weaker and no stronger than the intelligent determination of those who engage in it, therefore, let us leave in the national organization your assistance in bringing it about. As John Stuart Mill has said, "All advantages that a man may possess arise from the power of acting in combination with his fellows, and of accomplishing by the united effort of members what could not be accomplished by the individual effort of individuals." I believe that you will carry home from this convention a practical conception of the difficulties which beset our business, and the reward that awaits their solution, and I feel that we in the national society can help in this solution. WOMAN'S VALUE IN THE TRADE.

LA paper by Mrs. Annie Wolfe Brigance, of Waco, Tex., read at the convention of the Texas State Florists' Association, at Fort Worth, July 6, 1915.

It is with the greatest pleasure that I offer an answer to the question, "Why Is Woman Indispensable in the Florists' Business?" There are more answers than one to be given to this question, and each alone could be reasonable and correct.

The major portion of the florist's purchasers are men, who prefer to have women serve them, for the reason that when a man is sending flowers to his mother, his wife or his sweetheart, or to someone else's wife or sweetheart, or some "real friendly" female acquaintance, if the florist does not happen to have just exactly what he wants, nine times out of ten a woman can suggest something that suits the purpose admirably. If you do not believe what I say, we will call on our honorable brother, Henry Greve, of Dallas, Tex., to answer in this cause. He saw that he could not get along without woman, and so had to marry a woman florist to run his business.

The Limitations of Mere Man.

I will give an instance: Many times I have asked my own brother to stay in the store for me five minutes in my stead, but on my return he has always been absent and I have always said to him, "Tom, where did you go?" His answer always was, "I was afraid some customer might come in and I do not like to wait on the women trade." And he gave me as an illustration our brother, J. E. McAdam, of Fort Worth, whom he never has caught in his place of business, but always finds a woman there, with a man as her aide.

In my honest judgment, the foregoing one solitary reason is sufficient proof that woman is indispensable in the florists' business.

Women are given credit, as a rule, for their artistic taste in designing, but their ability along this line is often equaled and frequently surpassed by men.

Woman's Taste and Tact.

A woman in a florist's place of business can generally give satisfaction to the women patrons of the establishment, as well as to the men. Some women, of course, have pronounced ideas as to what is the correct and proper thing in flowers, but they are, in the main, willing to be shown. If a woman florist, whose time and attention are given over to the work, can present arguments to show that flowers of an entirely different species are in reality just what the woman customer is looking for, the result is that the buyer leaves the shop perfectly content, and grateful for the suggestions made.

There are beauties in flowers that perhaps a man might be prone to overlook were it not for the wakefulness of woman, who can point out the delicate tints and shadings, and who, if the patron be a woman, can give many valuable pointers on the harmonizing of flowers with the surroundings, and on other decorative features.

I believe woman to be a most valuable adjunct to the florists' business, if she cultivates a love for flowers and studies, in earnest, the tastes and desires of her patrons.

Fort Worth, Tex.—R. Drumm is contemplating a number of additions and repairs at the ranges of the Drumm Seed & Floral Co. There are seventeen acres at the Riverside establishment and ten at the range west of town. A large number of carnations and chrysanthemums are growing for fall cut flowers.

HOW TO TREAT COMPETITORS.

LA paper by H. O. Hamah, of Sherman, Tex., read at the convention of the Texas State Florists' Association, at Fort Worth, July 6, 1915.

Your competitor is your best friend. You may call him a friend in disguise. He keeps you from being sordid, arrogant, selfish and perhaps unaccommodating. Hence, treat him fairly, squarely, honorably, justly, truthfully and considerately. Remember that the success of his business may often add to your success. No firm is going to sell all the flowers; each has his friends and there is a place for him. Do your best; grow the best flowers and plants; keep the most attractive store; arrange your flowers most artistically; excel in all your decorations. Be original; be inventive, but never be a "copy cat," using your competitor's brain. Set the pace and let him follow.

Competition has given us such men as Smith, of Adrian, Mich., in chrysanthemums; Hill, of Richmond, Ind., in roses, and Fisher in carnations. Strive to excel. It is the same in all business; competition has given us the Cadillac, the Pierce Arrow and the Ford. Make your own price and be sure you make it so it will leave you a profit. You owe this to your business and to your competitor, and if he is a man he will do likewise. Be on good terms; visit him and his store, and never do anything that would cause you to avoid his presence or his confidence. Honor and truthfulness should govern your acts toward him. Sell all the stock you can, but do it in the right way. Never, no never, let the thought occur to you, "I will cut the price or quality to keep my competitor from making the sale." That is dishonorable.

Figuring on Contracts.

If you are making prices on a large job of decorating, for a wedding, party or hall, and you find out his price and take the job for almost half his price, making no money for yourself but robbing him, this is almost grand larceny. In furnishing figures for such an occasion, state, as we do, that you are not figuring against your competitors, but will make the job complete and guarantee satisfaction. This is what we do, and if the other fellow wants it for glory, we do not. We are in business for money, but will seek glory and honor on other fields. We often cheapen work until the other fellow gets it, the customer knowing cheap price often means cheap work.

Never treat your competitor in such a way that he will censure you either to your face or to your back. Truth prevails and lasts. Special sales of surplus stock are legitimate and honorable, but to make floral wreaths for 50 cents, or to sell carnations continuously for 25 cents or 35 cents per dozen, is disastrous, cheapens the goods, and can bring little or no profit. It costs in Texas to grow flowers, and in buying we all know there is a cost and expense. The trade wants good stock and is willing to pay for it, as is done in other lines.

Acts That Dishonor the Trade.

Never "pull crepe" against your competitor, nor allow your agents to do so. That is dishonorable and unworthy of your profession. Remember, you sell God's most gracious gift to man in all its sweetness and beauty;

FLORISTS AS ADVERTISERS AND BOOKKEEPERS

WHAT is the use of growing a splendid lot of stock unless one has a means in view of letting the trade, be it wholesale or retail, know what he has? Then, what is the use of selling if one hasn't a system of bookkeeping to keep proper record of the sales, not only to know where he stands financially, but for future reference, to know what quantity to grow the coming year? We can thereby eliminate that awful pest of both retailer and wholesaler, gluts, and not have to run to some department store to unload stock. A preventive of gluts, which means a preventive of antagonism among brother florists, can be had through these two means.

How to Advertise.

Advertise judiciously and insistently. There are poor ways of advertising as well as good ones, and best results can not be obtained without careful study. Select a medium which you know reaches the most desirable customers, make your advertisement brief and to the point, and above all make your opening display interesting and attractive. Put yourself in the public's place. How many advertisements do you read that are not started with some catchy phrase, unless you are looking for that particular line of stock? And there are few people who pick up a paper to find out who is selling flowers the cheapest, or what the most seasonable flower is. It is up to us to catch their eye and make them see who is who in the flower and plant line.

Last St. Valentine's day I decided to use a slide in all the picture shows in town. One can obtain these slides at the office of our daily paper. I am well acquainted with the advertising manager of this paper, and he asked me why I didn't use his paper for an advertisement. I told him I thought the shows would reach more people. His only reply was, "Then why do the picture shows in this town use one whole page of my paper to advertise their shows if your theory works out?" I told him those visiting the shows might have had to read the advertisements when thrown on the screen, while they would never look at them in a paper. He told me if my advertisements were overlooked, it was my fault and not the paper's, and I guess he was about right. However, we have found the following: Picture shows good, leading papers better, and direct advertising best. The last named we have worked down to a fine point. We have tried some of the various folders that are now on the market, but find our own letters pay best, and attribute the enormous growth of our business to this means.

Circular Letters.

In sending out these circular letters for any special day, we prepare one to be addressed to the married men, one to the single men and one to the ladies who entertain. Each letter is carefully filled in with type writer, signed with pen and mailed under 2 cent postage. Of course, we endeavor at all times to make these letters attractive and brief. For our mailing list locally, we use the city directory carefully marked by some one who is well acquainted in the city. In fact, we have as many as three different clerks check over this list, all of whom are well acquainted in the city, so as to get a complete list of those persons most likely to purchase flowers. We also use these same letters for our out of town customers, using lists of names furnished us by our local agents in the different towns.

Now, as to out of town advertising. All advertising of this kind should, of course, be keyed, and all inquiries carefully recorded and followed up. For keeping record of the number of inquiries and of sales through our different advertising mediums, we use a monthly card for each paper. When an inquiry is received the name is recorded on a 3x5 card, marked at the top with numbers from one to thirty one and a clip placed on the number corresponding to the date on which the inquiry should be followed up. When a sale is made, it is duly recorded on this card, and the card then placed in "sold" file, for future reference and for future advertising. Repeat orders bring our profits; the first order frequently is not of sufficient importance to reimburse us for what it cost to secure it. But a satisfied customer is the best advertisement, and we endeavor at all times to please, for we know if we "sell satisfaction, our goods will sell themselves." Advertising is worth little if you do not back it up with A. No. 1 quality, the best of service and the most pleasing courtesy.

One might think it takes considerable capital and time to carry on this line of direct advertising, but such is not the case. If you are not fortunate enough to have the use of a typewriter or any of the machines now on the market for this purpose, all you need is pen, ink, paper, envelopes and stamps. There is a druggist in our city—and, by the way, one of the leading ones—who follows this method of advertising by the following means: Between the days for which he intends to use his letters, during all his spare time, and we all have much of it, he writes his letters with pen. Bear in mind he has a typewriter and multigraph too, but prefers a personally penned letter signed by him, and he advises me it brings big returns.

Another important item to bear in mind is to select some slogan suggestive of your business or special line, if you have one, and use it always. You will find it will not be long until it is a by-word with all your customers as well as new customers. We use one in our local advertising; we contracted with the leading paper here for a number of local advertisements to run the whole year through, in various parts of the paper. All we used in these locals was our slogan, "When you think of flowers think of us," and unless you have tried it you have no idea how much attention such a slogan attracts. It will pay anyone to try it. In concluding this part of my subject, I would say advertise, and advertise liberally, but do it judiciously and carefully.

Bookkeeping.

So much can be said about bookkeeping, and so many of us florists need to be hammered and pounded so hard on this point, I scarcely know where to begin. Most of us think our line does not require any bookkeeping, in which we are badly mistaken. Almost any of us can tell at any time about how much he owes or how much is due, but how many of us can go to our books and tell which line of stock paid us best for the last year. I do not mean guess at it, but give actual figures. While our flower department is not kept separate on our books, it is kept in such a way that at any time we can see just where this department stands. For the general bookkeeping of the company, we keep an account for everything; for instance, all improvements are charged to a separate account; likewise interest, implements, live stock, growing, purchase, and so on. Every individual thing has an account of its own on our books; then when a sale of these various things is made it is credited to that account, so that any time we wish we can see just how that department stands and how much we have in it, and what we are getting from it.

Of course, most florists do not need so large a system as ours, but I would suggest something like this for even the smallest of us: General sales account, cut flowers, advertising, purchases, flower store account, greenhouse account, improvement plant purchases, delivery account, live stock or automobile account, supplies, etc. Whatever item is a factor in the conduct of the business ought to be on your books, that you may refer to it at any time and be able to tell how deep you are in it, and put on the check valve if getting an overload. It would be hard for me to state just what one should keep; each one should be able to tell which are the more important items, but above all, start right now, even if on only a part of the items, and you will like it so well at the end of the year that I am sure you will have a perfect bookkeeping system thereafter, and without much extra expense or trouble. Each year you will be able to see where you can improve on it and make it easier and clearer to keep.

Forms and Systems.

There are many forms on which to keep these records, but to most of us these need considerable explanation to keep properly, and the busy florist has not the time to take a course in such things. I believe it is best to work out a simple system of one's own, and by his own experience gradually improve on it, until he has a plain, neat, compact system, that will be a pride to him as well as a pleasure to all whom he may have any occasion to show or tell of it.

The most satisfactory system of bookkeeping is the double entry system, which, as its name implies, requires two entries for each transaction. This may sound like too much work to do, but by it one can always tell if all items have been posted in the proper amounts. There are only two fundamental rules to be followed to carry out this system; they are: "All items, cash, flowers, merchandise or whatsoever we may 'take in' go on the credit side of the proper account, and all items paid out or sent out go on the debit side of the proper account." The other rule is based on the same principle and is, "For every debit there must be a corresponding credit, and conversely, for every credit there must be a corresponding debit." For instance, we send to our flower store a dozen American Beauty roses. We debit our flower store account one dozen A. B. roses $3; we credit our greenhouse sales account by one dozen A. B. roses to flower store $3. Our flower store sells these to Mrs. John Doe for $5; so we credit flower store sales account by $5 and charge Mrs. John Doe's account one dozen A. B. roses $5. Later Mrs. John Doe sends us a check; so we credit her account $5 and charge cash account $5. Thus by charging the proper or selected accounts with the items belonging thereon, and crediting these accounts with all items belonging thereon, one is able to determine if it is profitable to run an uptown flower store or to hire delivery men, or to know out of which flowers profits are made, etc.

In conclusion on these subjects, I would say the moral of all this talk is, "Don't hide your light under a bushel; let it shine by careful, judicious advertising and reflect upon the pages of a perfect bookkeeping system."

WHAT A STATE RANGE CAN DO.

[A summary of a paper read before the Texas State Florists' Association at Fort Worth July 6, 1915, by E. J. Kyle, dean of the School of Agriculture at the A. & M. College of Texas.]

A short time ago, in order to gain a better idea of the status of the florists' industry, I sent out a questionnaire to the florists of the state. The following are some of the important points developed from this inquiry:

First. Fully eighty-five per cent of our cut roses, sixty per cent of our carnations and over forty per cent of our chrysanthemums are imported from out of the state.

Second. The principal reasons assigned for not growing more of these flowers within our state are: (a) Unfavorable climatic conditions. (b) Shortness of season. (c) Lack of equipment.

Third. The most serious insect pests are the red spider and the thrips, while the most damaging disease is the rust.

Fourth. The carnation is easily the best selling flower.

Fifth. The large majority of the florists feel that the college could best serve the florists' industry of the state by introducing varieties best suited to our peculiar climatic conditions.

The Importation of Stock.

Taking these questions up in detail, let us consider for a moment the importation of cut flowers into the state. It has been stated on reliable authority that over $1,000,000 worth of cut flowers are brought into Texas each year. I do not doubt this statement at all, because reports from a number of the leading florists show that considerably over sixty-five per cent of the most popular selling flowers are purchased from without the state.

It is quite probable that some flowers will always be brought into the state for the retail trade, but the per cent should be far below what it is now. The fact that the person who purchases flowers in this state has to pay often four or five commissions works an injustice not only to the purchaser, but to the florist who does the selling. The sale of cut flowers will never be what it should be under present conditions. It seems to me, therefore, that one of the first problems that a range of glass at the college will enable us to take up is the question of how to profitably produce within our state more of the cut flowers used by our people.

Climate and Varieties.

The majority of the florists feel that the principal reason why there are not more flowers grown in the state is on account of unfavorable climatic conditions. They are probably right. And right here we come face to face with an exceedingly difficult proposition.

John Hasson's Shop at Atlantic City in 1913.

You can change your soil; you can often eradicate, or at least modify, the injury from destructive pests or disease, but when you come to tackle the elements, you are "up against it," as a small boy would put it. You can, of course, construct expensive buildings and in this way change the effect of the climate to some extent, but I take it that what the average florist in this state wants is to be shown how he can best grow his carnations, roses, etc., under normal conditions, so as to compete successfully against out-of-state growers.

This presents another interesting as well as perplexing problem, the problem of testing out a large number of varieties in the hope of getting a few that are suited to our conditions, and also the breeding and crossing of plants, the work being done under our existing conditions and with the most promising varieties in the hope that the offspring may develop character still more promising. This is a problem, the solution of which may be made possible by the establishment of a range of glass at the A. & M. College.

Insects and Diseases.

The question of insect pests and diseases, while always troublesome, is not as perplexing as the problems outlined above. The florists of this state can undoubtedly save themselves trouble and money by keeping in touch with our state entomologist and our state pathologist, both of whom are located at College Station. To show you the importance of keeping in close touch with these men, a majority of the florists from whom I heard named the red spider as their most serious insect pest. If the florists would take a few minutes' time, enough to write a brief letter, and spend enough money to purchase a 2-cent stamp, they could find out from our state entomologist that the red spider can easily and inexpensively be controlled by applying powdered sulphur with a dust sprayer or a sack attached to the end of a stick.

Competent Assistants.

Still another important service for the college to perform is the training and educating of young men in the art of floriculture. I am pleased to be able to say to you that the college is offering the following courses of study relating to floriculture: First, Floriculture and Landscape Gardening. The first part of this course is devoted to a full discussion of the methods of growing bedding plants, cut flowers, orchids, palms, etc. The second part is devoted to a study of the history and development of landscape gardening and the engineering and planting of parks, cemeteries and home grounds. Second, The Introduction to Landscape Art. This is a cultural course given for the purpose of developing in the student a larger appreciation of landscape art. Third, Landscape Design.

This course gives the principles underlying landscape art. It also deals with solving and drafting of problems dealing with landscape work. Fourth, History of Landscape Design. This course embraces a comprehensive study of the development of landscape design. In addition to the courses outlined above, related courses are given in plant culture and propagation, plant breeding, etc.

The college has employed Fritz Hensel to teach landscape art and floriculture. Mr. Hensel is a son of a commercial florist in San Antonio. He took his B. S. degree in horticulture at the A. & M. College of Texas, his M. S. degree in pomology at Ames, Iowa, and his M. S. A. degree in landscape art and floriculture at Cornell University. You will therefore readily see that Mr. Hensel is exceptionally well prepared to develop this work.

An Appropriation Secured.

I am sure that you will also be interested in knowing that the last legislature made an appropriation of $5,000 for each of the next two years for the construction of greenhouses at the A. & M. College. This was considerably less than was asked for, and while most of the building will have to be used for departmental purposes, I feel confident that we shall also be able to start some work that will be of interest as well as value to the florists of the state.

WATCH HIM GROW.

"Movie of a Man Advancing in the Florists' Trade" would be a good title for the three photographs on pages 12 and 13, in these days when the cinematograph is the leader in the graphic arts. Jack Hasson, the hero of the tale, is shown in a single-column illustration as he did his business in 1910, at Atlantic City, N. J. He graduated to a stand in 1912 and further advanced in 1913 to the position denoted by the second illustration. In 1914 he opened

This course embraces a comprehensive study of the development of landscape design. In addition to the courses outlined above, related courses are given in plant culture and propagation, plant breeding, etc.

The college has employed Fritz Hensel to teach landscape art and floriculture. Mr. Hensel is a son of a commercial florist in San Antonio. He took his B. S. degree in horticulture at the A. & M. College of Texas, his M. S. degree in pomology at Ames, Iowa, and his M. S. A. degree in landscape art and floriculture at Cornell University. You will therefore readily see that Mr. Hensel is exceptionally well prepared to develop this work.

An Appropriation Secured.

I am sure that you will also be interested in knowing that the last legislature made an appropriation of $5,000 for each of the next two years for the construction of greenhouses at the A. & M. College. This was considerably less than was asked for, and while most of the building will have to be used for departmental purposes, I feel confident that we shall also be able to start some work that will be of interest as well as value to the florists of the state.

WATCH HIM GROW.

"Movie of a Man Advancing in the Florists' Trade" would be a good title for the three photographs on pages 12 and 13, in these days when the cinematograph is the leader in the graphic arts. Jack Hasson, the hero of the tale, is shown in a single-column illustration as he did his business in 1910, at Atlantic City, N. J. He graduated to a stand in 1912 and further advanced in 1913 to the position denoted by the second illustration. In 1914 he opened a life-sized store, and his 1915 circumstances are shown by the final view. This is the interior of the French Flower Shop, located at 1018 Atlantic avenue, Atlantic City, of which Jack Hasson is the proprietor. He speaks French fluently, and says it is of considerable help to him in his business.

CARNATIONS IN TEXAS.

[A paper by Bird Forrest, of Waxahachie, read before the Texas State Florists' Association at Fort Worth July 6, 1915.]

Growing carnations for profit means growing them so as to get the largest possible returns from the plants with the smallest possible outlay, consistent with growing good stock, and the profits will be larger if you err on the side of more attention than is absolutely necessary than they will if you are a few hours late in watering, a few days late in putting on supports, or cultivating, and neglect the red spider till he gets a hold.

What Texans Need.

Our conditions are entirely different, in many respects, from those of our brothers farther north. Our stock must be rooted much earlier to be established in the pots before the sun gets too hot, and to be ready for our earlier planting in the field. Also, the period when there are no outdoor flowers is much shorter here. So we must use every effort to get as much as possible out of our stock during our shorter period.

This makes it necessary that we have heavy, stocky plants to bench; plants that will get right to work; that we give them the best of soil in the benches, and constant care and attention; to see that they are planted just the right depth; that they get enough, and still not too much water; that weeds and grass are kept pulled out, and soil frequently stirred. Effective supports should be put on early. Given good plants at benching time, the year's returns depend on constant and prompt attention to the needs of the plants.

The varieties of carnations we now grow originated in a cooler climate than ours. The cool nights come earlier in the fall and start the plants off vigorously while ours are sweltering in the heat. This disadvantage can be overcome to some extent by close attention to watering and spraying. Can not some of you more experienced growers breed up a strain of carnations that will be, you might say, native to our climate and more resistant to our hot, dry summer atmosphere? The proposed greenhouse at College Station would be useful along this line.

Eradicating Disease.

Our greatest enemies to the carnation are red spider and stem-rot. Red spider is easily handled by promptly spraying every spot where they appear with arsenic; one pound to ten pounds sugar, made to a thick syrup or paste with warm water, not cooked. One ounce of this mixture to one gallon of water, put on with a compressed air sprayer, will keep them cleaned out. The mixture is not strong enough to be dangerous, as you would have to eat a big bunch of stems to get enough to hurt you.

The last two years we have practically eliminated stem-rot in the greenhouses by having our soil clean, with clean benches and proper attention to watering at benching time. When changing the soil several years ago, we emptied one bench, cleaned and whitewashed it, and filled it as we emptied the next one; that is, a man would carry out a bucket of old soil from bench No. 2 and bring back a bucket of new soil for bench No. 1, using the same bucket. This we found would leave a small quantity of old soil with the new—enough to transfer any disease or fungus that might be in the soil. We had an attack of club-root four years ago. We then adopted the method of cleaning the soil out of the entire house, washing the benches well, and then giving them a thorough whitewashing, also whitewashing the shovels and buckets before handling the new soil to fill the benches. This almost eliminated the trouble, but we still had a little of it. We thought possibly the infection was carried on the carnation support stakes, of which there is one to every plant. So last season, in addition to other precautions, we soaked the stakes in whitewash. This season we have been entirely free of it.

Infection also can be carried in freesia and gladiolus bulbs that are grown in carnation benches. But these can easily be cleaned by washing in formaldehyde solution. In cleaning ours, we also put them in a bucket and poured a teaspoonful of carbon bisulphide on them, putting a paper over the top to keep the fumes in. One or the other, or both, of these plans effectively cleaned them.

The Best Bench.

We use concrete benches cast in one piece, five feet wide and six inches deep. No form of bench can be so easily cleaned and disinfected. Also, it lasts a lifetime and cost of material is less than the cost of lumber to make the same bench. A concrete bench five feet wide, with three rows of legs spaced four feet apart, costs less than 35 cents per running foot, including labor; gravel at $2 per yard; cement at 50 cents per sack. This may be considered a digression from the subject in hand, but we believe anything that tends to lessen the cost of production is pertinent, and cement benches that never need repairs, do not decay, do not hold bugs, insects and fungous diseases from year to year are certainly an item when it comes to keeping down expenses.

The Essential Points.

To get back to carnations, these are a few of the things we have found essential: Healthy stock from which to take cuttings (we do not like to pull leaves off the cuttings or top them, as both leave open wounds); an absolutely clean cutting bench, with good drainage and clean sand. Also, we have better success without bottom heat; cuttings spaced far enough apart to see the sand freely between each one; watered well when put in, and sprinkled lightly every bright day; covered with papers the first two weeks on sunny days; papers put on about 9:30 or 10 a. m. and taken off about 3 p. m. Our best plants have always come from cuttings put in sand December 10 to January 1.

Close attention to the little plants in pots to see that they are kept in good shape (we keep them in a cool house), planting to the field March 10 to 20; kept perfectly clean and plowed at least once a week, to get shapely plants, this is the most important time. Keep them topped and standing straight up. Bench- ed June 25 to July 10. See that they are not planted deeper than they were in the field. If planted deeper, it is an invitation to stem-rot. We plant ours seven rows across a 5-foot bench, eleven inches between the rows. We have had excellent success planting in soil made by high water, deposited along the creek. Any soil that will grow blood-weeds twelve to fifteen feet high will grow good carnations. We haul our soil up one year ahead and stack in layers, five loads of soil to one of manure from cotton-seed-meal-fed cattle; this turned over twice to get it in good shape.

In conclusion, let me say that if you have good carnations and plenty of them, and any kind of market for them, the profit will show up all right.

A WOMAN GROWER'S IDEAS.

[A paper by Elizabeth O. Weissinger, of Beaumont, read before the Texas State Florists' Association at Fort Worth, July 6, 1915.]

Carnation culture is a comprehensive subject, bounded by an infinite diversity of opinion. But, seven years ago, when we took our courage in both hands, lacking capital and experience, and handicapped by skirts, the ultimatum had gone forth that carnations could not be successfully or profitably grown in southeastern Texas. Nothing daunted, we built a house especially for carnations, 28x150, running north and south, with roof and side ventilation, raised benches five feet wide, steam-heated. We get field-grown plants from Furrow & Co., of Guthrie, Okla.; hence we do not have to worry about our stock and always get the best.

This season we planted White, Light-pink and Rose-pink Enchantress, also Herald. For our compost we use three or four parts good maiden loam to one of well decomposed stable fertilizer, which has been prepared at least three months in advance, before putting it into the benches, which have been thoroughly scrubbed and whitewashed. We order plants for September delivery and plant directly to the benches, twelve inches apart, and give a good watering to settle the soil above the roots.

We find many details about carnation growing that require constant attention and unremitting care. Spraying is most important during the warm days we have in the early fall. By this means the temperature can be reduced to a moist, growing atmosphere. We frequently spray the under part of the foliage where the red spider makes its appearance, and always spray quickly.

We give our plants strong wire support and, though they may wilt a little during the day, as long as they are erect and crisp each morning we do not worry over losing them. The way the soil is handled has a great deal to do with what you get out of it. Judicious use of fertilizer and lime, with constant forking to keep in good mechanical condition, and the "seeing eye" that apprises instantly of lurking danger.

The Beaumont Floral Co., owned and managed by women, represents faithful toil and the achievement possible to even unskilled women in the man-made world.

POND LILIES IN MARYLAND.

One of the show places at Tuxedo Park, Md., is the water lily ponds of Joseph W. Corridon. These are now at their best and he is obtaining an abnormally heavy cut of extra fine stock. The series of ponds are well laid out, for each is slightly lower in turn than the previous pond, the water emptying from one to the other and finally overflowing into a branch. Mr. Corridon does the greater part of the work himself. He is doing a large shipping business this year, in addition to supplying a number of the stores in Washington and Baltimore.

BUSINESS MANAGEMENT.

[A paper by R. C. Kerr, of Houston, read at the convention of the Texas State Florists' Association at Fort Worth July 6, 1915.]

I suppose there are no two features of our business that are more neglected than those pertaining to advertising and bookkeeping. There is no line of business that needs a thorough system of bookkeeping and judicious advertising more than the florists' business.

How many florists in Texas today know whether or not their greenhouse is a paying proposition? While visiting over the state this year, I have been amazed at the great amount of wasted room in the greenhouses of Texas. Are your greenhouses producing 50 cents per square foot each year? If not, then they are a losing proposition. All over and above this amount is profit. As the average cost of labor, stock and fuel, the above figure is a fair estimate by an authority.

Eliminate the Unprofitable.

The reason this subject is so vitally interesting to me is that about six months ago we had an auditor install a new set of books—and I want to tell you we have had some eye-openers. I am frank to say that our greenhouses up to that time had never made us one dollar. We are now culling out the stock that is unprofitable and adding more stock that has showed profit.

This is not only so with our greenhouses, as we have had many leaks in our store. The auditor opened a complete set of books for the store, one that shows what each department is doing, funeral work, plants, decorating, miscellaneous, etc. We have found the average cost of each delivery, the percentage of the cost of advertising, and other things of this nature that there was no way of getting at before. It is positively staggering, on investigation, to find the great losses we have been suffering, and to think that we did business in such a reckless manner. There is no other business that can be conducted so badly as some of us conduct the florists' business and have it last a year's time.

J. W. Corridon, of Tuxedo Park, Md., and a Few of his Lilies.

Protect Your Credit.

Another matter I want to touch upon is that of our credit. Many florists are careless with their credit. Did you ever figure what you can save in one year's time by discounting your bills? If not, do so and you will find it will run into a nice sum. Then, too, you can face the world with a smile and say you owe no one.

A prominent florist from central Texas tells me he owes no one except his banker. This florist is what I call a good business man. The florists of Texas today are in better condition financially than those in some other sections, so let us strive to clean the sheets and pay all our obligations, even though we have to go to our banker to do it. Tell the world the florists of Texas owe no one; we have the real cash; give us the goods.

Advertising for Retailers.

Now just a few words on advertising. For the last three years this has been my hobby, and we have increased our business wonderfully by consistent advertising. I want to say that advertising can make you, or it can break you. It is something you will have to study closely. In newspaper advertising, ten per cent of the people who read the paper buy flowers; ten per cent of the flower buyers read your ad, and ten per cent of those who see your ad are ready to buy flowers. You pay for 100 per cent of the circulation and get results from one-tenth of one per cent. This may be slightly overdrawn, but it is a safe figure. My point is this—your medium must reach the flower-buying people.

With the coming of the moving picture shows, there opened up another good avenue for advertising. But this must be only in the best theaters; and the same rules that apply to the newspapers apply to the moving picture shows. Don't pay for dead circulation. Your advertising campaign should be laid out a year ahead and followed out to the letter, in order to get results.

Now, just a word about direct advertising. Frankly, I believe more study should be given to direct advertising, as I feel we get more good out of this method than any other. The most essential thing is a good mailing list. Letters or literature should be well prepared and well written; not too much to say and to the point. I believe personal letters interest the customer more than stock folders. They feel there is something of a personal nature in the letter and will read it through.

Perhaps the best advertisement after all is a satisfied customer. When you spend your money for advertising, and get the customer to your store, by all means have him go away pleased. Let your motto be, "Satisfaction Must Be Yours."

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Canterbury Bells.

Canterbury bells make a glorious show in the garden at this season. It is rather late to sow seeds for securing good flowering plants a year hence. It pays to prick off the little seedlings into coldframes in well pulverized soil. Shade for a few days and protect from torrential rains. On cool, cloudy days transplant them, allowing a foot between the plants in the rows. If these little plants can go into the field before the end of July, they will make good crowns for potting up for forcing, or to use for bedding out. The call for this class of old-fashioned plants is constantly increasing and Canterbury bells are among the first favorites. The singles are far the best to grow, as their lighter flowers stand up with hardly any staking outdoors, and with few stakes in pots. The hose in hose, or calycanthema, type is handsome, but needs a lot of staking in pots and weighs down badly with rain outdoors. The doubles are much too heavy and far less decorative than the singles and hose in hose varieties.

Foxgloves.

Foxgloves are popular old-fashioned flowers now in season. They are good in solid beds, dotted in the herbaceous borders, in rockeries, or naturalized in the wild garden or in woodlands. In the latter location they will frequently seed and perpetuate themselves, and few flowers are more beautiful in the hardy garden at this season. It is not yet too late to make a sowing of these in a coldframe, as the plants make a rapid growth in late summer and fall. Ivory's spotted and gloxiniaeflora are good strains. Sow the seeds broadcast and, as they are quite small, cover lightly; also, sow as thinly as possible. The seedlings should be transplanted just as soon as they can be handled, or they will soon spoil one another. Also, if left crowded in hot, damp weather, whole patches are liable to damp off.

Hollyhocks.

Hollyhocks are among the most stately and showy of July-flowering hardy perennials. The rust which practically destroyed them a generation ago is now less in evidence, but it is not by any means absent. A spraying with Bordeaux mixture once a week, from May 1 until the flowers show color, has always kept my plants clean. Some never spray and still have clean plants. Others lose all their foliage.

While double hollyhocks are usually the more popular, I prefer the singles. These are wonderfully varied and anyone who has not tried them should do so.

Hollyhock seed sown now will produce strong plants by the end of October. They can be planted in the fall or spring, but I have found spring the better season. There is an annual strain of hollyhocks well worthy of culture. The flowers are chiefly single or semi-double. They do not attain the height of the perennial type, but are excellent for the backs of herbaceous borders.

Hardy Larkspurs.

Hardy larkspurs are among the most beautiful as well as most popular of hardy garden plants. The colors, which are mainly varying shades of blue, are exquisite, and the plants are so hardy and possess such vigor that they will last for years, a transplanting once in three or four years, however, improving them. From seed sown in February we will soon have plants in flower. Seeds sown even as late as early July will give some bloom. All will make strong plants for fall or spring sale. It is well to buy separate packets of light and dark blue shades. There are many beautiful varieties offered separately, such as Belladonna, Queen Wilhelmina, King of Delphiniums, Lizzie, Duke of Connaught, etc., which come true to color. It is easy to work up a nice collection in this way.

The grandiflora or Chinensis type is of dwarf habit, with more finely divided foliage. These produce various shades of blue as well as pure white flowers. This type is best treated as a biennial. It will flower in three months from seed. The present is a good time to make a liberal sowing of seeds of hardy larkspurs.

The weather continues rainy and business rather dull. Stock is a little more plentiful than it was the first part of June. Gladioli are fine and asters and dahlias are beginning to come in; carnations are gone and good roses are scarce.

DUTCH LINER HELD EIGHT DAYS.

As indicating the attitude of the British government, as set forth in detail on page 13 of The Review for July 1, it developed last week that the Holland-America Line steamship Rotterdam, which sailed from Rotterdam June 20, had been held up for eight days, while the British authorities investigated the origin of portions of the cargo. The steamer was taken first to Deal and then to Avonmouth. The cargo contained no plants of Belgian origin, but the incident shows what would be likely to occur in the event of an attempt to bring over stock from the Ghent district. Among the 300 passengers detained with the boat were several Holland nurserymen on their way to the United States in quest of orders for fall shipment.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Little Rock, Ark.—June 28 Paul M. Palez filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States District court, the case being assigned to Referee Charles C. Waters, who appointed James A. Ginocchio, secretary of the Elks' Club, as receiver. The receiver has announced a sale of the store, stock, book accounts and all other assets at 409 Main street at noon July 10, although the first meeting of the creditors will not be held until July 12.

In his petition Mr. Palez gives his total liabilities as $8,096.33, of which $4,375 is secured by mortgage on real estate. He gives as his assets his retail flower store, valued at $1,500, and about 250 open accounts ranging from $1 to $20. Upon the accounts the petitioner said he could place no definite value. Life insurance policies amounting to $8,000 were listed, upon which loans have been made for amounts as large as could be secured.

Mr. Palez came to Little Rock sixteen years ago as an employee of J. W. Vestal & Son, in the course of time becoming their store manager and eventually succeeding to their downtown business, which for a time he conducted under the Vestal name, his own appearing as manager. June 1, 1913, the use of the Vestal name was discontinued and the business since has been known under the name of the proprietor, Paul M. Palez. For years the business prospered and Mr. Palez became widely known both in the city and in the trade. He took an active part in local politics and is a member of the city council. He was a large buyer in the Chicago market, where he was a frequent visitor. While considered erratic, his credit had been established by his practice of appearing with a quantity of new bank bills in uncut sheets, with which he squared up his indebtedness in person on each of his visits to the market. He has stated that he hopes to adjust his affairs to resume business soon.

Chatham, N. J.—Samuel Lum was declared a bankrupt in the Newark branch of the United States District court June 30 and his case was referred to Referee Atwood L. De Coster, of Newark, for administration. He made no defense to the petition which was filed against him. Lum owes his creditors $50,000, according to Corra N. Williams, who represents them in the proceedings. His assets include his equity in greenhouses at Chatham and a piece of vacant property on Main street. Lum has been reputed wealthy by people here, where he has resided for twenty years. Mr. Williams said that Lum kept no books and that it has therefore been impossible to find out his true financial condition. A mortgage of $6,700 on his property here was given by Lum in March to the T. B. Miller Coal Co., to satisfy an old debt. The property already had a mortgage of $15,000 on it. The petitioners in bankruptcy hold that the mortgage given in March was really a preferential payment, and they will seek to have the conveyance set aside.

KNOXVILLE FLORISTS PICNIC.

The Knoxville Florists' Society held its second annual picnic June 25, at Kinzel Springs, a summer resort about thirty miles out of Knoxville. A special train was chartered for the occasion and all florists' establishments were closed. The party was made up of the members of the society, their friends and relatives, and consisted of about 100 people; there were several guests, among whom were John Evans, of Richmond, Ind., and Gunnar Teilmann, Jr., of Johnson City, Tenn. A bountiful dinner was served and the day was thoroughly enjoyed. The greater part of the time was taken up by contests. The society made a ruling that all contestants having won a prize be barred from further contests. This made it possible for almost every one present to win a prize. Prizes were donated by Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y.; A. T. Boddington, New York; Joseph Freidman Co., New York; Harley Pottery Co., Nashville, Tenn.; Wertheimer Bros., New York; H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; A. L. THE SWEET PEA CONVENTION.

The seventh annual convention and exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society will be held at the Casino, Newport, R. I., July 15 and 16, having been postponed one week because of the backward season. The exhibition will be in coöperation with the Newport Horticultural Society and the Newport Garden Association. The annual business meeting will be opened at 3 p. m., July 15, with an adjourned meeting at 2 p. m., July 16. The following is the program:

Address of welcome.
President Morse's address.
Secretary Bunyard's report.
Prof. A. C. Beal's report on our trial grounds at Cornell University.
Treasurer Boddington's report.
Nomination of officers for 1915-1916.
Invitation for the next meeting place.
Lecture: "The Sweet Pea," by J. H. Dick.
Election of officers.
Vote on the next meeting place.
Addresses and discussions.
Question box.
Unfinished business.
Lecture: "Sweet Peas for Amateurs," by G. W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa.

HOW TO TREAT COMPETITORS.

hence, do not cheapen it or tarnish it by your littleness or unworthy act. Never cut your price solely to keep your competitor from making the sale. That is almost petty theft.

Tell the truth and expect it of your competitor. Never state, in order to make a sale, that an azalea or poinsettia or primrose will bloom all summer. That is lying, and your competitor may be honorable. These things are done. I have known clerks of competitors to tell customers theirs was the only flower store, when there was one almost across the street. You may sometimes make a sale by such misrepresentations, but a clear conscience is more than a few pennies.

Do not cheapen your goods by giving away a flower or corsage to almost everyone that enters your store, thus trying to buy their trade. There are times to give judiciously. Flowers have value. Neither the dry goods man nor the grocer nor the druggist continuously gives away his goods. Then why should you? Don't make yourself cheap, nor your stock common. Flowers have value and dignity, if I may use the word.

Mr. Kuhlmann's Rules.

In opening the discussion on Mr. Hannah's paper, H. H. Kuhlmann, Jr., of Houston, said:

"We all know that competition is the life of trade, no matter what kind of business it is, so the policy I find best is this: Forget that you have a competitor; forget that he exists. Don't go around and talk about him, as you will be the one to suffer in the long run. If at any time you have anything to say about him, speak good and forget his faults. If at any time a customer comes in and you are out of the article she desires, don't tell her that there is no more in town; tell her that your competitor has it and let her go to him—she will then come back to you next time. When you meet your competitor in company treat him as one of your best friends. If he insists on being treated in any other way, well, just take him to your club and buy him a good drink and a cigar, for you have decidedly the advantage of him."

Temple, Tex.—J. R. Boyd has sold the Temple Seed & Floral Co. to Hans Schroeder, proprietor of the Ferndale Greenhouses.

Twin Falls, Idaho.—The firm of Lundahl & Peterson is succeeded by the Twin Falls Floral Co., of which J. Lundahl is the proprietor. Mr. Peterson is out of the business.

should be given to direct advertising, as I feel we get more good out of this method than any other. The most essential thing is a good mailing list. Letters or literature should be well prepared and well written; not too much to say and to the point. I believe personal letters interest the customer more than stock folders. They feel there is something of a personal nature in the letter and will read it through.

Perhaps the best advertisement after all is a satisfied customer. When you spend your money for advertising, and get the customer to your store, by all means have him go away pleased. Let your motto be, "Satisfaction Must Be Yours."

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Canterbury Bells.

Canterbury bells make a glorious show in the garden at this season. It is rather late to sow seeds for securing good flowering plants a year hence. It pays to prick off the little seedlings into coldframes in well pulverized soil. Shade for a few days and protect from torrential rains. On cool, cloudy days transplant them, allowing a foot between the plants in the rows. If these little plants can go into the field before the end of July, they will make good crowns for potting up for forcing, or to use for bedding out. The call for this class of old-fashioned plants is constantly increasing and Canterbury bells are among the first favorites. The singles are far the best to grow, as their lighter flowers stand up with hardly any staking outdoors, and with few stakes in pots. The hose in hose, or calycanthema, type is handsome, but needs a lot of staking in pots and weighs down badly with rain outdoors. The doubles are much too heavy and far less decorative than the singles and hose in hose varieties.

Foxgloves.

Foxgloves are popular old-fashioned flowers now in season. They are good in solid beds, dotted in the herbaceous borders, in rockeries, or naturalized in the wild garden or in woodlands. In the latter location they will frequently seed and perpetuate themselves, and few flowers are more beautiful in the hardy garden at this season. It is not yet too late to make a sowing of these in a coldframe, as the plants make a rapid growth in late summer and fall. Ivory's spotted and gloxinia-flora are good strains. Sow the seeds broadcast and, as they are quite small, cover lightly; also, sow as thinly as possible. The seedlings should be transplanted just as soon as they can be handled, or they will soon spoil one another. Also, if left crowded in hot damp weather, whole patches are liable to damp off.

Hollyhocks.

Hollyhocks are among the most stately and showy of July-flowering hardy perennials. The rust which practically destroyed them a generation ago is now less in evidence, but it is not by any means absent. A spraying with Bordeaux mixture once a week, from May 1 until the flowers show color, has always kept my plants clean. Some never spray and still have clean plants. Others lose all their foliage,

While double hollyhocks are usually the more popular, I prefer the singles. These are wonderfully varied and anyone who has not tried them should do so.

Hollyhock seed sown now will produce strong plants by the end of October. They can be planted in the fall or spring, but I have found spring the better season. There is an annual strain of hollyhocks well worthy of culture. The flowers are chiefly single or semi double. They do not attain the height of the perennial type, but are excellent for the backs of herbaceous borders.

Hardy Larkspurs.

Hardy larkspurs are among the most beautiful as well as most popular of hardy garden plants. The colors, which are mainly varying shades of blue, are exquisite, and the plants are so hardy and possess such vigor that they will last for years, a transplanting once in three or four years, however, improving them. From seed sown in February we will soon have plants in flower. Seeds sown even as late as early July will give some bloom. All will make strong plants for fall or spring sale. It is well to buy separate packets of light and dark blue shades. There are many beautiful varieties offered separately, such as Belladonna, Queen Wilhelmina, King of Delphiniums, Lizzie, Duke of Connaught, etc., which come true to color. It is easy to work up a nice collection in this way.

The grandiflora or Chinensis type is of dwarf habit, with more finely divided foliage. These produce various shades of blue as well as pure white flowers. This type is best treated as a biennial. It will flower in three months from seed. The present is a good time to make a liberal sowing of seeds of hardy larkspurs.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

The weather continues rainy and business rather dull. Stock is a little more plentiful than it was the first part of June. Gladioli are fine and asters and dahlias are beginning to come in; carnations are gone and good roses are scarce.

Addison J. McNutt is the first of the Knoxville florists to cut Ophelia and Hoosier Beauty roses. These are fine and excellent sellers.

DUTCH LINER HELD EIGHT DAYS.

As indicating the attitude of the British government, as set forth in detail on page 13 of The Review for July 1, it developed last week that the Holland-America Line steamship Rotterdam, which sailed from Rotterdam June 20, had been held up for eight days, while the British authorities investigated the origin of portions of the cargo. The steamer was taken first to Deal and then to Avonmouth. The cargo contained no plants of Belgian origin, but the incident shows what would be likely to occur in the event of an attempt to bring over stock from the Ghent district. Among the 300 passengers detained with the boat were several Holland nurserymen on their way to the United States in quest of orders for fall shipment.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

The Market.

June business greatly exceeded that of the previous year. The conditions in general during the first half of June were exceptionally good. There were several elaborate wedding decorations. Funeral work is fairly good. The market has been flooded with carnations and roses, and by getting thousand lots the retailer could almost name his own price. Many of the flowers were disposed of by giving them to the hospitals. There has also been an oversupply of gladioli; they are particularly fine this year, with America in chief demand, although Mrs. Francis King has held its own. Greenhouse sweet peas are forced from the market by a much finer quality of the outdoor-grown stock. Private parties specialize every spring on outdoor peas and have found it profitable, but this year there are too many growers of peas; they have ruined the market and the flowers have been retailed as low as 10 cents per hundred. The roses and carnations are fairly good for this time of year. Outdoor roses are almost through blooming. In potted stock, the Boston and Whitmani ferns, gloxinias and tuberous begonias are in demand. Geraniums and other bedding plants sold well.

Various Notes.

During July and August, Salt Lake City will be visited by a number of florists on their way to the S. A. F. convention at the exposition in San Francisco. We have already been honored by a visit from Mr. Johnson, of the Pikes Peak Floral Co., Colorado Springs, Colo., and also from R. M. Greig, of Anaconda, Mont., on his way home from California.

F. Auerbach & Co., of Broadway and State street, handled all the old rose plants that the Miller Floral Co. took out in replanting. This way of disposing of the plants was found to be quite profitable.

Charles Soter is occupying a store just a few doors south of the Walker dry goods store while his other place in the Walker building is being fixed up. He will now have more room and another window for display.

R. E. Evans reports having made up a good number of flower boxes, and these, with the funeral work, have kept business alive.

It is reported that George Wray, of the Keith-O'Brien department store, will go out of business, as the Keith-O'Brien firm will soon close its doors.

Elizabeth Huth, of Ogden, reports one of the biggest decorations in her locality. June 22 the druggists held their grand banquet. In the afternoon the ladies met at tea in the new Berthana hall, where the tables were beautifully decorated with Killarney, American Beauty and Prima Donna roses. In the evening 200 people were entertained at the Hermitage hotel, in Ogden canyon, where Miss Huth made an elaborate display of pink and yellow roses and greens.

The annual outing of the Miller Floral Co. was held at the Lagoon July 3. A cordial invitation was extended to the Salt Lake and Ogden florists, who also participated in the program of sports. Prizes were awarded to all the leaders in the contests. The sports included swimming race, boat racing, a 100-yard dash, relay race, Derby race, baseball and various other games. The weather was fair and the annual was a grand success. O. F.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

E. J. Byam, Rome, N. Y., is planning to erect an office and show house to extend across the entire frontage of his place. He has a dairy farm, for the double purpose of utilizing the manure and supplying the Romans with high-grade lacteal fluid.

The Misses Humphrey, Rome, are much pleased with the season's business. Funeral work has been unusually heavy.

Henry Youell, president of the Syracuse Florists' Club and secretary of the Gladiolus Society, reports that the trade has had a busy spring. He says the exhibits of gladioli at Newport and Atlantic City in August will be the best ever.

The Hike-Allen Co., Cortland, N. Y., is growing fine crops of roses and vegetables in the new L. & B. houses. The houses will soon pay for themselves.

David Scott, Corfu, N. Y., believes one of the most important items is a good chimney stack. Not long since he built one, sixty feet high, circular, of concrete blocks, and is much pleased with the result in draft action. He prefers growing snapdragons from cuttings, as the main shoot is more vigorous and fewer laterals appear than on seedlings. Spencer sweet peas planted after Easter are producing finely, owing to the cool weather; they have a good sale just now. A superior strain of mignonette is also a steady seller. Considerable space is given to asters outdoors. Fall plowing is found preferable, the ground holding moisture better than it does when turned up in the spring.

Worcester, Mass.—The business of Midgley & Co. has been purchased by Hollis E. Pease, of Clinton.

Rockland, Mass.—Mrs. W. T. Wilson has leased her flower shop to Lyle Lothrop, and is moving to Brockton.

Southington, Conn.—John Oleson has leased the greenhouses of Francis Bros., which are fully stocked, and has opened business.

Roxbury, Mass.—Fire starting in the storage shed at the greenhouses of William C. Bowditch, at Warren and Georgia streets, scorched the rear of his office and salesroom, and spread to several other buildings near by. The cause of it is unknown.

Hartford, Conn.—A loss of approximately $10,000 was incurred June 28, when the large frame barn, greenhouses and garage at the market gardening establishment of Anders Christensen were burned. It was on the dividing line between Hartford and Wilson Station. The fire company could give no help on account of the lack of water. The loss is only partly covered by insurance.

W. C. Stroh, Attica, N. Y., is rebuilding part of his range and adding two houses, 16x150 feet, which is evidence of satisfactory conditions with him.

L. C. Stroh & Sons, Batavia, N. Y., are well pleased with trade conditions, and are debating the question of more glass, watching the market for a bargain.

Gustav Noack, Batavia, reports a late season, with the possibility of all salable stock disappearing in good time.

H. S. Baker, Warsaw, N. Y., says Mrs. C. W. Ward is a most profitable carnation. It does well in a heavy soil and with liberal feeding. The members of the Enchantress family also are fine.

August Schreiber, Hornell, is improving his range, and is much pleased with this, his third season's business.

Van Scoter & Sons, Bath, N. Y., have named their establishment the Home of Flowers, and, by handling first-class stock, are maintaining the appellation. W. M.

OBITUARY.

George W. Beears.

George W. Beears, of the firm of Beears & Palm, Reading, Pa., died June 27 of heart disease at the Reading hospital, at the age of 52. He had been ill for five weeks. Mr. Beears was born in Bethlehem, but had been a resident of Reading for forty years. He had been in the florists' business all his life in Reading. For many years he operated a retail business under his own name. In 1912 he took a partner into the business, changing the firm name to Beears & Palm.

He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Elsie Beears and Mrs. Mabel Stoeckel, and two brothers, Edgar H. Beears, of Reading, and Herbert Beears, of Philadelphia.

Springfield, Mass.—Frank J. Cartier has resigned his position as foreman at the Higgins greenhouses and has gone to Natick, Mass., where he has purchased a range of glass, land and dwelling. Mr. Cartier will carry on a retail and wholesale trade in cut flowers and potted plants.

Holyoke, Mass.—At the June meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club arrangements were made for the third annual flower show, which is to be held in Windsor hall the first week in November. The committee in charge consists of D. J. Gallivan, G. H. Sinclair and George Rackliffe, of Holyoke, and Mr. Downer, of Northampton.

Derry, N. H.—John C. Chase, of the Benjamin Chase Co., widely known in the trade as a manufacturer of plant labels, has gone to Coronado, Cal., for an indefinite stay. Mr. Chase has a daughter who lives there and it is hoped a surcease from business will restore his health. Mrs. Chase preceded him by several weeks. On his way out Mr. Chase attended the nurserymen's convention at Detroit.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

A hot wave added to the discouraging condition of the cut flower market as last week closed. There was little demand from any source, and the ice-boxes Saturday night, July 3, were crowded, with no relief possible until after the Monday holiday, all the wholesale and retail flower stores being practically closed.

The receipts of roses are immense. Even American Beauties were down to abnormal quotations. Some specials sold under $10 per hundred, and the average was quite low. The same may be said of all roses, many being sold in boxes, as they arrived. At present all roses are superb in quality.

Carnations were inclined to go to sleep Saturday, July 3. The best did not sell above $1.50. The peddlers took the week's left-overs at 25 cents per hundred. The shipments are growing lighter.

There remains little encouragement to the growers of orchids; the low rates of last week continue. Even the best Cattleya gigas sold under $20 per hundred.

There are few gardenias, and lilies do not advance, few of them touching $3 per hundred. Valley is steady and must be perfect to go above $2 per hundred. Sweet peas grow better. Some of the Spencer varieties are especially long-stemmed and beautiful. Gladioli are perfect, and asters are already here. There are the usual arrivals of daisies, feverfew, sweet williams, coreopsis and other seasonable flowers; some fine peony stock from cold storage, and bunches without number of Dorothy Perkins, Crimson Ramblers and others of the rambler family.

Various Notes.

R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., president of the American Dahlia Society, will lecture August 9 before the Garden Club of Southampton, L. I., and August 11 will leave for the convention at San Francisco.

Secretary Young will begin his trip to the coast Saturday, July 10. July 14 will be held the annual outing of the New York Florists' Club, at Witzel's grove, College Point. The boat leaves at 9:30, an hour earlier than usual. L. W. C. Tuthill is chairman of the committee.

Edwin Ancker, one of Traendly & Schenck's salesmen, left July 3 for Vermont for a two weeks' vacation. Frank Traendly and family will spend the summer at Mr. Traendly's country home, at Rowayton, Conn.

Secretary Bunyard has sent out the last of the prize schedules for the American Sweet Pea Society's Newport show; $2,000 in prizes are offered. The date of the convention has been changed to July 15 and 16. A large party from New York, including many gardeners and their secretary, M. C. Ebel, will make the trip by boat on the evening of July 14, after attending the outing of the New York Florists' Club.

George Siebrecht is spending his week ends with his parents at Chapqua. Samuel Woodrow and family are at Lake Mahopac.

The Plantlife Co. has removed its office to 417 East Nineteenth street.

Alfred Sheider, Max Schling's partner, and Mrs. Sheider will enjoy their vacation at Maine resorts during July.

The New York Florists' Bowling Club enjoyed a day's fishing and bowling July 1, at Canarsie, L. I.

S. Jacobs & Sons, of Brooklyn, have the contract for the erection of a greenhouse, 42½x100, at the top of C. C. Trepel's store at Eighty-ninth street and Broadway. Mr. Trepel and family are summering at Arverne. Adam Trepel will take his outing in Maine, his first vacation in fifteen years.

Barney Jacobs and his bride are spending their honeymoon in the Adirondacks.

Geo. M. Stumpp is much pleased with his enterprise at Southampton, L. I. He has purchased a handsome property there, and has an up-to-date flower shop.

Miss Conklin, H. E. Froment's book-keeper, has left for her annual month's holiday in the Catskills.

Fine freesia bulbs from California have just arrived for R. J. Irwin; also his pansy seed from over the sea.

The Market.

Market conditions are, considering the season, quite good. There seems to be a fair demand for all kinds of outside flowers. It is no trouble to dispose of all the good carnations we can get. Roses of good quality are rare unless shipped from the north.

June was a busy month, chiefly with weddings, and an exceptionally heavy run of funeral work.

Various Notes.

An elaborate decoration for the banquet at the Hotel Ansley tendered the incoming governor, Harris, and the retiring governor, Slaton, was executed by Wilson the Florist. The large, round table, for 200 covers, presented a striking appearance, with electrical fountains, miniature lakes and bridges, and tiny walks bordered with growing plants arranged in different designs.

The Lawrence Floral Co. reports an extra good business for June, away ahead of last year's.

The Atlanta Floral Co. has had some attractive window displays. The Saturday special sales certainly have been business getters.

Mr. Coursey, the grower of the West View Floral Co., is producing the finest roses and carnations coming into Atlanta.

The Nunnally Co. will move August 1 next door to its present location, which has been rented by the Valk Floral Co. Mr. Gresham, manager for the Valk Floral Co., and owner of the West View Floral Co., which is next door, can now look after his interests in both places to better advantage. There are four flower stores right together here, the West View Floral Co., the Valk Co., the Nunnally Co. and the Atlanta Floral Co.

Visitors last week were Howard Royer, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, and Frank McCabe, representing the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago.

Mainly About People

Green Bay, Wis.—Miss Amber Christopherson is a new employee at the store of the Meier-Schroeder Floral Co.

Durand, Ill.—Mary F. Fyler has discontinued her flower business, and will spend her time traveling for a while. She may resume business later.

Peoria, Ill.—Charles A. Loveridge, son of Charles Loveridge, broke his right arm near the wrist recently when cranking one of the delivery automobiles. The machine "kicked" the crank, which whirled from his grasp and struck his arm.

Reading, Pa.—H. B. Beears has secured the greenhouses at Rosedale formerly operated by his father, E. H. Beears, and will conduct the business under the name of the Rosedale Floral Co. Mr. Beears assisted his father at these greenhouses for many years.

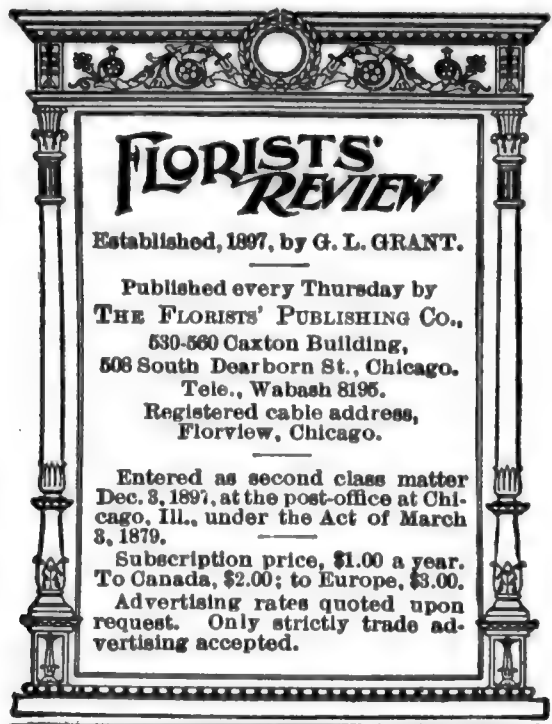

Anoka, Minn.—Victor Peterson, proprietor of the Anoka Greenhouse Co., recently suffered the fracture of his left arm, broken just below the shoulder by the blow of a falling plank while he was superintending the erection of a new greenhouse. Business has been excellent the whole month of June, far better than in June of last year.

Springfield, Mo.—C. H. Hollied resigned his position as manager of the Pierce Greenhouses, at Eldora, Ia., to accept the appointment of city landscape gardener here.

Marion, Ill.—S. C. Brendel, of Vernon, O., has been here for several weeks, overseeing the changing of the heating system and planning fall work at the Marion Greenhouses, established in 1901 and now conducted by James P. and Minnie L. Copeland.

Winchester, Ky.—Thomas A. Poole, of Poole & Purllant, is recovering from an illness which threatened to prove serious. He was not long ago seized suddenly with hemorrhages of the nose and was so exhausted that he fainted several times before he could be relieved.

Jacksonville, Ill.—William Heintz, present head of the business of Joseph Heintz & Sons, was married to Miss Maude McGinnis June 28. Although the event was expected sooner or later, it came as a surprise. The couple went to home of Dr. Post in the evening for the ceremony without the knowledge of their friends. They have taken up their residence at 1537 South Main street.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1915: President, Patrick Welch, Boston; vice-president, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Thirty-first annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., August 17 to 20, 1915.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

TINFOIL has suffered a twenty-five per cent advance in price as a result of the general advance in the cost of metals. Galvanized pots and buckets also have advanced sharply.

THE golden rule is a mighty fine one for the man selling plants. Would you be satisfied to receive, paying the same price, such stock as you are sending out? And how about the packing?

WHEN one compares the spring business of florists with what butchers, grocers, clothiers and other tradesmen have done in the last three months it makes the flower business look pretty good.

SUCCESS in the flower business is not a matter of rule. One man will become moderately rich where another will make only a living and a third will starve. It usually is easy to see the reasons for failure, but seldom the reasons for success.

THIS looks like a good time to stock up on palms. With a fair prospect that imports will be shut off as long as Germany occupies western Belgium, American growers will be justified in advancing their prices as the autumn approaches.

IF buyers would remember that no article can regularly be sold below its real worth they would save themselves many disappointments. The florist whose practice it is to quote below his competitors must take it out of the quality or he can not stay in business. The man who requires quality must be content to pay a price that commands quality.

PRES. WELCH WANTS COMPANY.

"I have just received a letter from Vice-President MacRorie requesting my presence in San Francisco a few days previous to the opening of the convention," writes President Patrick Welch, "and in view of that fact I shall be obliged to depart from Boston earlier than was at first anticipated. The following itinerary has been selected by me, and I would be glad indeed to have any members or their friends join with me."

The president's itinerary covers the days from August 4 to September 2. He will leave Boston via B. & A. at 10 a. m., August 4; Worcester, 11:45 a. m.; Springfield, 12:45 p. m.; Albany, 4:25 p. m., leaving Chicago at 10:30 a. m., August 7, via C. & N. W. R. R. The address of President Welch is 226 Devonshire street, Boston.

THE BRITISH EMBARGO.

By far the most important item of last week's news—and it appeared exclusively in The Review—was England's announcement of her intention to enforce the embargo against Belgian plants as of enemy origin. Publication of the correspondence between the State Department and the British government makes it clear that a change in the fortunes of war probably will be the only thing that will give us our usual supplies of azaleas, palms, tuberous begonias, etc., for next season.

The news was received with general interest, but with mixed feelings. "It's an ill wind that blows nobody good" and, while many a man is wondering what he will do to fill up a big hole in his business, others think they see a prospect for an unusually good season because of the elimination of competition. The problem presented by the situation concerns the growers more closely than it does the store men. If the retail store finds azaleas short, it pushes bulbous plants or miscellaneous cut flowers. The retailer need look no farther ahead than tomorrow. But the grower must plan months ahead. It is up to him to fill the gap if he has handled Belgian plants, or to gauge the effect on the demand for other articles.

WHAT PUMP TO USE?

Many growers are experimenting with cyanide of potassium as a spray. A number of inquiries have reached The Review with regard to the preparation of the solution and its application—particularly as to the kind of spray pump to use. Will readers who have obtained good results please send The Review exact directions for making the solution and give the name of the sprayer, together with the name and address of its manufacturer?

AMERICAN DAHLIA SOCIETY.

A conference of the officers of the American Dahlia Society and of the Horticultural Society of New York with the authorities of the Museum of Natural History has resulted in the fixing of the date for the first annual show of the first-named society for September 24 to 26. The Horticultural Society's council has appropriated $100 for premiums at the exhibition. The committees of the two organizations are now at work on plans for the show.

NEXT WEEK'S WEATHER.

Weekly weather forecast, issued by the U. S. Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C., for the week beginning Wednesday, July 7, 1915:

For the Region of the Great Lakes—The weather will be partly cloudy, with normal temperatures until the latter half of the week, when there will be showers with lower temperature.

For the Upper Mississippi Valley and Plains States — Moderately warm weather will prevail during the first three or four days, with widely scattered thundershowers; the latter half of the week will be fair and cooler.

For the Ohio Valley and Tennessee—Fair and moderately warm weather will prevail until about July 10, after which date there will be a short period of overcast weather, and probably showers. The weather will become fair and cooler toward the end of the week.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

The Market.

When viewed in the light of past experience, market conditions for the week preceding Independence day could not be termed unsatisfactory. To be sure, the holiday itself contributes practically nothing to the florists' business, and it is the one day in the year when members of the trade feel that they can forget business and join the throng of pleasure seekers. Yet, in spite of all this, there was a market and no inconsiderable amount of stock was moved.

Roses were in good supply everywhere, long-stemmed Russell being a little more in evidence than the demand would seem to warrant. Short and medium lengths, however, cleared nicely. Beauties met a fair demand, though not enough to take care of all receipts.

First-class carnations sold nearly as well as roses. Quite a fair quantity of red and white were used as table decorations in the various club and hotel dining rooms. In quality, carnations

THE FANCY PINK ROSE

THERE'S nothing short of American Beauty that can compare with Mrs. Russell—nothing in PINK that's in the same class. We know there will be an immense call for this wonderful rose as soon as the public gets acquainted with it, and we have prepared to supply it in quantity in all lengths, 10-inch to 36-inch. Order some today.

We also have large and fine supplies of Ophelia, Sunburst, Killarney Brilliant, Milady, Ward, Killarney and White Killarney.

Good Short Roses$15.00 per 1000

GIGANTEUM LILIES

The Giganteum Lily is the utility flower of summer. We have a large supply and recommend them to you as the handiest flower you can carry in stock—will keep several days and can be used for almost any kind of work.

SUMMER BEAUTIES

We are offering two fine crops—one that is just starting, mostly short stems; one that has been on since June and now is mostly nice long stems.

FANCY CARNATIONS

Our Carnations have a national reputation for quality, but they are better this year than we ever have seen them in July. YOU will like them.

LILY OF THE VALLEY

You should never be without Valley—WE never are. Why not place a standing order for regular shipments?

PEONIES

We still can supply the best quality in quantity.

CATTLEYAS

There are no finer Orchids and our supply is large.

EVERYTHING IN GREENS

None of our customers has had any difficulty getting all the good Ferns that were needed—we always have them. Also headquarters for Plumosus Sprays, Sprenger, Smilax, Galax, Adiantum, etc., etc.

are much better than they have been at this season for many years. A few asters are seen, but carnations are so good no one is looking for asters yet. Easter lilies have been in oversupply, as have many varieties of seasonable stock. Candidums are hard to move. Auratums have appeared. Sweet peas are abundant. Delphinium and coreopsis have been making a timid appeal, but it has not been heeded to a noticeable degree. Peonies are saved by the fact that only as much is taken from the freezer as the demand will justify. Greens moved in a lethargy nothing could disturb.

Demand for the week was more than usually susceptible to special inducements. And it was by virtue of this fact that stock was moved in sufficient volume to compensate for the generally prevailing low prices. That it did compensate, most of the larger houses are willing to concede after a comparison of the week's business with that of the same week in former years.

The Peony Situation.

There are several times as many peonies in cold storage as ever before at this date. A census July 3 showed fourteen lots in one warehouse and one at another. Several of the smaller lots have since been taken out, but of the larger ones only a small portion of the quantity stored has as yet been disposed of. The reason is that the crop was late and stock was still going into storage long after it usually begins coming out. There were fresh cut peonies on the market up to the end of June. After July 1 the call for peonies never is strong, unless other flowers are scarce or poor, and this year roses and carnations not only are not scarce, but are of better quality than ever before in July. Many of the peonies in storage are in a condition that affords little prospect for profitable sale. The waste from now on is certain to be large. Frequently the best prices of the season are obtained for the last of the crop, but naturally prices now are low and it looks as though this year the returns would steadily diminish from beginning to end of the season.

The Growers' Annual.

At the annual stockholders' meeting of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, held July 6, all but one of the old directors was reelected and there was no change made in the officers. They are as follows: President, E. H. Meuret; vice-president and treasurer, Charles McCauley; secretary, George C. Weiland; directors, Anton Then, Joseph Schoos, Fred Schramm, Rudolph Ellsworth and Fred Stielow; manager, Paul R. Klingsporn. The stockholders had many pleasant things to say of the skill with which Mr. Klingsporn had conducted the corporation's business affairs in the trying year covered by the report.

Picnic Committee Meets.

The picnic committee of the Chicago Florists' Club held a meeting in the Bismarck hotel the night of June 30. Among those present were W. J. Keimel, H. N. Bruns, Michael Fink, Paul Klingsporn and Tony Gabel. Practically all of the major arrangements for holding the picnic July 25 at St. Paul park, Morton Grove, Ill., have been completed. Remains now only to handle the minor details. The committee is particularly desirous of having it understood that all concessions will be handled by the club members. Trains will leave the Union station, Chicago, at 9:15 in the morning and at 12:40, 2:05, 3:05 and 5:15 in the afternoon. Various Notes.

Information has been received by Philip C. Schupp, of J. A. Budlong, to the effect that growers of valley pips in the Hamburg region have received orders from the government to plow up two-thirds of the land usually used for valley and sow it in wheat. As this country has usually been a market for one-third of the German grown pips, a shortage in this country will depend on whether or not the quantity grown can find its way to the American market. If it can, we are in line for the entire output, as England and the other allied nations are of necessity barred.

After a visit of several weeks with his friend, the Austrian consul at Charleston, S. C., Frank Fischer has located at Lemmel, Fla. A. T. Pyfer reports Mr. Fischer will grow asparagus to ship to Chicago. He is putting up lath houses with canvas sides and seedling plants with which to fill them have been started. It will be recalled that prior to the time the greenhouses were taken over by the Thompson concern, Mr. Fischer was superintendent for the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet.

At John Mangel's the proprietor says sales are running behind last year's record, but John Canger, right-hand man, comments that stock has been so cheap, recently, and most of the time during the season, that any retailer who does not try to undersell his com-

The iron fence in front of the Central Trust building is hung with Illinois self-watering boxes, the vines trained to hang through the fence, completely hiding the boxes. The idea is that of C. A. Wooley. The boxes were filled by Swain Nelson & Sons Co.

Finding that potted bulbs sell more readily when the pot is covered by a wicker container, the North Shore Floral Co. has designed a special basket

The Market.

Business conditions recently have been about all that could be desired. Commencement exercises at Racine College and the various public schools added their share of trade to an already satisfactory business for this time of the year. The demand for roses has been quite brisk. Russell leads in popular favor, with Sunburst and Ophelia as close seconds, while Milady as third is gaining every day. Hillingdon has not as yet established itself here, although yellow is a favorite color. The supply of roses is plentiful, but it is not more than equal to the demand.

Carnations, while moving fairly well, do not enjoy the same demand as roses. In quality, they are surprisingly good for the season. Sweet peas are holding up remarkably well and enjoy a brisk demand. So, too, does valley. Easter and calla lilies, on the other hand, are inclined to drag, as the popular demand these latter days seems to be for the brighter flowers. Seasonable stock of all kinds is in good demand.

Various Notes.

Louis Mohr, superintendent of Mound and Graceland cemeteries, is benching his mums. He says that though the planting and bedding season has been extremely backward, the outdoor stock is now making up for it under pressure of the hot weather. Mr. Mohr is busy laying out roads in the new Graceland cemetery.

Joseph Rehl, 617 Main street, is enjoying a good funeral work business. He reports a good trade in cut flowers, but a light one in plants.

The Racine Floral Co., 219 Sixth street, has been meeting a brisk wedding demand. According to C. Larson, R. A. Miller and his wife, the proprietors, are more than satisfied with the increase in business since the rebuilding of the store, which now compares favorably with any metropolitan stand.

L. C. Porter, 1403 West Sixth street, is enjoying a good season. He has the trade advantage of unusually pleasant surroundings. The grounds adjoining his greenhouse have been laid out in a delightful old-fashioned garden, with walks, trees, bits of lawn and a summer house perched on the edge of the bluff.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Late June weddings and graduations have resulted in considerable trade for Newark florists, and there has been some funeral work. Business is beginning to be quiet, however. Flowers continue to be plentiful and cheap as a rule. Carnations are keeping up fairly well for this time of the year, but no longer bring high prices either at wholesale or retail. Sweet peas are still called for a great deal, and there are abundant supplies of the outdoor varieties, but they are exceedingly cheap. Larkspur is becoming more abundant and is of excellent quality. There is a strong demand for roses of the finer varieties for wedding, funeral and hospital use. American Beauties have been popular, and bring good prices. Large quantities of rambler roses are sold, Dorothy Perkins being most in demand. They are cheap, however, because of their abundance, large-sized bunches being sold for 50 cents. Gladioli are weekly growing more abundant, and are of fine quality. A larger number of varieties have been seen in the market during the last week than before this season.

Various Notes.

Philips Bros., 938 Broad street, report that business was quite good during June.

J. F. Noll & Co., seedsmen, 115 Mulberry street, state that they had an excellent spring trade and have no reason at all to complain of dull business conditions. April business was a little slow, but June more than made up for the slackness then, and May was a good month.

Business was good during June at Penek's Floral Shop, 185 Market street. There was considerable demand for flowers for graduations and June weddings.

Because of the fact that a new building is to be erected on his present location, 654 Bergen street, James Roe will have to vacate the place August 1. He has not yet decided where he will locate permanently.

E. Brunner, Chancellor avenue, had a good spring, but business is quiet now. At present he is planting mums and other flowers for the fall trade.

Charles Mallard, Orange street, has had considerable funeral and wedding work during the last few weeks, and during the latter part of June he had a large number of commencement orders.

to the usual "take-it-easiness" of the summer season. On the other hand, the growers and greenhouse men are busy in clearing their houses for repairs and alterations, and in outdoor work. Roses and carnations are short and sweet peas practically gone.

Various Notes.

Joseph Leach has been drawn by the Pawtucket aldermen for petit jury duty in the Superior court.

Walter J. Sword, of Valley Falls, is enjoying a two weeks' fishing trip on Cape Cod.

Timothy L. O'Connor and family have taken quarters at the Mathewson House, Narragansett Pier, for the season.

Frederick C. Hoffman has added a Cadillac touring car to his garage. He is increasing his facilities and last week purchased an acre of land near his greenhouses.

Joseph Koppelman was a business visitor in Boston last week.

H. Howard Pepper, of the Melrose Garden Co., was an attendant at the fourteenth annual session of the Baptist Sunday school summer school at Narragansett Pier last week.

James B. Canning and family have opened their summer cottage at Highland Beach, on Narragansett Bay, for the season.

Plenty of rain, plenty of good growing weather, and a fair run of business tells the tale of the last two weeks here. There have been few seasons for years that have had a better and a more evenly distributed supply of rainfall. I am glad to note that there is a generally buoyant feeling creeping into all lines of business that I have not seen since the war broke out. This has been especially noticeable in the last few weeks.

though not in oversupply. They are selling reasonably well. Other things are on the scarce side.

Last week saw the finishing of the planting of chrysanthemums and carnations inside. There will be rather less space given to carnations this season than last, and perhaps roses will also be curtailed somewhat. There was clearly a surplus last year, and some of the growers are wisely deciding that this condition only spoils prices and ruins profits.

someone has a good field waiting his entrance here.

The outdoor sweet peas are holding up in quality remarkably well this season, possibly because of the abundance of rain and the comparatively cool weather. Sweet peas are not usually particularly successful outdoors here. Asters are also growing better than usual in the open this summer. Of late years they have been considered almost a failure in the open.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The delayed Fourth had a far-reaching influence on the market. Crackers were preferred to carnations; Roman candles sold better than roses. Whether it was a safe and sane, or a glorious, old-fashioned Fourth is not to be discussed here. It was a great national holiday, more generally observed in this city by the florists than any other holiday of the year. Some of the wholesale cut flower stores were closed; others were open for a little while in the morning. Many of the retail stores were closed, but most of them executed a few orders and then closed. The growers closed as nearly as they could. Everyone that possibly could was off; someone had to stay within reach of the place.

Under these conditions buying was light. There was a fair number of orders, but most of them were small. The supply of flowers greatly exceeded the demand. This was particularly true of short-stemmed roses and of sweet peas. Carnations show a wide range in quality. Some stock is excellent, fit to ship anywhere, while much the larger part is poor and unfit for shipping. Asters are coming in more freely in all colors; not fine, as yet, but summer is here and so are the asters. Gladioli are the most striking flowers in the market. There are lots of them now, southern, outdoor-grown. They bring about half the price of a fortnight ago, when the greenhouse-grown stock led. Gardenias are over. I saw a vase of calla lilies a few days ago, an extraordinary sight for July.

The End of the Season.

Everybody is closing up the year now. It is pretty safe to say that with most florists it has not been as satisfactory as the years that went before. When conditions are considered it has probably been better than could reasonably have been expected. Prices have been extremely low; production has been unusually large. It has generally been possible to find a market at some price. A business that has run ahead, or even held its own, in spite of the depressed business conditions of last fall, has done well.

Current Events.

There is a new name on the window of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. There have been just three names on the company's window in its fourteen years of business life. First, in a modest, inconspicuous position, as though it were a gentle reminder to the caller for whom to ask, were the names of R. C. Hayden and William J. Muth. Later, when Mr. Muth sought other pastures, Mr. Hayden's name remained alone. Now Mr. Hayden has decided to devote himself to his roses, so the name on the window is that of George Aeugle. Inside there is the atmosphere of a mart. People are buying and selling flowers; painters are at work. An alert young man tells you that his first day was encouraging. This is George Aeugle. He understands his business thoroughly, never gets rattled and is pleasant with everybody—well equipped, don't you think?

Paul Berkowitz received a letter July 3 from his partner, Harry Bayersdorfer, written at the Tor hotel, Kobe, Japan, June 9. It contained the plea verbatim of a jinrikisha boy in search of a steady job: "Me likee to drivay you always; you so lightee weightee." Relapsing into serious vein, Mr. Berkowitz said that it had been possible to furnish pretty nearly what was wanted in spite of the war up to the present time, but that now, with the British embargo on German goods going through neutral ports, it would be different unless some way can be found of bringing in the goods now awaiting transportation on contract. Just what effect Mr. Bayersdorfer's Japanese trip will have on the supply market will not be known for some time.

Samuel S. Pennock moved his family from Lansdowne, Pa., to Ocean City, N. J., July 7. His two sons are in camp.
Raymond Brunswick heralds the opening of a promising season by the announcement that the M. Rice Co. has the best selection of florists' supplies it has ever had, something to be proud of in view of the difficulties that had to be met and overcome.

Leo Niessen has returned from the shore, where he enjoyed the bathing and the music with his family, and a complete change for a few days.
William J. Young, Jr., and family are at their farms at Linfield, near Pottstown, Pa. Phil.
An 18-acre tract at Elmwood and Ashland avenues, Glen Olden, has been purchased by J. William Colflesh's Sons through Swope & Sons from Walter Webb, of West Chester. The land will be graded and improved by the construction of a range of greenhouses and a residence. Work will be begun as soon as the plans are completed.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Business last week was at a low ebb, as is usual just prior to and after the Fourth of July. There has been an oversupply of stock of all kinds and much of this necessarily finds its way to the trash heaps. It has been almost impossible to sell flowers on the streets and even the street men are complaining. There were a number of small flurries during which the sale of orchids, gardenias and lily of the valley was good, but the retailers purchase only such stock as they have absolute need for. The market on roses and carnations has been extremely draggy, even the better grades at little money hanging fire. Quantities of exceptionally fine Easter lilies are finding their way to Washington, but there is no sale for these and shipments are being discouraged. Outdoor sweet peas are of better quality. Fine gladioli are still to be had. The first of the season's dahlias were seen last week and a few short asters were offered. There is no call for calendulas.

Various Notes.

Albert E. Oliphant, who for more than thirty-three years was connected with the gardens and conservatories, and for several years had been foreman of the grounds around the White House, died last week after a long illness at his home at 1033 Eleventh street, northwest. Mr. Oliphant was about 54 years old.

Felipe Guasp, a native of Guam, and formerly employed by the Leo Niessen Co., was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary by Chief Justice Covington, and later placed on probation under a suspended sentence. Guasp was charged with forgery in connection with the ordering of flowers from the Philadelphia office of the company. He entered a plea of guilty.

The Bonnot Floral Shop, 188 Newark avenue, has supplied flowers for a number of weddings during the last few weeks and had considerable funeral work.

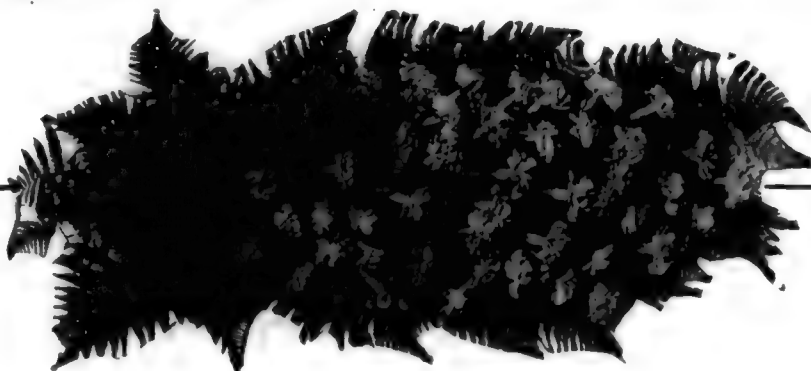

M. G. Mahoney, 286 First street, states that June was the best month since he has been in business. He had a number of weddings and a large quantity of funeral work.

Madden the Florist, 768 Bergen street, had a large wedding to supply flowers for last week, and has had a number of smaller ones recently.

May O'Driscoll, 553 Newark avenue, finds business a little quiet just now.

Business is good at Ripp's Floral Depot, 513 Communipaw avenue, but it is difficult to make collections. There has been considerable funeral work of late.

It was reported at the Jersey City branch of Peter Henderson & Co., on Arlington street, that business is getting quiet now, following the spring rush. The planting of chrysanthemums

The Market.

Business has begun to show the usual summer depression. The spring season has been with us longer than usual this year; the exceptionally cool weather has kept the stock in fine condition and has also kept the demand much greater than it otherwise would have been. The peony crop is gone entirely; it was more than satisfactory this year. The stock was good, and the season was longer than usual. Sweet peas are still being moved in large quantities, but are getting poorer every day. Roses are in large supply, and although the stock is fine and the sales are large, there has been a surplus of this stock for the last week. Carnations are exceptionally good for this time of year, and, despite the tremendous supply, are being moved well.

Various Notes.

An exceedingly pretty wedding was that of Gladys Ennis, only daughter of Mrs. Florence Ennis, of the Wisconsin Floral Co., and Dr. Thomas Howe, Wednesday morning, June 30, at St. John's Cathedral. The bride carried a bouquet of valley and orchids, with showers of the same flowers. Her veil was draped with valley. The maid of honor carried a French bouquet of Ward roses, yellow iris and forget-me-nots; the bridesmaids carried Ophelia roses and blue orchids. The hats of those taking part were decorated with natural flowers matching the bouquets they carried. The most notable feature was the decoration at the church, which consisted of about 5,000 flowers, including Easter lilies, peonies, bluebells, iris, snapdragons and carnations. A carpet of roses and peony petals stretched from the church door to the taxicabs at the curb. Dr. and Mrs. Howe left immediately for an extended wedding trip through the east. On their return they will go to Darlington, Wis., where the doctor has a large practice.

The Wisconsin Floral Co. will be under the management of M. H. Moore, of Los Angeles, assisted by Harry

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business is quiet. The supply of flowers is still large, but sales are not strong enough to take up the entire offerings. In roses, fine Beauties, Radiance, Taft, Ophelia, My Maryland and Maman Cochet may be had. Easter lilies are plentiful. The cut of auratums is sufficient for present needs. Rubrum lilies may also be had. Excellent sweet peas, valley and orchids are coming into the market. Relatively speaking, gladioli are having a better market than any of the other flowers now in season. The supply of greens is ample.

Club Meeting.

Max Rudolph will entertain the Cincinnati Florists' Society at his home in College Hill, July 12, when the annual meeting of the society will be held.

C. H. H.

COLUMBUS, O.

Trade is down to the summer basis now, with hardly anything doing outside of funeral work, which takes a little spurt now and then. There is plenty of stock of all kinds. Summer roses are plentiful, including Maryland, Ophelia, Kaiserin, Ward, etc.; the quality of all is first-class. Some good Beauties are also to be had, but trade in them is not heavy.

Carnations are small and soft; it will not be long till they are all thrown out for replanting. Valley has been in good demand, but is scarce. Sweet peas are a glut at times, and prices vary a great deal.

There is little on this market in the way of blooming plants. There seems to be a good demand for such stock, but everybody is out of everything in bloom. Ferns are selling quite well for porch work.

J. M.

FRANKFORT, IND.

The Market.

The dull summer season has set in. Except for funeral work, trade is exceedingly quiet. Roses are scarce. Sweet peas are plentiful and of good quality.

Carnation plants are above the average, on account of the seasonable weather. Benching will be earlier than usual this season with most of the growers.

Various Notes.

H. O. Meikel will add one greenhouse and a boiler shed this season. He is cutting some fine America and Augusta gladioli, indoor stock, and his large field plantings are coming on in good shape. He will have first-class stock soon; the season has been favorable, bringing plenty of rain.

F. E. Knabe reports a quite satisfactory spring trade. He is completely sold out of bedding stock. A well done bloom of Chrysanthemum William Turner, eight inches in diameter, now at the greenhouses, has brought considerable comment from visitors. It would be a credit to any grower in season.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Florists' Review,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.25 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received-----	$513.25
Less 20% allowed senders-----	102.60
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.65

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florist's business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,

F. H. Weber

The Market.

It has been a long time since the market was in so completely demoralized a condition as at present. With the passing of June and its complement of weddings, etc., the bottom seemed to drop completely out of business. To make matters worse, last week the first two days of July were wet, the rainfall being the phenomenal one of 5.36 inches. This restricted buying and, outside of funeral work, there is little doing. Roses have no stable value. Sales are made at $2.50 per thousand and a few fancy flowers go beyond $4 to $6 per hundred. American Beauties of the best quality are down to $10 and $15 per hundred. The output from this time on will diminish and a little better tone is then possible. Carnations are a drug; no one seems to want them. They must be fancy flowers to realize $1 per hundred. Many go at 25 to 50 cents per hundred. The quality for July is surprisingly good.

Sweet peas are probably the best selling flowers on the market. The quality of these is only moderate. Lilies, gladioli, snapdragons, marguerites, cornflowers and cattleyas are all hard to sell. Valley is also in a druggy condition. Gypsophila elegans and sweet sultans sell fairly well. Gardenias are scarce, but sufficient for the trifling demand.

the sweet pea show at Newport, R. I., until July 15 and 16, the field day of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club to that city has been postponed until July 15. A large number of reservations have already been made and an attendance of 100 seems probable.

Farquhar & Co. have a field of Lilium myriophyllum, or regale, which will be a wonderful sight in a few days. They are building a number of new pit greenhouses and a roomy storage house at their Dedham nurseries.

P. L. Carbone arrived in Italy on his annual business trip last week. He is well equipped with passports and does not anticipate any serious trouble in transacting his business. Business at the Boylston street store was good in June, and at the summer store at Hyannis has been splendid.

Hans J. Koehler, for a number of years one of the best known employees of Olmsted Bros., and in charge of their office in Brookline, left July 5 for Wyomissing, Pa., for a position with Bertrand H. Farr, the well known peony and iris specialist. Mr. Koehler will be much missed locally, where he is much respected. Few men have a better knowledge of plants and their needs, and he is bound to make a mark at Wyomissing.

Messrs. B. Freeman, Joseph White and M. Clancy, of Penn's staff, left July 3 for a vacation to be spent in Maine. I noted one of the large show windows at Penn's July 3 was artistically arranged with miniature Japanese gardens. Even with the passing of June, an immense business is done here. One morning's purchases of over 6,000 high-grade roses, not to mention other flowers, gives an idea of the quantity of flowers moved here during the dull season.

McAlpine Bros., of Exeter, N. H., are cutting a splendid crop of Ophelia, Taft and Black Beauty roses.

Herbert W. Clarke, a well known professional gardener at Manchester, Mass., who broke one of his legs a few days ago, is convalescing satisfactorily.

July 3 for a short vacation at Newport, R. I. They will stay until after the sweet pea show.

The W. W. Edgar Co. is cutting Gladiolus Pink Beauty in quantity. Bedding plants are cleaned out and only a small lot of hydrangeas in tubs is left.

John McFarland, of North Easton, is cutting a splendid lot of summer valley. He has 12,000 chrysanthemums benched, chiefly Bonaffon. He suffered no loss during a severe hail storm June 26, which did a lot of damage to a number of nearby greenhouses.

The T. J. Grey Co. moved into new, light and up-to-date quarters at 29 South Market street, Boston, July 1. They have also secured two roomy storage houses for grass seeds, fertilizers, etc., at 82 South Market street. The volume of seed business last season was away ahead of all previous records.

William Penn will start on a trans-continental trip August 5. He will visit many of the leading cities in the country, and will include the San Francisco and San Diego expositions, the Yellowstone park and Canadian Rockies. Mr. Penn will visit all the leading florists in cities visited and expects to get back to Boston September 20.

William C. Ward, of East Milton, is sending W. A. Hastings a splendid lot of outdoor sweet peas, as many as 11,000 daily.

John Barr, of South Natick, has purchased a 6-cylinder Chalmers car and intends to use it freely in sightseeing trips. His carnations in the field are making splendid growth since recent copious rains.

Eber Holmes, for a number of years the able manager of the Montrose Greenhouses, has severed his connection with that concern. Mr. Holmes is one of the best known rose growers in the east and his flowers have always been of fine quality. He has for years been a prominent worker for the American Rose Society. We shall be sorry to lose him and hope he may decide to enter business on his own account. He has

The annual picnic of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, July 22, promises to draw a record attendance. No picnic was held a year ago, owing to the S. A. F. convention picnic, which bad weather spoiled, and everyone is looking forward to the coming one with enthusiasm. W. N. C.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

A large number of weddings were crowded into the last few days of June, and among them were some good decorating jobs. June was a busy month and appears to have been quite satisfactory. Trade has slackened considerably now, however, and many of our best customers are leaving the city for their lakeside and country homes. Consequently the wholesale market is deplorably overstocked, but carnations were worked off at a tremendous cut in prices to the street venders. The supply of roses is much too heavy for the demands. The quality is exceptionally good, especially in Sunburst, Hadley, Ward and Kaiserin. Beauties are plentiful in all grades. Sweet peas are also good, but many go to waste. Orchids are fine, especially the more delicate shades, and sell fairly well. Gypsophila is plentiful and is used a great deal in corsage and bouquet work. Coreopsis and gaillardia sell slowly. There is a big supply of crimson and pink rambler roses on hand, as well as loads of June roses, but there is no particular call for them. Callas and Easter lilies continue plentiful. Valley is good and receives a fair demand. Some good outdoor hardy hydrangeas are in the stores, at reasonable prices. A few gloxinias, primulas and ferns complete the stock.

Various Notes.

The Maurer-Haap Co. reports good business, having cleared a larger amount of stock than ever this season. They are displaying some mammoth giant-flowering amaryllis, imported directly from the Azores.

sent out this week to hundreds of flo-

Business at the seed house of James Vick's Sons still is booming, although it has decreased to some extent. At their farm at Spencerport, N. Y., they have recently completed the planting of seventy-five acres of aster plants, which are doing finely. This is the largest planting that has been made by this firm. In addition to this, they have several acres of annuals, many of which are already in bloom. The firm is also figuring on a new greenhouse this season.

The uptown florists were all kept unusually busy for one of the largest funerals held in this city, that of the Rev. Wm. B. Wallace, June 29. A beautiful blanket was sent by J. B.
Keller Sons, an immense broken column by H. E. Wilson, a large standing

Salter Bros. have had a large star

the flower stores.

The Market.

The market last week was fine. The wholesale houses had an immense amount of good stock. Shipments coming from outside points arrived in excellent condition, especially roses. July 4, the one holiday in the year on which flowers lose their charm, was generally observed Monday, July 5, and the wholesalers and the majority of retailers closed their places at noon.

Daily receipts of almost everything seasonable were greatly in excess of the demand. The large supply of gladioli that came in daily upset the market completely. Field-grown stock filled all the available space in the five wholesale houses. Prime stock brought $3 per hundred, while $10 per thousand was asked for the lower grades. There was an abundance of sweet peas, which were hard to clean up at any price.
Carnations are showing good quality for this time of the year. Consignments of these have been large, and many are left after the morning sales are over. Asters are beginning to come in, and clean up nicely at fairly good prices, especially the first quality. The heavy supply of roses helped to swell an already flooded market. There are plenty of lilies, daisies, cornflowers, snapdragons, dahlias, coreopsis, phlox and candytuft.

The new crop of fancy ferns is in;
also, plenty of smilax, asparagus and other greens.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Weber, Sr., will leave July 15 on a trip to Williams Bay, Wis., where they will spend a month's vacation. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Weber, Jr., will spend the rest of the summer at the same place.

Miss Matilda Meinhardt will leave to this market. He is putting up some new houses this summer.

Albert Gumz, vice-president of the his place, as he will have a great many new varieties to show by that time.

Pierre Schneider, foreman for the G. Berning, is in charge of the place in the absence of Mr. Berning, who is on his wedding trip. Mr. Bruenig and his family will take a vacation trip when the boss returns.

Frank Weber, of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., says he regrets that he and his brother could not attend the meeting of the nurserymen at Detroit, owing to the death of their father.
They had planned to take a lengthy side trip after the convention.

The bouquets for the wedding of Miss Genevieve Clark, daughter of Champ
Clark, who married James McIlhany
Thomson, June 30, at Bowling Green, Mo., were the work of Mullanphy, Florists. The home decorations were furnished by local florists.

The rainfall in June was more than five inches in excess of normal and the average temperature was 72 degrees, according to the report issued by District Forecaster Hays. There were only eleven clear days during the month.

A number of special prizes have been offered by some of the local retailers for the Florists' Club's picnic. The five wholesale houses, the St. Louis Seed Co., the Schisler-Corneli Seed Co. and C. Young & Sons Co. have offered special prizes.

Alex. Siegel says he would be on his annual fishing trip now but for the fact that trade has been excellent up to July 1. He will wait until after the picnic, as he missed this event last year.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Trade has been somewhat quiet, now that commencement exercises are over. There was a good deal of funeral work last week, which made business seem normal. Summer flowers, such as foxgloves, larkspurs, snapdragons, gaillardias, coreopsis, cornflowers and calendulas, are seen in all the stores. The flower shops have put on a summer air; window displays consist of watertanks filled with pond lilies, cool-looking groups of palms and ferns, with as little artificial lighting as possible. Baskets of garden flowers are used in preference to roses and carnations for display and for social functions. Roses, especially Taft and Killarney Brilliant, are beginning to show the effects of warm weather. Carnations are smaller in size and pale in color. Candidum lilies are arriving in large quantities. Sweet peas are good and plentiful. The orchid sweet peas are getting poorer, on account of the warm weather. Harrisii lilies and valley are good in quality and quite abundant. Orchids are scarce.

Various Notes.

John G. Pickleman had a great deal of funeral work last week.

The Wm. F. Kasting Co. gave a buffet lunch, June 26, which their patrons enjoyed immensely.

Peter Stroh will have the entire month of July for his vacation.

The Colonial Flower Shop has opened its garden, in the rear of the store, for the inspection of its patrons. It is rectangular in form and has a pool of water in the center, with a path around the pool and leading to each end of the garden. Perennials are grouped in beds at the rear, and a pergola makes a picturesque background. Annuals are grouped in the side beds. Several trees here and there produce a checkered shade. In the store, attractive baskets of gaillardias, larkspurs and calendulas are artistically arranged. Mr. Kowalski reports that June trade was good.

J. H. Rebstock reports June business good. He recently purchased the store of Mrs. I. Staffinger, at 698 Swan street.

Harold Taylor, of Detroit, Mich., spent June 27 with his parents.

Jos. Sangster had a good graduation trade, but he thinks it was below the average of former years. He is going to rusticate in the country near by, instead of taking a long trip.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs.
Leon Neubeck, June 25.

John J. Plumtree, of Tidy & Co.,
Toronto, was a visitor here recently.
He says trade shows its summer lethargy in Toronto, now that nearly all the wealthy patrons have gone to their summer homes.

Some of the churches introduced a pretty custom in their Children's day exercises in June. Each child was given a geranium plant at the close of the exercises to take home and care for during the summer and bring back on Rally Sunday for the decorations.
Prizes will then be given to the children who have the best plants.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

A CONSENSUS of opinion makes the demand for French and Dutch bulbs this season off twenty per cent as compared with normal years.

THE change of name of the Ratekin Seed Co., of Shenandoah, Ia., to Ratekin Seed House, has been authorized. The capital stock is $75,000.

It is reported the German growers of valley pips were told by their government to reduce their acreage by two-thirds and to use the space for wheat.

THE Goodloe Seed Co., of Lexington, Ky., has been incorporated by G. Clay Goodloe, Helen Goodloe and W. C. Goodloe. The capital stock is fixed at $50,000.

THE bean crop is in bad shape as a result of the cold and the excessive rains. A large part of the crop that succeeded in getting out of the ground has turned yellow.

PAPERS changing the name of the firm of C. S. Brent, Inc., Lexington, Ky., to the C. S. Brent Seed Co., have been approved by the Kentucky secretary of state. Liability is fixed at $100,000.

WITH the shipping season at hand, the French bulb market is receiving special attention. There still is a divergence of opinion between Ollioules and New York; the syndicate prices seem higher than most buyers think conditions warrant.

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, INC., now is the title of Mr. Childs' business at Floral Park, N. Y., papers having been filed June 28. The incorporators are John Lewis Childs, Mary C. Childs and Vernon G. Childs, and the capital stock is $400,000.

It is reported that the J. C. Robinson Seed Co., of Rocky Ford, Colo., has already contracted for more than 400,000 pounds of vine seed for delivery next year. About half of this is in cucumbers, and the other half divided between watermelon and cantaloupe.

THE SLOAN Seed Co., Palo Alto, Cal., has received permission from the state corporation commission to issue its common stock to Frank C. Sloan in exchange for his going business, and to sell its preferred stock, 2,500 shares of the par value of $10 each, at par, to net the company not less than 90 cents on the dollar.

NATURALIZATION papers were taken out recently by John Medill Clark, secretary of the Leonard Seed Co. He has lived in Chicago since 1867, and thought he was a naturalized citizen, believing that his father had been naturalized before he reached his majority. A short time ago he learned his error, and applied for citizenship.

In the first suit brought to trial for damages as a result of the falling of the wall of the Missouri Athletic Club building on the building occupied by the St. Louis Seed Co., at St. Louis, Mo., March 17, 1914, the jury found the Boatmen's Bank, which owned the club building, not responsible for the accident. The plaintiff was a wrecker in the employ of the construction company at the time, and lost a leg and an arm. The bank

INCREASE

The desire for increase is inherent in all nature. It is the fundamental impulse of the universe. All human activities are based on the desire for increase—increase in something. When the desire to increase ceases, there's something wrong with the man. The normal desire for increased wealth is not an evil or a reprehensible thing; it is a desire for more abundant life; it is aspiration. Now, if you are a florist and want to increase your business and profits, push lilies. They are most appropriate for all occasions and, properly handled, will net big returns on the investment.

Not how cheap
but how good.

is reported to have previously settled out of court more than twenty cases growing out of the fire and falling wall.

THE Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Green Bay, Wis., recently acquired a 5-passenger touring car for business use.

PALM seeds to the value of $8,159 were among the imports passing through the New York custom house last week.

THE new U. S. Department of Agriculture Farmers' Bulletin No. 676, "Hard Clover Seed and Its Treatment in Hulling," tells of the difference between commercial clover seed and that gathered, hulled and cleaned by hand and also the relation of certain other factors to the character and size of the clover seed crop. It will be of interest to all studious dealers in grass seeds.

BODDINGTON'S TO INCORPORATE.

At a meeting of the creditors of Arthur T. Boddington, held July 1, it was unanimously resolved to incorporate. The statement of the business transacted during the last four months was sufficiently favorable to warrant these gentlemen in making the Arthur T. Boddington Co., Inc., a permanency under this new title. This incorporation will be without prejudice to the claims of the creditors; in fact, it was adopted for the purpose of safeguarding their interest.

C. W. Scott, chairman committee.

CHINESE SACRED LILY BULBS.

Consul Maynard, at Amoy, China, has sent to the Department of Commerce the following report on the narcissus bulb trade:

"The only article of export from this district to the mainland of the United States is the narcissus bulb. For many years large shipments were made during the summer months. As Amoy is the only source of supply of this particular variety of bulb, and the demand has been increasing, the planters have enjoyed great prosperity. There has been a sharp advance in prices each year, until in 1914 the growers held out for a price beyond a point that could be met by the buyers, and a complete deadlock resulted. Because both sides remained firm, the shipments in 1914 considerably decreased, and the bulk of the harvest was thrown away. A similar situation exists at present and there is little prospect of an agreement being reached. It is anticipated that there will be practically no shipments in 1915. Much smaller areas were planted, and it is doubtful if the shipments would be normal even if an agreement could be reached between the growers and buyers. The situation is unfortunate, since the planters are apparently ruining a business of great promise. The cost of growing the bulbs has not increased and there would still be a good profit at the price that ruled three or four years ago. The present prices are more than double that amount, and it is therefore difficult to understand the point of view of the farmers." E. H. P.

clinging their deals for next season's supplies. They all appear to be optimistic, both in regard to the prospects of good supplies and on the general outlook of the trade.

"The seedsmen have, after all, had quite a good time this season, and there seems no fear in their minds that stoppage of German supplies will affect them for next season. There is even this season an increase in the seed growing industry in this country, and when labor can better be spared there will without doubt be many more seed farms cropping up in suitable districts, while even small nurserymen will be well advised to pay more attention to small crops of choice seeds, both of flowers and vegetables."

CLOVER FROM ITALY.

Consul Demonet, at Florence, Italy, reports to the Department of Commerce that clover seed exports have been affected by American crops. He says:

"The exports of clover seed decreased from $840,259 in 1912 to only $33,734 in 1914. One of the largest concerns states, in answer to our inquiry as to the falling off, that it has been caused by the rigid regulations governing the importation of seeds into the United States, and that since seed must be shipped with the risk of being rejected at American ports Italian exporters refuse to sell. The rest seem to agree that the more abundant crops in the last two years in the United States have caused exports to fall off, and the reason is also advanced that heavy purchases made by central European countries at the outbreak of war raised prices so much that France and England, losing their usual market in central Europe, could undersell the Italians in the United States.

"As to alfalfa seed, covered under the same head as clover seed in the list of exports, it is stated that alfalfa seed from Turkestan has been imported into the United States via Hamburg, and that this seed, of inferior quality to Italian seed, has been underselling the latter in the American market."

BAD HAIRY VETCH.

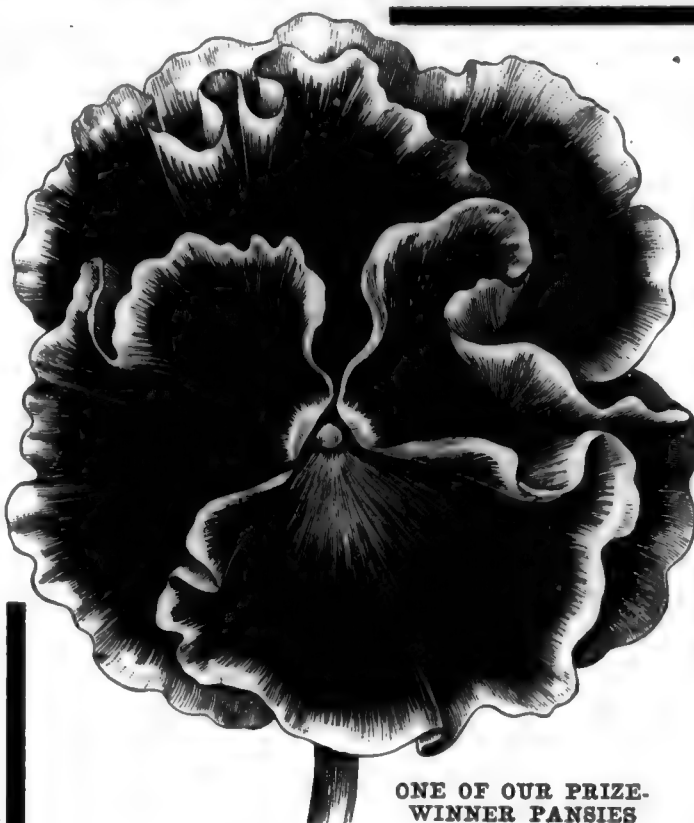

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has just published its findings on hairy vetch seed under the following paragraph in the act of Congress making appropriations for the department:

Where such samples [seeds of grasses, clover, or alfalfa secured in the open market] are found to be adulterated or misbranded, the results of the tests shall be published, together with the names of the persons by whom the seeds were offered for sale.

This was the third year in which the department has collected hairy vetch and there has been a marked reduction in the proportion of adulterated and misbranded seed found each year. In 1911, sixty-two per cent of the samples were either adulterated or misbranded; in 1912, fifty-three per cent, and in 1914, only twelve and one-half per cent. But the list for 1914 nevertheless contains the names of several well known seed houses. Evidently some outside force is needed to keep ordinarily careful men keyed up to the proper pitch.

PRINCESS*20—The New Upright Pansy

This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing, and extremely weather-proof, enduring many storms without damage to its flower. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture, on heavy stems carried well above the foliage. Attractive by the brilliancy of its colors.

500 Seeds 20c; 1000 Seeds 35c; 1/2 oz. $1.00; 1/4 oz. $2.00; 1 oz. $7.50.

- 24—Kenilworth Show—A fine strain.
- 38—Mme. Perret—Red and wine shades.
- 40—Zebra—Fine striped mixture.
- 42—Adonis—Light blue, white center.
- 44—Black—Almost coal black.
- 46—Black with bronze center.
- 48—Lord Beaconsfield—Purple shaded white.
- 50—Bronze—Beautiful bronze.
- 52—Bronze with yellow center.
- 54—Velvet Brown with yellow center.
- 56—Havana Brown.
- 58—Havana Brown with yellow center.
- 60—Cardinal—Curled, bright red, dark blotch.
- 62—Cecily—Steel blue, margined white.
- 64—Goliath—Large curled yellow, blotched.

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

22—KENILWORTH STRAIN—The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are from 3 1/2 to 4 inches; it is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.

26—KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE—Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower or for exhibition purposes, for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 inches long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.

28—MASTERPIECE—A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance, large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stems.

30—GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES—A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich velvety colors, reds are particularly conspicuous; the petals being distinctly marked with three or five large dark blotches.

32—GIANT PARISIAN—The flowers are of enormous size, and beautifully marked, mostly five dark blotches on white and yellow ground. An unusually showy mixture.

NEW SEED NOW READY

All sorts and mixtures, except the new Pansy Princess, are $5.00 per oz.; $1.25 per 1/4-oz.; 5000 seeds, $1.00; trade packet of 1000 seeds, 25c; any 5 pkts., $1.00. Please order by number.

- 66—Hero—Curled, deep blue shaded white.
- 68—Emp. William—Ultramarine blue, violet eye.

act of August 24, 1912. Under this act the collector of customs is required to forward for inspection samples of all seeds of alfalfa, Canadian bluegrass, Kentucky bluegrass, millet, orchard grass, rape, redtop, timothy, clover, meadow fescue and awnless brome-grass from all shipments received. Samples of shipments of other seeds enumerated in the act need be forwarded only when specifically requested by the Secretary of Agriculture. The regulations include a list of the weed seeds for which the importations are to be examined, and provide for the mode of procedure on the part of the collector of customs in forwarding the samples, handling the seeds, etc. Unsatisfactory shipments are either to be reclaimed or exported.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Morehead Manufacturing Co., Detroit, Mich.—"Morehead Back to Boiler System of Steam Drainage and Boiler Feeding," a well printed 64-page book, explaining the construction and operation of the different styles of Morehead tilting steam traps, designated as return, non-return, vacuum and condenser traps. By means of descriptions and illustrations, a clear idea is given as to the use of the devices under various conditions. At the end of the book is some useful information in tabulated form.

Everglade Nursery Co., Fort Myers, Fla.—A catalogue of special southern-grown stock, such as crotons, palms, other foliage and decorative plants, flowering plants, eucalypti and other trees, tropical fruits, vines, bulbous plants, ferns, etc.; sixteen pages, illustrated.

Chris. Reuter, New Orleans, La.—An illustrated catalogue of vegetable and farm seeds, strawberry plants, roses, insecticides, sprayers, seeders and other implements; forty-two pages and cover. Onions, lettuce and cabbage are treated as specialties, but great prominence is also given to oats and to such forage crops as alfalfa, clover, Sudan grass, etc.

Steele's Pansy Gardens, Portland, Ore.—An illustrated folder containing an announcement of a special reduction in the prices of Mastodon pansies. Both seeds and seedlings are included in the "cut-price offer."

R. H. Bath, Ltd., Wisbech, England—"Bath's Special Offer of Bulbs, to the Trade Only," an illustrated catalogue of daffodils, tulips and chionodoxas. By far the greatest prominence is given to daffodils, among which are listed half a dozen novelties "now offered to the trade," it is said, "for the first time."

Ant. C. Zvolanek, Lompoc, Cal.—List of winter-flowering orchid sweet peas and improved outdoor varieties. Besides the well-tried commercial sorts, about a dozen of the newer kinds are included, with this word of caution: "The seed crop of some of the novelties may be a failure; when ordering, state if you want them substituted with others in case of failure." In the same connection the booklet states: "We have probably many more novelties to offer, of which we will send a special list in September, providing the crop turns out well."

Samuel McGredy & Son, Portadown, Ireland—A 12-page list of new roses disseminated by this firm and by other growers, European and American. Only three new McGredy roses are announced for 1915, but these are listed as "the three greatest novelties of the century." An attached leaflet contains a statement of the discounts to the trade.

Oronogo Flower Gardens, Carthage, Mo.—"Flowers that Grow for Everybody," a list of tulips, narcissi, German irises, peonies and miscellaneous plants. Enclosed, also, is a supplementary or "special early-order" list of narcissi and tulips.
